Xmas Weather

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — The New Bedford Standard-Times noted recently that a U. S. Weather Bureau meteorologist in Grand Rapids, Mich., was stumped when a small boy phoned to inquire what the weather will be for Christmas.

Unwilling to give as easily as the weatherman, the Standard-Times took a long look into the past and came up with this forecast:

"Sunny (dispositions) and warm (hearts) in the morning, with intermittent precipitation (tears of joy) and scattered claps of thunder (laughter). Drifting clouds (for deliriously happy children to walk on) will patch the sky in the afternoon. The evening will be calm (even little boys get tired) and clear (clear memories, that is, of the most wonderful day of the year)."

"That's what every little boy wants for Christmas," the paper continued. "Who is to say it won't be so?"

CATHOLICS TO CONDUCT TALENT CONTESTS IN '58

The diocesan office of the Harrisburg Catholic Youth Organization announced today that a talent contest for high school juniors and seniors will be held at York Catholic High School on Sunday, January 26, at 2:30 p.m.

In each Catholic High School in in the diocese, a talent contest will be conducted. Each high school is allowed to enter two acts into the diocesan finals where winners from each high school will compete against one another for the diocesan championship.

In order to compete, a student must be from either the junior or senior class. Talent expression may take the form of singing, dancing, instrument playing, baton twirling, recitation, etc. Solo, duo, acts up to and including sextet groups are eligible to participate.

It was also announced that a talent contest open to every primary grade school will be conducted. In each pastor, the pastor, or an assistant pastor appointed by him, will be in charge of the parish competition. The primary grade competitors must be in at least the fifth grade. Each school "champion" must be determined by February 2. The following week, February 9, each parish winner will compete against all other school champions in a deanery contest. On February 23, all deanery finalists will compete to determine the best expression of talent in the diocese.

Priests named to conduct the deanery competitions for the primary grade school talent contest are: Rev. Vincent Smith, Harrisburg; Rev. Paul Miller, Steelton; Rev. Thomas McLernon, West Shore; Rev. Frederick Farace, Mt. Carmel; Rev. Claude Wiegand, York; Rev. Richard Hartnett, McSherrystown; Rev. Michael Homola, Lancaster; Rev. Charles Procopio, Bloomsburg; Rev. Wallace Sawdy, Shamokin; Rev. Mercurio Fregapane, Lebanon.

Episcopalians Plan Special Services

The Christmas Eve service at the Prince of Peace Episcopal Church will begin with the singing at the traditional carols at 11:30 p.m.

This will be followed by the ancient pageantry and Christmas liturgy with the procession of the choir, acolytes, censor bearer and clergy. The Holy Communion and Christmas message will follow. It is a Holy Day of obligation for the faithful, the Rev. Fr. J. Harold Mowen, rector, announced.

Later on Christmas Day there will be two services at 7 and 10 a.m. The public is invited to these services.

MISS TRIMMER, G. R. WAGAMAN WED ON SUNDAY

Miss Phyllis Nadine Trimmer, daughter of Mrs. Sarah C. Trimmer, E. York St., Biglerville, became the bride of Gary Richard Wagaman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wagaman, Aspers R. 1, Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Heidlersburg United Brethren Church, with the Rev. Arbe Dorsey officiating at the double-ring ceremony.

The altar was decorated with palms and red and white poinsettias.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Kenneth Trimmer, wore a ballerina-length gown of imported Chantilly lace and satin over hoops. The bodice had a sheer yoke with a Peter Pan collar trimmed with seed pearls and sequins and had long sleeves tapering over the wrists. She wore an elbow length veil attached to a headpiece, trimmed with seed pearls and sequins, and carried a white Bible with a white orchid and long streamers. Her jewelry consisted of a string of pearls with pearl teardrop earrings which was a gift from the groom.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Roy Rinker, Hampton, sister of the bride, wore a pink ballerina length strapless gown of lace over satin with a matching lace jacket. She wore a matching pink hat trimmed with a pink veil and sequins, matching pink mitts, and carried a colonial bouquet of mixed fall flowers.

Two Attendants

The bridal attendants, Miss Janet Kuhn, Biglerville R. 1, cousin of the groom, and Miss Carolyn Ketterman, Gettysburg, cousin of the bride, wore turquoise ballerina length gowns, similar to the matron of honor and had matching hats and mitts and carried a colonial bouquet of mixed fall flowers.

The best man was Kenneth

General Grant Heads Group For Civil War Observance

Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, grandson of President U. S. Grant and who was commander-in-chief of the Union Forces during the latter part of the Civil War, has been named chairman of the U. S. Commission heading up the centennial observance of the war of 1861 to 1865.

General Grant, a past national commander of the Sons of Union Veterans and a retired U. S. Army major general, is well known here. He has spoken here on several occasions. Most recently he was the principal speaker at the services dedicating the GAR monument (the Woolson statue) on the Battlefield in September 1956. Congressman William M. Tuck, a Virginian, and member of the commission, nominated General Grant at a meeting Friday in Washington, saying, "Gen. Grant is respected by people everywhere, both North and South."

Tuck told the commission that his family came from around Appomattox Court House, where Gen. Robert E. Lee surrended his Confederate Army of Northern Virginia to Union Gen. U. S. Grant on April 9, 1865.

The commission scheduled a "National Assembly" of civic, patriotic and historical groups for January 14 and 15 in the auditorium of the Department of Interior at Washington.

General Grant was authorized to appoint an executive committee to function until the next meeting of the commission January 13.

Conrad Wirth, director of the National Park Service, told the group that all Civil War battlefields will be in good condition for the centennial observances.

Congress failed to appropriate $100,000 for commission expenses. However, members of the commission said that it has been offered financial help by some organizations and individuals and did not anticipate any difficulty until Congress has time to appropriate funds.

Simpson Shop Readies Load Of Toys For Orphans; To Be DeliveredChristmasMorning

Eighty "big toys" and uncounted smaller toys are scheduled to leave here by truck for the Paradise Protectory Christmas morning for distribution to the 95 boys between the ages of 3 and 16 at the orphanage near Abbottstown.

Ernest H. Simpson, N. Fourth St. machine shop operator, who for the last six years has been in charge of the annual collection of toys for the youngsters, expressed his appreciation today to the many people and organizations who helped in donating toys, or in repairing repainting or otherwise helping to make them like new."

Some of the toys once belonged to the President's grandchildren. Mrs. John Eisenhower was among the many people from the area who drove to the Simpson Machine Shop to deliver used toys to be repaired and renovated for the Paradise children.

16 Large Bikes

Most of the toys received were in "very good shape," needing only a little paint, and possibly a few parts, to have them restored.

Simpson noted that the workmen were "very happy" to receive some toys that were pretty badly battered, but could be ripped apart to provide spare parts needed for other toys.

Some of the toys, such as 16 large bicycles, were practically rebuilt. All paint was sanded from the frames, wheels were rebuilt, new fenders and brake assemblies were placed and the bikes completely repainted. New tires were placed on all of the bicycles.

Train Young Mechanics

In addition numerous "spare parts" were refurbished to go along with the bikes for replacements during the year. The "spare parts" were painted and repaired for many of the other toys so that as damage occurs during the year, the damage can be repaired.

As part of the Christmas program Simpson and his crew train some of the older boys at the orphanage, who are mechanically inclined, to serve as mechanics to keep the toys in shape during the year.

Proud Of Express Wagons

Pride of the workmen who took part in the toy renovation program are ten new express wagons. Because donations were unusually plentiful this year in providing new tires, tubes, etc., and because sale of scrap metal by the machine shop brought in a larger sum than usual during the year — the money received from the sale of scrap goes into the Paradise Protectory toy fund also — Simpson and his helpers were able to construct what probably are the most outstanding express wagons any youngster will receive at Christmas.

Express wagons these days, Simpson observed, seemed to be made one size. They also, he noted, have

Will Evacuate 10,000 Dutch From Indonesia By February

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP)—Indonesian and Dutch officials joined forces here in an effort to evacuate more than 10,000 Dutch nationals before the end of January.

Local immigration authorities said they already had issued more than 10,000 exit visas and were processing others at the rate of 700 a day. Most of the 46,000 persons who make up Indonesia's Dutch colony are expected to quit the islands.

[illegible] Dutch nationals have [illegible] taking over Dutch interests and pressuring Dutch citizens to get out as part of the campaign to force the Netherlands to give up West New Guinea.

Organized evacuation of the Dutch got under way today from the main ports of Jakarta and Surabaya.

Arrangements have been made to set up a central booking office in Surabaya, Indonesia's second largest city, to speed evacuation. One ship was to leave Surabaya today, calling next at Jakarta, and five other sailings were announced for January.

Two British firms reported to the British Embassy that several ships owned by them had been commandeered by Indonesian army authorities. Several other British businessmen's houses were reported to have been posted with notices that they would become army property when vacated.

Trinity's Christmas Eve Service On WGET

The choral festival service marking the Nativity of Christ will be held at Trinity Lutheran Church of Christ Tuesday evening beginning at 11 p.m. The service will be held by candlelight. Special Christmas music will be rendered by the Senior Church choir.

The Gradual will be "Alleluia, Peace on Earth" a Slovak carol. The choir will sing the anthem "The Birthday of the King" by Neidlinger. The manger lullaby will be rendered by Donna Fissel "Let Me Rock Your Cradle, Mary" by Livingstone. The anthem at the offertory will be "The Song of the Magi" by Miles.

The organ prelude will consist of two numbers, "Christmas Eve" and "Gesu Bambino" by Yon. The postlude is "Puer Natus in Bethlehem" by Bach.

This service will be broadcast over station WGET.

FOOD BASKETS, OTHER GIFTS ARE SENT OUT BY R. C.

A lot of folk are going to have brighter Christmases because of the Adams County Red Cross and the charity that has been channeled through it from individuals and organizations in the county.

Last week the chapter secretary, Mrs. Peggy P. Hill, completed delivery of hundreds of gifts to veterans' and army hospitals in the area and the last few days have been devoted to helping needy folk in Gettysburg and Adams County.

Mrs. Hill said today that 46 food baskets have been provided through the Red Cross for needy families in the county. The most recent gifts of food baskets over the weekend came from Dr. and Mrs. Harry F. Baughman, the Gettysburg Riding Club which furnished two baskets and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Knouse. This morning Mrs. Ruth Hartzell gave the Red Cross a Christmas basket for a needy family.

The Red Cross has distributed more than 100 Christmas stockings to boys and girls in county orphanages and in needy homes. Forty eight of the stockings were provided by Wilmer Dracha, business manager for the Albert J. Lentz Post No. 202 of the American Legion. Thirty-eight more came from Dr. David L. Baker at the Rea and Derick store and Manager Paul Wakefield at the G. C. Murphy store sent in 15 more.

Ignatius Angelo from the Gettysburg Shoe Company donated shoes for children in a needy family and Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Sollenberger sent in quantities of new blankets, linens, and towels to be given to families in need of such materials.

Presbyterians Will Hold Service Tuesday

Special music and a meditation on "The Coming of Christ" by the Rev. Robert A. MacAskill, pastor, will highlight the Christmas Eve service to be held at 11 o'clock Tuesday evening in the local Presbyterian Church. Paul W. Grove is the choir director and Mrs. Robert Deardorff, the organist.

After Malling's "Christmas Eve" as the organ prelude, the congregation will sing "Hark the Herald Angels Sing." After the invocation, the choir will sing "Sleeps Judea Fair." Scripture readings from Isaiah and Matthew will follow interspersed with special choir numbers, "Lullaby for Christmas Eve" and "O Holy Night" with Mrs. Virginia Cordell singing the soprano solo in the latter.

After a scripture reading from Luke, the congregation will sing "O Little Town of Bethlehem" and "The Echo Carol." The Christmas prayer will be followed by "Jesu Bambino" by the choir with Mr. Grove singing the tenor solo. The meditation will follow and then the choir will sing "No Candle Was There and No Fire." The congregation will sing "Joy to the World" before the benediction and a silent prayer close the service.

LARRY J. KANE HURT IN CRASH; OTHER MISHAPS

Three persons were injured and damage totaled $975 in three auto accidents investigated by state police from the local sub-station Sunday.

Most seriously hurt was Larry J. Kane, 21, Biglerville R. 2, who was admitted to the Warner Hospital with deep lacerations of the scalp and chin and numerous bruises and abrasions of the body after his car crashed into a bridge abutment Sunday night at 7:25 o'clock. His condition was listed at the hospital today as "fair."

Police said Kane was driving west on the Lincoln Highway two miles west of here when his car ran off the highway and struck the abutment, causing $500 damage to the car. He was brought to the hospital by the Gettysburg Fire Department ambulance corps in the county ambulance. The officers said Kane was alone at the time of the crash.

Two Hurt Sunday Morning

Two persons were injured in a three-car accident 7½ miles south of here on the Emmitsburg Rd. at 10:20 o'clock Sunday morning.

The officers said Fred Love, 75, Mascot, Tenn., was driving north and slowed because a vehicle ahead of him was preparing to make a left turn. Kenneth L. Peck, 38, with the Royal Canadian Air Force, stationed in Manitoba, Canada, also driving north, was unable to slow quickly enough and his car struck the rear of the Love vehicle. Elizabeth Ann Kielar, 23, Washington, D. C., also driving north, crashed with her sedan into the rear of the Canadian auto.

Damage totaled $350. Mrs. Josephine Love, 72, wife of the driver of the first car, suffered a sprained back. Judith Sedor, 22, Glenlyon, a passenger in the Kielar car, had a laceration of the scalp. Both were brought to the hospital here by passing motorists.

Third Accident

No one was injured in the third crash which occurred at 3:30 o'clock Sunday morning one mile north of Fountaindale on the Sunshine Trail.

Police said Richard E. Haines, 30, Blue Ridge Summit, was driving west when he fell asleep and his car ran off the road into a parked car owned by Nancy Ferguson, Fountaindale. Damage was estimated at $50 to Haines' vehicle and $75 to the parked car.

Home Foundation Damaged By Auto

Concrete in the foundation of the home of John Staiger, 152 W. Middle St., was damaged slightly when struck by a car Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

According to the borough police report, Charles Thorn, Baltimore St., was driving at the intersection of W. Middle and Franklin St. when his car went out of control, struck and broke down a stop sign and then went up on the sidewalk and struck the side of the Staiger house.

The police report said Thorn planned to pay for the damage caused by his car and no investigation was made of the accident.

Four Are Treated At Warner Hospital

Xmas Weather

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — The New Bedford Standard-Times noted recently that a U. S. Weather Bureau meteorologist in Grand Rapids, Mich., was stumped when a small boy phoned to inquire what the weather will be for Christmas.

Unwilling to give as easily as the weatherman, the Standard-Times took a long look into the past and came up with this forecast:

"Sunny (dispositions) and warm (hearts) in the morning, with intermittent precipitation (tears of joy) and scattered claps of thunder (laughter). Drifting clouds (for deliriously happy children to walk on) will patch the sky in the afternoon. The evening will be calm (even little boys get tired) and clear (clear memories, that is, of the most wonderful day of the year)."

"That's what every little boy wants for Christmas," the paper continued. "Who is to say it won't be so?"

CATHOLICS TO CONDUCT TALENT CONTESTS IN '58

The diocesan office of the Harrisburg Catholic Youth Organization announced today that a talent contest for high school juniors and seniors will be held at York Catholic High School on Sunday, January 26, at 2:30 p.m.

In each Catholic High School in in the diocese, a talent contest will be conducted. Each high school is allowed to enter two acts into the diocesan finals where winners from each high school will compete against one another for the diocesan championship.

In order to compete, a student must be from either the junior or senior class. Talent expression may take the form of singing, dancing, instrument playing, baton twirling, recitation, etc. Solo, duo, acts up to and including sextet groups are eligible to participate.

It was also announced that a talent contest open to every primary grade school will be conducted. In each pastor, the pastor, or an assistant pastor appointed by him, will be in charge of the parish competition. The primary grade competitors must be in at least the fifth grade. Each school "champion" must be determined by February 2. The following week, February 9, each parish winner will compete against all other school champions in a deanery contest. On February 23, all deanery finalists will compete to determine the best expression of talent in the diocese.

Priests named to conduct the deanery competitions for the primary grade school talent contest are: Rev. Vincent Smith, Harrisburg; Rev. Paul Miller, Steelton; Rev. Thomas McLernon, West Shore; Rev. Frederick Farace, Mt. Carmel; Rev. Claude Wiegand, York; Rev. Richard Hartnett, McSherrystown; Rev. Michael Homola, Lancaster; Rev. Charles Procopio, Bloomsburg; Rev. Wallace Sawdy, Shamokin; Rev. Mercurio Fregapane, Lebanon.

Episcopalians Plan Special Services

The Christmas Eve service at the Prince of Peace Episcopal Church will begin with the singing at the traditional carols at 11:30 p.m.

This will be followed by the ancient pageantry and Christmas liturgy with the procession of the choir, acolytes, censor bearer and clergy. The Holy Communion and Christmas message will follow. It is a Holy Day of obligation for the faithful, the Rev. Fr. J. Harold Mowen, rector, announced.

Later on Christmas Day there will be two services at 7 and 10 a.m. The public is invited to these services.

MISS TRIMMER, G. R. WAGAMAN WED ON SUNDAY

Miss Phyllis Nadine Trimmer, daughter of Mrs. Sarah C. Trimmer, E. York St., Biglerville, became the bride of Gary Richard Wagaman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wagaman, Aspers R. 1, Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Heidlersburg United Brethren Church, with the Rev. Arbe Dorsey officiating at the double-ring ceremony.

The altar was decorated with palms and red and white poinsettias.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Kenneth Trimmer, wore a ballerina-length gown of imported Chantilly lace and satin over hoops. The bodice had a sheer yoke with a Peter Pan collar trimmed with seed pearls and sequins and had long sleeves tapering over the wrists. She wore an elbow length veil attached to a headpiece, trimmed with seed pearls and sequins, and carried a white Bible with a white orchid and long streamers. Her jewelry consisted of a string of pearls with pearl teardrop earrings which was a gift from the groom.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Roy Rinker, Hampton, sister of the bride, wore a pink ballerina length strapless gown of lace over satin with a matching lace jacket. She wore a matching pink hat trimmed with a pink veil and sequins, matching pink mitts, and carried a colonial bouquet of mixed fall flowers.

Two Attendants

The bridal attendants, Miss Janet Kuhn, Biglerville R. 1, cousin of the groom, and Miss Carolyn Ketterman, Gettysburg, cousin of the bride, wore turquoise ballerina length gowns, similar to the matron of honor and had matching hats and mitts and carried a colonial bouquet of mixed fall flowers.

The best man was Kenneth

General Grant Heads Group For Civil War Observance

Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, grandson of President U. S. Grant and who was commander-in-chief of the Union Forces during the latter part of the Civil War, has been named chairman of the .U S. Commission heading up the centennial observance of the war of 1661 to 1865.

General Grant, a past national commander of the Sons of Union Veterans and a retired U. S. Army major general, is well known here. He has spoken here on several occasions. Most recently he was the principal speaker at the services dedicating the GAR monument (the Woolson statue) on the Battlefield in September 1956. Congressman William M. Tuck, a Virginian, and member of the commission, nominated General Grant at a meeting Friday in Washington, saying, "Gen. Grant is respected by people everywhere, both North and South."

Tuck told the commission that his family came from around Appomattox Court House, where Gen. Robert E. Lee surrended his Confederate Army of Northern Virginia to Union Gen. U. S. Grant on April 9, 1865.

The commission scheduled a "National Assembly" of civic, patriotic and historical groups for January 14 and 15 in the auditorium of the Department of Interior at Washington.

General Grant was authorized to appoint an executive committee to function until the next meeting of the commission January 13.

Conrad Wirth, drector of the National Park Service, told the group that all Civil War battlefields will be in good condition for the centennial observances.

Congress failed to appropriate $100,000 for commission expenses. However, members of the commission said that it has been offered financial help by some organizations and individuals and did not anticipate any difficulty until Congress has time to appropriate funds.

Eighty "big toys" and uncounted smaller toys are scheduled to leave here by truck for the Paradise Protectory Christmas morning for distribution to the 95 boys between the ages of 3 and 16 at the orphanage near Abbottstown.

Ernest H. Simpson, N. Fourth St. machine shop operator, who for the last six years has been in charge of the annual collection of toys for the youngsters, expressed his appreciation today to the "many people and organizations who helped in donating toys, or in repairing repainting or otherwise helping to make them like new."

Some of the toys once belonged to the President's grandchildren. Mrs. John Eisenhower was among the many people from the area who drove to the Simpson Machine Shop to deliver used toys to be repaired and renovated for the Paradise children.

16 Large Bikes

Most of the toys received were in "very good shape," needing only a little paint, and possibly a few parts, to have them restored.

Simpson noted that the workmen were "very happy" to receive some toys that were pretty badly battered, but could be ripped apart to provide spare parts needed for other toys.

Some of the toys, such as 16 large bicycles, were practically rebuilt. All paint was sanded from the frames, wheels were rebuilt, new fenders and brake assemblies were placed and the bikes completely repainted. New tires were placed on all of the bicycles.

Train Young Mechanics

In addition numerous "spare parts" were refurbished to go along with the bikes for replacements during the year. The "spare parts" were painted and repaired for many of the other toys so that as damage occurs during the year, the damage can be repaired.

As part of the Christmas program Simpson and his crew train some of the older boys at the orphanage, who are mechanically inclined, to serve as mechanics to keep the toys in shape during the year.

Proud Of Express Wagons

Pride of the workmen who took part in the toy renovation program are ten new express wagons. Because donations were unusually plentiful this year in providing new tires, tubes, etc., and because sale of scrap metal by the machine shop brought in a larger sum than usual during the year — the money received from the sale of scrap goes into the Paradise Protectory toy fund also — Simpson and his helpers were able to construct what probably are the most outstanding express wagons any youngster will receive at Christmas.

Express wagons these days, Simpson observed, seemed to be made one size. They also, he noted, have

PARISIENNE, NAVAL OFFICER WED SATURDAY

Miss Jacqueline Pommier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pommier, Paris, France, was married at 11 o'clock Saturday morning to Lt. (j.g.) Thomas V. Banfield II, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. V. Banfield, Caledonia.

The Rev. Dr. Clarence A. Neal performed the ceremony in the Trinity Lutheran Church, Chambersburg. He was assisted by the groom's pastor, Rev. L. J. Kaufman, of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Fayetteville. A reception was held in the social room of the church.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore floor length gown patterned in ancient lace over Parisian taffeta. The Spencerian bodice had a flattering high neckline. The sleeves were long and fitted. The small crown to which her veil was attached was made of marquisette in the form of pink roses and tiny white blossoms.

She carried a muff of French velvet with a spray of flowers matching her head band.

Mrs. James W. Mackie, Wilmington, Del., sister of the groom, was the matron of honor. Her floor length aqua gown was styled with a Spencerian jacket and accordion pleated skirt over taf-

Will Evacuate 10,000 Dutch From Indonesia By February

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP)—Indonesian and Dutch officials joined forces today in an effort to evacuate more than 10,000 Dutch nationals before the end of January.

Local immigraton authorities said they already had issued more than 10,000 exit visas and were processing others at the rate of 700 a day. Most of the 46,000 persons who make up Indonesia's Dutch colony are expected to quit the islands.

More than 4,500 Dutch nationals have left since Indonesia began taking over Dutch interests and pressuring Dutch citizens to get out as part of the campaign to force the Netherlands to give up West New Guinea.

Organized evacuation of the Dutch got under way today from the main ports of Jakarta and Surabaya.

Arrangements have been made to set up a central booking office in Surabaya, Indonesia's second largest city, to speed evacuation. One ship was to leave Surabaya today, calling next at Jakarta, and five other sailings were announced for January.

Two British firms reported to the British Embassy that several houses owned by them had been commandeered by Indone. army authorities. Several other British businessmen's houses wer reported to have been posted with notics that they would become army property when vacated.

Trinity's Christmas Eve Service On WGET

The choral festival service marking the Nativity of Christ will be held at Trinity Lutheran Church of Christ Tuesday evening beginning at 11 p.m. The service will be held by candlelight. Special Christmas music will be rendered by the Senior Church choir.

The Gradual will be "Alleluia, Peace on Earth" a Slovak carol. The choir will sing the anthem "The Birthday of the King" by Neidlinger. The manger lullaby will be rendered by Donna Fissel "Let Me Rock Your Cradle, Mary" by Livingstone. The anthem at the offertory will be "The Song of the Magi" by Miles.

The organ prelude will consist of two numbers, "Christmas Eve" and "Gesu Bambino" by Yon. The postlude is "Puer Natus in Bethlehem" by Bach.

This service will be broadcast over station WGET.

FOOD BASKETS, OTHER GIFTS ARE SENT OUT BY R. C.

A lot of folk are going to have brighter Christmases because of the Adams County Red Cross and the charity that has been channeled through it from individuals and organizations in the county.

Last week the chapter secretary, Mrs. Peggy P. Hill, completed delivery of hundreds of gifts to veterans' and army hospitals in the area and the last few days have been devoted to helping needy folk in Gettysburg and Adams County.

Mrs. Hill said today that 46 food baskets have been provided through the Red Cross for needy families in the county. The most recent gifts of food baskets over the weekend came from Dr. and Mrs. Harry F. Baughman, the Gettysburg Riding Club which furnished two baskets and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Knouse. This morning Mrs. Ruth Hartzell gave the Red Cross a Christmas basket for a needy family.

The Red Cross has distributed more than 100 Christmas stockings to boys and girls in county orphanages and in needy homes. Forty eight of the stockings were provided by Wilmer Dracha, business manager for the Albert J. Lentz Post No. 202 of the American Legion. Thirty-eight more came from Dr. David L. Baker at the Rea and Derick store and Manager Paul Wakefield at the G. C. Murphy store sent in 15 more.

Ignatius Angelo from the Gettysburg Shoe Company donated shoes for children in a needy family and Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Sollenberger sent in quantities of new blankets, linens, and towels to be given to families in need of such materials.

Presbyterians Will Hold Service Tuesday

Special music and a meditation on "The Coming of Christ" by the Rev. Robert A. MacAskill, pastor, will highlight the Christmas Eve service to be held at 11 o'clock Tuesday evening in the local Presbyterian Church. Paul W. Grove is the choir director and Mrs. Robert Deardorff, the organist.

After Malling's "Christmas Eve" as the organ prelude, the congregation will sing "Hark the Herald Angels Sing." After the invocation, the choir will sing "Sleeps Judea Fair." Scripture readings from Isaiah and Matthew will follow interspersed with special choir numbers, "Lullaby for Christmas Eve" and "O Holy Night" with Mrs. Virginia Cordell singing the soprano solo in the latter.

After a scripture reading from Luke, the congregation will sing "O Little Town of Bethlehem" and "The Echo Carol." The Christmas prayer will be followed by "Jesu Bambino" by the choir with Mr. Grove singing the tenor solo. The meditation will follow and then the choir will sing "No Candle Was There and No Fire." The congregation will sing "Joy to the World" before the benediction and a silent prayer close the service.

LARRY J. KANE HURT IN CRASH; OTHER MISHAPS

Three persons were injured and damage totaled $975 in three auto accidents investigated by state police from the local sub-station Sunday.

Most seriously hurt was Larry J. Kane, 21, Biglerville R. 2, who was admitted to the Warner Hospital with deep lacerations of the scalp and chin and numerous bruises and abrasions of the body after his car crashed into a bridge abutment Sunday night at 7:25 o'clock. His condition was listed at the hospital today as "fair."

Police said Kane was driving west on the Lincoln Highway two miles west of here when his car ran off the highway and struck the abutment, causing $500 damage to the car. He was brought to the hospital by the Gettysburg Fire Department ambulance corps in the county ambulance. The officers said Kane was alone at the time of the crash.

Two Hurt Sunday Morning

Two persons were injured in a three-car accident 7½ miles south of here on the Emmitsburg Rd. at 10:20 o'clock Sunday morning.

The officers said Fred Love, 75, Mascot, Tenn., was driving north and slowed because a vehicle ahead of him was preparing to make a left turn. Kenneth L. Peck, 38, with the Royal Canadian Air Force, stationed in Manitoba, Canada, also driving north, was unable to slow quickly enough and his car struck the rear of the Love vehicle. Elizabeth Ann Kielar, 23, Washington, D. C., also driving north, crashed with her sedan into the rear of the Canadian auto.

Damage totaled $350. Mrs. Josephine Love, 72, wife of the driver of the first car, suffered a sprained back. Judith Sedor, 22, Glenlyon, a passenger in the Kielar car, had a laceration of the scalp. Both were brought to the hospital here by passing motorists.

Third Accident

No one was injured in the third crash which occurred at 3:30 o'clock Sunday morning one mile north of Fountaindale on the Sunshine Trail.

Police said Richard E. Haines, 30, Blue Ridge Summit, was driving west when he fell asleep and his car ran off the road into a parked car owned by Nancy Ferguson, Fountaindale. Damage was estimated at $50 to Haines' vehicle and $75 to the parked car.

Home Foundation Damaged By Auto

Concrete in the foundation of the home of John Staiger, 152 W. Middle St., was damaged slightly when struck by a car Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

According to the borough police report, Charles Thorn, Baltimore St., was driving at the intersection of W. Middle and Franklin St. when his car went out of control, struck and broke down a stop sign and then went up on the sidewalk and struck the side of the Staiger house.

The police report said Thorn planned to pay for the damage caused by his car and no investigation was made of the accident.

Four Are Treated At Warner Hospital

Rickie Trivitt, 1, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell Trivitt, Hanover, was treated at the Warner Hospital Sunday for second degree burns of the left upper arm and left ankle received from spilled hot coffee

CROSSED WIRES RENEW HIS FAITH IN CHRISTMAS

CHICO, Calif. (AP) — Seventy-one-year-old William A. Gardenhire told a lot of children the other evening that he wasn't Santa Claus. Now he's sorry he did.

He had just sat down to watch a boxing match on television when his phone rang. A child's voice said:

"Hello, Santa Claus?"

Gardenhire said no, he wasn't Santa Claus and the child obviously was disappointed.

His phone continued to ring and ring, each tiny voice asking the same question.

"Hello, Santa Claus?"

Wires Were Crossed

Gardenhire suspecting a prank, inquired of the telephone company.

"Why are all the kids calling me 'Santa?'"

A check revealed Gardenhire's line had become crossed with one the clever Junior Chamber of Commerce was using for its annual project of taking calls from tots who wanted to talk with Santa Claus.

A company official apologized

UNCONSCIOUS FOR 6 MONTHS GIRL, 12, TALKS

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A 12-year-old San Diego, Calif., girl, unconscious for nearly six months, gave her mother a Christmas present early. She spoke.

Her first word was "Mama." Mrs. Joseph B. Schow cried softly with joy.

It was July 1 at a swimming pool in Escondido, a suburb of San Diego, that young Maurine nearly drowned. She was pulled from the water after several minutes—some thought, at the time, close to 20 minutes.

Stayed Unconscious

She was revived—that is, she started breathing again. But her brain had been deprived of oxygen for a critical period. The brain cannot stand lack of oxygen for very long.

Maurine was unconscious, and she stayed that way. The Schows used to live in Utah. The family arranged to have her flown to the Latterday Saints Primary Hospital here in August.

Mrs. Schow stayed at her daughter's bedside. Occasionally Maurine's eyes opened. But there was no sound of her voice, no apparent recognition—until about two weeks ago.

Full Recovery Possible

At that time, Maurine did recognize her mother. She did speak. And the first word was "Mama."

Doctors say Maurine may be able to become completely rehabilitated. In the past few days she was able to sit in a wheelchair for periods as long as two hours.

The rehabilitation period may be long, the doctors say, perhaps years.

Mrs. Schow is giving Maurine her Christmas present, too. The two entrained for home last night, scheduled to arrive in the morning at Los Angeles where Maurine's father and 10-year-old sister, Sharon, were to welcome them home in heart-warming Christmas happiness.

Some specialty food shops stock canned lychee nuts. These are unusual and delicious when chilled and served for dessert. Because the canned lychees are almost white in color, it's a good idea to add orange sections or some other bright fruit to them.

Garddenhire reflected, then wrote to the editor of the Chico Enterprise Record:

"It has ben many years since two little arms were around my neck and a trusting voice confided to me all the things he wanted me to get him for Christmas and this experience brought it all vividly to mind.

"If we, as adults, had even a fraction of the faith and trust in God that these innocent children have in Santa Claus, there would never be any need for armies or navies and we would need never fear atom bombs, H-bombs or Sputniks.

Renewed His Faith

"The greatest man who ever set foot on this earth said, 'Who shall offend one of these little ones who believe in me, it were better for him that a mill stone were hanged about his neck and that he would drown in the depths of the sea.'

"I want to apologize to the children for not being Santa Claus but most of all I want to thank them for renewing my faith in God.

"Thank you and a Merry Christmas to you all."

IN APPRECIATION

1957 completes ten years that we have been in business on Carlisle Street, Gettysburg. First, where the Varsity Diner is located and now across the street at our new and enlarged location. During this time, we have sold hundreds of used cars.

We believe that customer satisfaction has been our best advertisement. Most sales are now made to people whom we have dealt with before. We are proud of this fact.

The confidence you place in us by buying a used car has always been our greatest concern, and we promise to warrant that confidence by continuing, as in the past, to never misrepresent a car, or do misleading advertising, and by always trying to have the best quality used cars available, at the lowest possible prices.

Many, many, thanks for your patronage. We wish you all a HAPPY HOLIDAY SEASON.

ROAR WELCOME FOR NASSER AT OLD PORT SAID

PORT SAID, Egypt (AP) — Port Said roared a welcome to President Nasser at celebrations of the first anniversary of the British-French withdrawal from Egyptian soil.

Nasser arrived in a special train to a cheering reception from thousands of Port Said citizens.

With War Minister Maj. General Abdel Hakim Amer and all the Cabinet ministers, Nasser reviewed a parade—chiefly of Soviet military equipment.

Public Barred From Station

Seventy representatives from the Soviet Union, Red China, North Korea, North Viet Nam and Outer Mongolia arrived from Moscow yesterday.

The public was barred from the railway station when Nasser arrived. Crowds waited outside.

Soldiers and police lined Nasser's route in the city.

Nasser went to Port Said Cemetery to lay the cornerstone of an "unknown marty's memorial." In Egypt, Port Said gained a reputation as the nation's "Stalingrad" for its resistance to the British-French attack.

In another ceremony Nasser presented a special red and gold Port Said flag to the city, and raised it himself.

U. N. SECRETARY VISITING GAZA

GAZA (AP)—U.N. Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold arrived here today for a Christmas visit to U.N. Emergency Force troops along the Egyptian-Israeli frontier. He will confer later with Egyptian President Nasser on Suez Canal problems.

Hammarskjold was accompanied aboard the U.N. special plane by the UNEF commander, Lt. Gen. E.L.M. Burns. They set out at once on a tour of U.N. military contingents.

With Nasser he is expected to discuss a surcharge on canal traffic to repay U.N. members the eight million dollars they put up to clear the waterway after the Suez invasion and also arrangements to compensate stockholders of the old Suez Canal Co., whose Egyptian properties Nasser seized in 1956.

The U.N. Assembly approved Hammarskjold's recommendation for a 3 per cent surcharge on canal traffic to pay for the clearance but Egypt so far has not approved the added toll.

Worley Announces He'll Be Candidate

Assemblyman Francis Worley picked today, his 44th birthday anniversary, to announce he is a candidate for the Republican nomination for re-election as the county's representative in the General Assembly at Harrisburg.

His seniority in the House at Harrisburg has brought Adams County its first chairmanship of a standing House committee in 82 years. E. W. Stahle, representative from Adams County in 1875, held the last chairmanship for this county. He was chairman of the Committee of Printing. Worley this year was named chairman of the Committee on Aeronautics. He is also a ranking member of the Committee on Agriculture and Dairy Industry.

Worley holds a Master's degree in law from George Washington University and an A.B. in government from Penn State. He is a member of the bars of the U.S. Supreme Court and the federal courts in Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia.

PAYROLL TAX TO BE RAISED

By LEONARD A. UNGER

HARRISBURG (AP) — The State Bureau of Employment Security said today that employer payroll taxes to the Unemployment Compensation Fund will be increased by about 40 million dollars in 1958.

Executive Director John F. Adams said the employer tax rate will go up automatically Jan. 1 because the fund will drop below the so-called peril point of 350 milion dollars tomorrow.

"My estimate is that the fund will fall under 350 million dollars tomorrow, Dec. 24, Dr. Adams tod a newsman.

The Unemployment Compensation Fund was created for payment of jobless benefits to unemployed workers.

The law provides that when the fund dips below 350 millions, the rate of employer taxes goes up automatically to build up the fund for the following year.

Dr. Adams said the present tax rate of an average of 1.6 per cent of total payroll will jump to an average of about 2.2 per cent for 1958.

The range of payroll levies is 0.8 per cent to 2.7 per cent depending on labor turnover in a particular firm.

ACCUSE FIRM OF FALSE CLAIM

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) today charged the Aluminum Cooking Utensil Co. Inc., of New Kensington, Pa., with what it said was misrepresenting the advantages of using "wear-ever" cookware.

The commission complaint, alleging violation of the FTC act, charges that salesmen for the company make what the FTC said are false claims as to the alleged superiority of Wear-Ever over competitive products.

The complaint describes as false the claim it says the company makes that less food is required to satisfy hunger when War-Ever utensils are used.

In addition, the complaint charges the advertising department of Wear-Ever-cookware does not sell to selected customers as the demonstrators claim.

Th company has 30 days in which to file an answer to the complaint A hearing is set for Feb. 12 at Pittsburgh before an FTC examiner.

WOMAN KILLED IN 5-CAR CRASH

PERRYVILLE, Md. (AP)—A Pennsylvania woman was killed last night in a five-car accident on U. S. 40 near here.

Mrs. Anna H. Allen, 40, , of Bridgeport R. 1, Pa., was killed in the accident. Her husband, Robert K., was admitted to Harford Memorial Hospital in Havre e Grace with possible internal injuries.

Eight others received minor injuries in the accident.

State trooper Wiley D. Fields said the accident occurred when an unidentified car sped onto the highway in front of a line of traffic. He sai the driver of the first car in the line of traffic braked quickly causing three other vehicles to pile up behind him. The fifth vehicle was stopped at the side of the highway and was struck by one of the careening cars.

Speeding Airman Admits Burglaries

DENVER (AP)—Police arrested a 17-year-old airman for speeding yesterday and said he later admitted theft of more than $10,000 in jewelry store burglaries.

Detectives Carl Brandt and Merle Huttenhow said they found the loot in an apartment rented by Danny G. Sheurick of Harrisburg, Pa., stationed at Lowry Air Force Base here.

The detectives said the jewelry, including a diamond ring valued at $3,600, had been stolen from two Denver firms. Sheurick was held in city jail without charge.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force said today it has ordered manufacture of a jet bomber capable of flying more than 2,000 miles an hour for long distances.

A spokesman said it is an arrangement for North American Aviation to produce prototype planes looking well ahead in development, but not yet a contract for quantity production.

GEN. CHENNAULT SUFFERING FROM CANCER OF LUNG

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP) — Retired Maj Gen. Claire L. Chennault, leader of the World War II Flying Tigers, disclosed today that he is suffering from cancer of the lung.

The 67-year-old U.S. military aviation pioneer told a press conference a tumor was removed from his left lung in August 1956. But he said the malignancy returned and no further operation was possible.

He looked tired and haggard. His voice was almost a whisper, but he blamed that on a cold.

Chennault organized the Flying Tigers, an outfit of American fliers, to fight with Chiang Kai-shek's forces before the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor. After America entered the war, the outfit was absorbed into the 14th Air Force and Chennault became its commander.

Has Chinese Wife

He now is chairman of the Board of Directors of Civil Air Transport, the Far Eastern airline he founded in Shanghai 11 years ago. He arrived in Formosa 10 days ago on CAT business, accompanied by his 34-year-old Chinese-born second wife.

Chennault said he plans to return to the United States Jan. 10.

He said that in 1954 he tried to organize an international air force to fight communism, but the U.S. government "decided it was not wise to have such an organization as it might provoke the Communists into all-out war." He added he felt such an outfit should still be organized under U.S. sponsorship because he felt it would deter the Reds from starting small-scale local wars.

PARISIENNE

feta. The flowerlets of her bandeau matched her gown. She carried a colonial bouquet of white roses, baby's breath and aqua-tinted carnations. Miss Joyce Ann Kendlehart, Gettysburg, sang "I Love You Truly," "Ave Maria," "The Lord's Prayer.

Honorary Attendants

Lt. (jg.) Richard Leslie, Santa Cruz, Calif., was best man. The honorary attendants were Lt. Cmdr. Elmer H. Kiehl, captain of the USS Bergal, and Lt. Charles Rauch, executive officer of the Bergall. The ushers were Lt. (j.g.) E. B. Caraway, and Lt. (j.g.) John Wild. All officers are stationed on submarines out of New London, Connecticuet. The tradition of a military wedding was observed when the military attendants arched their swords over the heads of the bride and groom as they left the church.

The bride was an art student as the Julian Academy for three years and the Frisson Academy, Paris, for one year. The groom is an alumnus of Bullis Preparatory School, Silver Spring, Md., and the United States Naval Academy, Annapolis. In June he graduated from the United States Submarine School in New London and is serving on the USS Bergall. Lt. Banfield and Mrs. Banfield will make their home at the submarine base in New London.

The parents of the bride will tour the eastern part of the United States before returning to Paris.

The bride will continue her studies at Michigan State University, East Lansing. The groom is a graduate of the University of Michigan Dental College.

DEANERY BOARD HOLDS MEETING

Preliminary plans were discussed for the annual deanery dinner meeting, the annual Day of Recollection and the possibility of sponsoring an institute at the meeting of the Board of Directors of the Conewago Deanery Council of Catholic Women Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. George A. Miller, Carlisle St. Miss Mary Jo Adams, Conewago parish, president of the deanery, announced that the annual dinner meeting for all members of all parish councils and the clergy of the deanery will be held on Thursday, January 30, in St. Aloysius Hall, Littlestown, with the St. Aloysius Parish Council as the hostess group. Reservations should be made with the presidents of the individual parishes by Wednesday, January 22.

The tentative dates for the Day of Recollection will be Sunday, March 2 or March 9, at St. Joseph's Academy, McSherrystown. The exact date will be announced as soon as details can be arranged. It is requested that all contributions to the Bishop's Fund for Diocesan Needs be in the hands of the deanery treasurer by Tuesday, December 31. This is the first year that the completion of the fund has been requested, in accordance with the new Harrisburg Diocesan ruling. Parish presidents should contact their Diocesan Needs chairman and see that the new ruling is followed, deanery leaders said.

There was a discussion on the possibility of holding an institute in conjunction with the open deanery meeting in April, which will be decided in the near future. Miss Adams requested each parish to make a First Communion dress for the Holy Father's Storeroom. Several parishes have already finished their dresses and the others may secure the pattern from Miss Adams.

Eighteen members of the board attended the meeting and enjoyed a social hour with refreshments. Each member also provided a Christmas gift for exchange and these were distributed by Santa Claus.

ACCUSE FIRM OF FALSE CLAIM

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) today charged the Aluminum Cooking Utensil Co. Inc., of New Kensington, Pa., with what it said was misrepresenting the advantages of using "wear-ever" cookware.

The commission complaint, alleging violation of the FTC act, charges that salesmen for the company make what the FTC said are false claims as to the alleged superiority of Wear-Ever over competitive products.

The complaint describes as false the claim it says the company makes that less food is required to satisfy hunger when War-Ever utensils are used.

In addition, the complaint charges the advertising department of Wear-Ever-cookware does not sell to selected customers as the demonstrators claim.

Th company has 30 days in which to file an answer to the complaint. A hearing is set for Feb. 12 at Pittsburgh before an FTC examiner.

WOMAN KILLED IN 5-CAR CRASH

PERRYVILLE, Md. (AP)—A Pennsylvania woman was killed last night in a five-car accident on U. S. 40 near here.

Mrs. Anna H. Allen, 40, , of Bridgeport R. 1, Pa., was killed in the accident. Her husband, Robert K., was admitted to Harford Memorial Hospital in Havre e Grace with possible internal injuries.

Eight others received minor injuries in the accident.

State trooper Wiley D. Fields said the accident occurred when an unidentified car sped onto the highway in front of a line of traffic. He sai the driver of the first car in the line of traffic braked quickly causing three other vehicles to pile up behind him. The fifth vehicle was stopped at the side of the highway and was struck by one of the careening cars.

Speeding Airman Admits Burglaries

DENVER (AP)—Police arrested a 17-year-old airman for speeding yesterday and said he later admitted theft of more than $10,000 in jewelry store burglaries.

Detectives Carl Brandt and Merle Huttenhow said they found the loot in an apartment rented by Danny G. Sheurick of Harrisburg, Pa., stationed at Lowry Air Force Base here.

The detectives said the jewelry, including a diamond ring valued at $3,600, had been stolen from two Denver firms. Sheurick was held in city jail without charge.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force said today it has ordered manufacture of a jet bomber capable of flying more than 2,000 miles an hour for long distances.

A spokesman said it is an arrangement for North American Aviation to produce prototype planes looking well ahead in development, but not yet a contract for quantity production.

GEN. CHENNAULT SUFFERING FROM CANCER OF LUNG

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP) — Retired Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault, leader of the World War II Flying Tigers, disclosed today that he is suffering from cancer of the lung.

The 67-year-old U.S. military aviation pioneer told a press conference a tumor was removed from his left lung in August 1956. But he said the malignancy returned and no further operation was possible.

He looked tired and haggard. His voice was almost a whisper, but he blamed that on a cold.

Chennault organized the Flying Tigers, an outfit of American fliers, to fight with Chiang Kai-shek's forces before the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor. After America entered the war, the outfit was absorbed into the 14th Air Force and Chennault became its commander.

Has Chinese Wife

He now is chairman of the Board of Directors of Civil Air Transport, the Far Eastern airline he founded in Shanghai 11 years ago. He arrived in Formosa 10 days ago on CAT business, accompanied by his 34-year-old Chinese-born second wife.

Chennault said he plans to return to the United States Jan. 10.

He said that in 1954 he tried o organize an international air force to fight communism, but the U.S. government "decided it was not wise to have such an organization as it might provoke the Communists into all-out war." He added he felt such an outfit should still be organized under U.S. sponsorship because he felt it would deter the Reds from starting small-scale local wars.

PARISIENNE

ROAR WELCOME FOR NASSER AT OLD PORT SAID

PORT SAID, Egypt (AP) — Port Said roared a welcome to President Nasser at celebrations of the first anniversary of the British-French withdrawal from Egyptian soil.

Nasser arrived in a special train to a cheering reception from thousands of Port Said citizens.

With War Minister Maj. General Abdel Hakim Amer and all the Cabinet ministers, Nasser reviewed a parade—chiefly of Soviet military equipment.

Public Barred From Station

Seventy representatives from the Soviet Union, Red China, North Korea, North Viet Nam and Outer Mongolia arrived from Moscow yesterday.

The public was barred from the railway station when Nasser arrived. Crowds waited outside.

Soldiers and police lined Nasser's route in the city.

Nasser went to Port Said Cemetery to lay the cornerstone of an "unknown martyr's memorial." In Egypt, Port Said gained a reputation as the nation's "Stalingrad" for its resistance to the British-French attack.

In another ceremony Nasser presented a special red and gold Port Said flag to the city, and raised it himself.

U. N. SECRETARY VISITING GAZA

GAZA (AP)—U.N. Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold arrived here today for a Christmas visit to U.N. Emergency Force troops along the Egyptian-Israeli frontier. He will confer later with Egyptian President Nasser on Suez Canal problems.

Hammarskjold was accompanied aboard the U.N. special plane by the UNEF commander, Lt. Gen. E.L.M. Burns. They set out at once on a tour of U.N. military contingents.

With Nasser he is expected to discuss a surcharge on canal traffic to repay U.N. members the eight million dollars they put up to clear the waterway after the Suez invasion and also arrangements to compensate stockholders of the old Suez Canal Co., whose Egyptian properties Nasser seized in 1956.

The U.N. Assembly approved Hammarskjold's recommendation for a 3 per cent surcharge on canal traffic to pay for the clearance but Egypt so far has not approved the added toll.

Worley Announces He'll Be Candidate

Assemblyman Francis Worley picked today, his 44th birthday anniversary, to announce he is a candidate for the Republican nomination for re-election as the county's representative in the General Assembly at Harrisburg.

His seniority in the House at Harrisburg has brought Adams County its first chairmanship of a standing House committee in 82 years. E. W. Stahle, representative from Adams County in 1875, held the last chairmanship for this county. He was chairman of the Committee of Printing. Worley this year was named chairman of the Committee on Aeronautics. He is also a ranking member of the Committee on Agriculture and Dairy Industry.

Worley holds a Master's degree in law from George Washington University and an A.B. in government from Penn State. He is a member of the bars of the U.S. Supreme Court and the federal courts in Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia.

PAYROLL TAX TO BE RAISED

By LEONARD A. UNGER

HARRISBURG (AP) — The State Bureau of Employment Security said today that employer payroll taxes to the Unemployment Compensation Fund will be increased by about 40 million dollars in 1958.

Executive Director John F. Adams said the employer tax rate will go up automatically Jan. 1 because the fund will drop below the so-called peril point of 350 million dollars tomorrow.

"My estimate is that the fund will fall under 350 million dollars tomorrow, Dec. 24, Dr. Adams told a newsman.

The Unemployment Compensation Fund was created for payment of jobless benefits to unemployed workers.

The law provides that when the fund dips below 350 millions, the rate of employer taxes goes up automatically to build up the fund for the following year.

Dr. Adams said the present tax rate of an average of 1.6 per cent of total payroll will jump to an average of about 2.2 per cent for 1958.

The range of payroll levies is 0.8 per cent to 2.7 per cent depending on labor turnover in a particular firm.

SPORTS EDITOR DIES IN CRASH

LOCK HAVEN, Pa. (AP) — James H. Snyder, 26, sports editor of the Centre Daily Times, State College, was killed in a traffic accident near here Saturday.

State police said Snyder's automobile collided with a truck driven by Bernard E. Hanes of Mill Hall, on Route 220 near Beech Creek, Clinton County. Hanes and his son, Bernard Jr., were not hurt.

Snyder was graduated cum Laude in journalism from Holy Cross University in 1953 and went to Harvard for graduate work in teaching. After a year, he left to become sports editor of the Lock Haven Express, a position he held two years.

In 1956, after a year's study, he took a master's degree in journalism from Columbia University.

He then joined the Centre Daily Times. His column "Rambling Thru Sports" had appeared almost daily for the last year and a half.

Snyder was chairman of the sports study committee of the Pennsylvania Associated Press Managing Editors in 1956-57. He was also president of the Central Pennsylvania Sports Writers Assn.

Unmarried, Snyder leaves his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Snyder of Dushore; a brother, Frank, a Navy lieutenant, and a sister, Mary a student at the College of New Rochelle (N.Y.).

M'BRIDE FILES LIBEL ACTION

HARRISBURG (AP) — Atty. Gen. Thomas D. McBride today filed a civil libel action against State Aud. Gen. Charles C. Smith, asking $15,000 damages.

McBride told a special news conference that he took the action on the basis of remarks made against him by Smith in a weekend news release concerning alleged fraud in the sale of cinders to the Highway Department.

McBride said the action stemmed particularly from this statement by Smith which is quoted in the documents filed by McBride today in Philadelphia County Court:

"Well, he's going to continue to have trouble with me as long as I continue to find graft and corruption that has gone unpunished and Mr. McBride, as chief law enforcement officer for the commonwealth continues to permit his loyalty to Gov. Leader and his administration to transcend his sworn duty and obligations to the people of Pennsylvania."

Report Hungarian Rebels Sentenced

VIENNA (AP)—Communist Hungary has sentenced 21 "rebels planning a new counter-revolution and the overthrow of the people's democracy" a Hungarian newspaper received today reported.

The provincial newspaper Bekes Magyer Mepujsag of Dec. 21 said the rebels were sentenced by a special tribunal at Szeged in southern Hungary.

The leader of the group, named as Prof. Pal Fekete, was sentenced to life imprisonment. A former Hungarian army officer received a 15-year prison term. Nineteen others were jailed for from 2 to 13 years.

BRICKER TO RUN

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—U.S. Sen. John W. Bricker (R-Ohio) today announced his candidacy for a third consecutive 6-year term.

Bricker, 64, former three-term governor of Ohio, is the ranking Republican member of the Senate Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, and second ranking GOP member on the Banking and Currency Committee. He was a candidate for vice president in 1944.

CARS CRASH SATURDAY

Nobody was injured when cars driven by Guy A. F. Hoke, 56, Dover R. 1, and John Herril., 30, New Oxford R. 1, sideswiped on Maple Grove highway, a mile south of Abbottstown on Saturday at 11:15 a.m., state police reported. A sign designating Paradise School was also damaged, police, who estimated total damage at $800 said.

HARRISBURG (AP)—John S. Gilles, president of the Pennsylvania Motor Federation, was sworn in today as a member of the Unemployment Compensation Board of Review.

The Reading resident took the oath of office from C. William Trout, deputy secretary of the commonwealth.

Out Of The Past

From the Files of the Star and Sentinel and The Gettysburg Times

ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO

The Weather And The Poor: The weather continues delightful and remarkably mild for this season of the year. Should it continue so until after the holidays, the whole winter, comparatively speaking, will be a short one, and spring will be upon us ere we have half realized that we have passed through a season of frost and snow. — Should our present hope be realized the poor will have cause to be thankful; for should the present winter prove as long and severe as the last one, their sufferings and privations would be greatly augmented. Let us hope then that the present winter will be a mild one, and that the spring will open with a general revival of business, and that "hard times come again no more" will find no sorrowful singer through the whole length and breadth of the land.

Today's Talk

THE ENTHUSIASTS

The world's best has been achieved by those who believed in better things, and whose enthusiasm gave birth to new ideas, new inventions and new enterprises. The enthusiasts who arm themselves with faith are the ones who put hope and spirit into the world.

It has often been said that nothing worth while has ever been accomplished without enthusiasm. The brave of the earth can testify to this fact. How about Columbus, Ford, Edison, Westinghouse, Pasteur, and countless others? How about those who first settled the West, after great sacrifices, including hunger and all manner of hardships?

The enthusiasts are the builders of better things and a better world. Their faith has been contagious and inexhaustible. An example to us all. What a permanent debt we owe to the scientists and to all builders! Not a mother's son of us should ever become totally discouraged. We should always take heart and go forward. The best things in life are the ones yet to be! Leave all your doubts behind. This day will never dawn again. Live it well while you may.

I have in my office a small ing press. This has been in my replica of Franklin's first printing press. This has been in my mind as I have watched the great printing presses of today gushing forth their thousands of newspapers, so fast you cannot count them. The press does this! It has taken enthusiasts to perfect the printing press o' today.

What noble pieces of machinery are the latest models of the airplane! Did the Wrights have them in mind? They were the first to point the path. Let us join the enthusiasts and help toward a better and safer world.

Tomorrow Mr. Adams will talk on the subject: "No Room In The Inn"

Just Folks

MY CHRISTMAS WISH

I ask no more than this on Christmas Day:
To behold my dear ones strong and well,
To know that I can stand upright and say,
Love crowns the little home wherein I dwell.
I do not ask for gifts of rare design,
For trinkets of the gold and silver arts.
Let loving arms around my neck entwine;
Let me but have a place in all their hearts.

My Christmas wish is not for something rare.
I want my little family to be glad,
I want to have them gather round my chair,
And now and then make known they love their dad.
The gifts I want are those you cannot buy;
In them perhaps no stranger would take pride.
But give me health for those I love, and I,
On Christmas morning, shall be satisfied.

CARDINAL IS VISITING GI'S

TOKYO (AP) — Francis Cardinal Spellman, Roman Catholic archbishop of New York, moved at top speed through a full schedule today on his annual Christmas visit to GIs around the world.

The cardinal, who arrived yesterday aboard a crippled airliner, called on U.S. Ambassador Douglas MacArthur II and Lt. Gen. Charles D. Palmer, commanding general of the U.S. Army in Japan.

The 68-year-old prelate also met patients in the Camp Zama U.S. Army hospital and celebrated mass for personnel at the U.S. 5th Air Force headquarters at Fuchu Air Force Base and at Camp Zama.

The cardinal, who is military vicar of the U.S. armed forces, leaves tomorrow for South Korea.

The four-engine airliner which brought him came in with one propeller feathered. The pilot alerted the airport and six Japanese fire engines converged on the scene, but the big ship landed without mishap.

Ocean-going vessels can go into the Port of Baltimore because a suspension span in the center of the Cheaspeake Bay Bridge lifts it 198 feet above the ship channel.

Santa's Helpers A Simpson's

Given Road Test

Wilbur Henninger, Railroad St., built the wooden bodies 22 inches wide, by 36 inches long with a half-inch marine plyboard bottom and one by four-inch maple sides. Simpson's Machine Shop employes welded together heavy metal undercarriages and 12-inch wheels with roller bearings were placed on the heavy frames. The result was a wagon able to hold 500 pounds and with a great willingness to coast — Simpson and his men "field tested" the wagons.

Funds on hand also permitted purchase of 12 new 16-inch tricycles of the sturdiest construction.

Simpson revealed htat the Christmas project has become a year around program. Last summer his steel crew went to the Protectory and built nine big swings and this year hope to place additional playground equipment at the home.

Lists Helpers

Among those listed by Simpson as aiding in the renovation of the Christmas toys are: John Sachs, Gettysburg R. 1; Guy Horner, Gettysburg R. D.; Charles Riley, Baltimore St.; George Bower, Harney; Francis Ruth, Fairfield; Paul Ready, Gettysburg R. D.; Michael Witherow, Gettysburg R. D.; Robert Welty, Gettysburg R. D.; Harry Woods, Gettysburg R. D.; Charles Althoff, Hanover St.; Jay Brown, Howard Ave.; Kenneth Hess, Hanover St.; Harry Scott, Hanover St.; Charles Heagy, McSherrystown; John Codori, York St.; Redding Supply, Stouck-Reaser, Shelby and Orner, Citizens Oil Co., J. R. Weaver and Co., Frank Linn, Glenn L. Bream Inc., Wilbur Henninger, Railroad St., and "especially" Leo Dete, and the Carlisle Tire and Rubber Co. whose donation of all tires and tubes for the large bicycles permitted use of funds for such items as the new tricycles and wagons.

Grand Secretary Of Masons Passes Away

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—The Rev. George A. Avery, 65, grand secretary of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, Free and Accepted Masons, died yesterday at University Hospital.

The Rev. Mr. Avery, who became the state Masonic group's secretary on his retirement from active ministerial service in 1952, was pastor of the Hope Presbyterian Church in South Philadelphia for 35 years.

Recently he had lived at nearby Secane, Pa.

Surviving are his widow, the former Minnie Thomas; a stepson, Howard Avery Milligan, and a sister, Mrs. Anna Donald.

Funeral services will be held Thursday, with burial in Arlington Cemetery, Drexel Hill, Pa.

GRAND UNION TO FACE U.S. CHARGE

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Federal Trade Commission has charged the Grand Union Co. with obtaining illegal promotional allowances from suppliers.

The FTC issued a complaint yesterday accusing the supermarket chain of inviting and receiving advertising payments "which it knew or should have known were not made equally available to its competitors."

The payments were allegedly made by various companies to have their products advertised in a panel of Grand Union's illuminated sign in New York Time's Square.

Under its agreement with Douglas Leigh, Inc., the New York advertising agency which built and operated the sign, the FTC said, Grand Union received from the agency a share of the monthly rental paid by the other advertisers.

The supermarket chain, with headquarters in East Paterson, N.J., leased the sign from the Leigh agency for $50 a month on a contract which provided that the food chain would obtain the participation of 15 other advertisers who were charged about $1,000 each. The FTC said payments to Grand Union totaled almost $15,000 in the nine months from July 1954 to March 1955.

ROBBER MISSES $25,000 IN GEMS

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A burglar who entered a 207-year-old renovated home of a wealthy suburbanite ignored a small fortune in gems and escaped with $200 yesterday.

The thief broke into the home of Harry A. Spock on a 140 acre estate in suburban Whitemarsh. He entered the Spock bedroom and took $200 from the top of a bureau while Spock and his wife, Stella, slept.

The Spocks said the burglar ignored some $25,000 in jewelry in plain view, plus a $3,500 mink coat and a quantity of antique silver on a downstairs buffet.

Police believe the same burglar broke into the nearby rectory of the Rev. James R. MacColl a short time earlier.

The Rev. Mr. MacColl said he and his wife were awakened by an intruder in their bedroom. He said to the man, "do you know you are on church property and I am a ministerb"

The thief was quoted as replying:

"O—Well, I want you to know I want nothing but money."

He took $12 and disappeared, the Rev. Mr. MacColl said.

CAMDEN, N. J. (AP)—Harry Brinning, 48, of Langhorne, Pa., was killed yesterday when his car crashed into a tree on the Pine Hill-Erial road after overshooting a curve. He was dead on arrival at Our Lady of Lourdes Hospital here.

NORTH CAROLINA UPSET BIGGEST W. VA. VICTORY

By ED CORRIGAN
The Associated Press

While West Virginia, the giant killer of the year, basks in its glory a dozen important holiday basketball tournaments get under way after Christmas.

Lowdown—The Dixie Classic at Raleigh, N. C.—North Carolina will try to pick up the pieces after seeing its 31-game streak shattered by West Virginia 75-64 in the finals of the Kentucky Invitational Tournament Saturday.

This was perhaps the biggest upset for Mountaineer Coach Fred Schaus since he took over a West Virginia team more than three seasons ago.

26 Straight Now

His new charges is to carry the Southern Conference banner past the first round of the NCAA Championships, something he has failed to do three times. The Mountaineers have won 26 straight league games and their steady beatings in the first round of the NCAA tournament have been a sore spot with Schaus.

North Carolina goes at it again against St. Louis Thursday in the first round of the Dixie Classics.

Another tournament which could wind up matching two of the top teams of the country is the Big Eight, which also starts Thursday at Kansas City. Kansas and Kansas State are the favorites to go through to the final.

12 Major Tourneys

Kansas plays Oklahoma and Kansas State goes against Missouri in the first round.

Here are the 12 major tournaments and the teams involved:

Opening Thursday

Holiday Festival at New York—Dayton vs. Manhattan; Temple vs. Pitt; Seattle vs. Connecticut; California vs. NYU.

All College Tournament at Oklahoma City—San Francisco vs. Denver; Western Kentucky vs. Nazaret; Oklahoma City vs. Tulane; Idaho State vs. Tulsa.

Others On List

Dixie Classic at Raleigh, N. C.—Wake Forest vs. Duquesne; North Carolina State vs. Northwestern; Duke vs. Seton Hall; North Carolina vs. St. Louis.

Big Eight Tournament at Kansas City—Kansas vs. Oklahoma; Colorado vs. Iowa State; Kansas State vs. Missouri; Nebraska vs. Princeton.

Southwest Conference Tournament at Houston—Southern Methodist vs. Texas Tech; Texas Christian vs. Texas A&M; Arkansas vs. Texas; Rice vs. Baylor.

Louisiana Invitational at Shreveport—Centenary vs. The Citadel; Tennessee Tech vs. Mississippi Southern; West Texas vs. Northwestern Louisiana; Hardin-Simmons vs. Louisiana Tech.

Friday's List

Opening Friday:

Far West Classic at Corvallis, Ore.—Utah vs. Washington; Yale vs. Oregon State.

Motor City Classic at Detroit—Georgia Tech vs. Marquette; Columbia vs. Detroit.

Richmond Invitational. — Richmond vs. Penn; Virginia vs. La Salle.

Holy Cross Invitational — Dartmouth vs. Colgate; Holy Cross vs. Brown.

Those For Saturday

Opening Saturday:

Queen City Tournament at Buffalo—Iowa, Cornell; Syracuse, Canisius.

Sugar Bowl at New Orleans — Maryland vs. Vanderbilt; Memphis State vs. Loyola of New Orleans.

Alabama defeated back Louisiana Tech 63-42 in the finals of the Carousel Tournament at Charlotte over the weekend.

San Francisco won the Blue Grass Tournament at Louisville, defeating Louisville 62-55.

Huge Fund Will Support Furman

PITTSBURGH (AP) — At least a half-million dollars would be available to Lt. Gov. Robert E. Fuhrman should he decide to run for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, says a Reading industrialist.

Clarence B. Bowers estimated in a statement Saturday night that at least that much money would be required next year for the campaigns of candidates seeking the gubernatorial and U.S. Senate nominations.

And Bowers added sufficient funds would be made available to Fuhrman by various groups and individuals whenever he decides to announce his candidacy.

Heavy NBA Scoring In Weekend Games

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

There were six National Basketball Assn. games this weekend, two Saturday and four yesterday, with a total of 1,430 points being scored over-all. Tops on the list was the St. Louis Hawks' record-breaking 146-136 victory over Syracuse Saturday night.

Sunday, the Hawks took it easy, scoring only 123 in their 123-115 win over Minneapolis. Other games found the New York Knicks beating the Philadelphia Warriors, 126-100, the Boston Celtics winning over the Cincinnati Royals 115-98 and the Nats recouping from the Saturday drubbing for a 119 - 93 win over Detroit. Boston beat Minneapolis 140-119 in Saturday's other game.

TWO SLAIN, FOUR ARE WOUNDED IN TWO SHOOTINGS

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Two persons were slain and four others wounded in two separate shooting incidents across the state yesterday in which jealousy apparently triggered the gunplay.

The shootings occurred southwest of Dayton and in Petersburg, west of the Ohio-Pennsylvania border near Youngstown.

In Petersburg, a divorced husband who had warned his wife he wouldn't be responsible if she brought a man into the house he bought and paid for, shot and killed a man who did show up in the house, authorities said.

Sheriff's deputies said the former husband, Wilbur Rauch, 41, admitted firing a shotgun blast through the window of his ex-wife's home. Inside, George Shandor, 41, of New Middletown, fell mortally wounded. Alice Rauch, 35, was wounded in the left hand as she stood talking to Shandor.

No Charges Filed

No charges have been filed against Rauch, arrested a short time later at his mother's home. The couple, divorced three years ago, have five children who were asleep in the Rauch home when the shooting occurred.

Detective Robert C. Beckett in Dayton announced the arrest of a 24-year-old man, Dan Myrick, for questioning in a shooting that killed Marie McElroy, 27-year-old mother of a 2-week-old baby. The baby was asleep in Mrs. McElroy's three-room apartment which was riddled by bullets from a revolver. The child escaped unharmed, but two other persons were wounded.

Myrick had been hunted throughout central Ohio and was taken into custody here without incident this morning by Beckett and Harland Grooms. The detectives accused Myrick of the shooting and said the man must have loaded his revolver at least four times. No charges have been filed.

Three Wounded

Mrs. Doris Bateman, 33, who lived with the slain woman; her husband, Lonnie Bateman and Samuel Mills, 24, were wounded in the shooting fray.

The gunman they added apparently was jealous of attentions paid Mrs. McElroy by Mills.

Investigators said Mrs. McElroy and Mrs. Bateman are white and that Bateman and Mills are Negroes.

Texas A. And M. To Get New Coach

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP) — A new football coach for Texas A&M may be obtained today and best indications are that it will be either Henry (Red) Sanders of UCLA or Frank Leahy, who once led Notre Dame.

Leahy's name entered the picture yesterday when it became known that the former successful coach of the Fighting Irish had visited the A&M campus. Sanders was here last week and is supposed to confer with the UCLA board of control on whether he will remain there or pull up stakes and journey to Texas.

SPORTS IN BRIEF
RACING

HERSHEY BEARS WIN TWO MORE

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It might be better from a fan interest standpoint in the American Hockey League if the Hershey Bears would take it easy on their five rivals now and then. But the Bears have no such intentions.

Take the weekend's results for example. Just when it appeared that the Cleveland Barons or even the Providence Reds might close in, the Bears up and won two games. They smacked down the Reds 5-4 in overtime Saturday and then whipped the Buffalo Bisons 6-2 last night.

Cleveland beat Buffalo 2-1 in its lone game with the result the Barons find themselves 11 points back of the Bears today while holding a four-point margin over third-place Providence.

Goals by Andy Branigan and Ray Cyr within 61 seconds of each other in the first period and another rapid pair by Bruce Cline and Zellio Topazzini in the third carried the Reds to a 5-2 triumph over the Rochester Americans last night. Rochester had beaten Springfield 2-0 Saturday.

Bowling

The Aces continued their winning ways in the Black Walnut Boy Scout District Explorer Post Bowling League Sunday afternoon at the alleys of the Albert J. Lentz American Legion Home, by defeating the Misfits 4 to 0, thus making it 16 straight wins without a loss for the Aces.

The Lucky Strikers defeated the Zorros 4 to 0 and the Screwballers won a forfeit 4 to 0 over Anonymous.

Ted Orner had the high single game, a 134, and Robert Zhea had the high three game, 366.

Richard Kershner, chairman of the league announced that teams scheduled to bowl at 3:30 o'clock on Sunday afternoon in the league schedule will hereafter bowl at the Albert J. Lentz American Legion bowling alleys on Saturday afternoons at 1:30 o'clock. The time of the first game on Sundays at the Legion alleys will be advanced from 1 to 1:30 o'clock.

Frosh Girl Star Is Electrocuted

BROWNSVILLE, Pa. (AP)—Robert Worrell, a member of the Penn State freshman football squad who was named to the WPIAL all-star grid team four years straight, was electrocuted yesterday while helping his father raise a television antenna.

Authorities said Worrell, 19, was holding the antenna as it came in contact with a high tension line. His father, Thomas, was shocked but escaped serious injury.

A 1956 graduate of Centerville High School, Worrell was married and the father of a daughter.

CAMDEN, N. J. (AP)—A fire with flames 100 feet high destroyed part of a building formerly used by shipyard companies here yesterday.

Intense heat caused the north wall of the unoccupied building to buckle, but it didn't collapse. Three alarms were sounded.

There was no estimate of damage.

Resume Drills For East-West Contest

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—East and West Shrine football squads resumed practice today in preparation for their Dec. 28 clash after taking time off to watch the Detroit Lions-San Francisco 49er pro game.

Penn State Head Coach Rip Engle of the East squad expects to return to the helm after spending three days confined to bed with the flu.

Although the East with five All-Americans is rated a 10-point favorite, the West under coach Jack Curtice of Utah is expected to provide tough competition with a varied offense quarterbacked by Stanford's Jack Douglas, Oregon State's Joe Francis or COP's Tom Flores.

and 'The Sweetest Story Ever Told.'"

The bride who was given away by her father wore a ballerina-length gown of net over taffeta with a bodice of Chantilly lace which extended over the skirt. The gown had long tapered sleeves of Chantilly lace ending in points. The neckline was scalloped, and the headpiece was a crown of pearls with a waist length veil. Her only jewelry was small pearl earrings. She carried a white Bible with an orchid.

Bride's Attendants

The maid of honor, Miss Jean Ellen Conner Gardners R. 2, wore a pale turquoise taffeta dress with a full circular skirt worn over crinolines with a bow in the back. She carried a bouquet of pink and white mums and wore a small matching hat with a veil.

The attendants, Mrs. Joyce Slaybaugh, Biglerville, and Mrs. Shirley Cashman, Biglerville R. 1, wore pale coral dresses identical to the maid of honor. They carried bouquets of white and yellow mums and wore small matching hats with veils.

The best man was Richard Murtoff, Gardners R. 1. The ushers were Gene Baptisti, Dillsburg R. 2; Douglas Murtoff, Gardners R. 2, Robert Cashman, Biglerville R. 1, and Adrian Slaybaugh, Biglerville.

Will Reside At Gardners R. 1

The bride's mother wore a light blue dress with white accessories and had a corsage of red and white carnations.

The pages were Richard and Wayne Arnsberger, Gardners R. 1. The ringbearer was Stephen Walde, Biglerville R. 1, and the flower girl was Susan Arnsberger, Biglerville R. 1.

The reception was held in the social room of the church.

The couple will reside at Gardners R. 1.

The bride attended Biglerville High School and is employed at the United Telephone Co. in Biglerville. The groom attended Boiling Springs High School and is employed at the C. H. Musselman Co. in Gardners.

Out-of-town guests were from Baltimore, York, Carlisle, Red Lion, New Oxford, Dillsburg, Hummelstown and Harrisburg.

GHS, Alumni In Annual Contest Tonight At 7

Tonight at 7 o'clock the Gettysburg High School varsity cagers and Alumni tangle in their annual holiday game. There will be no preliminary.

George Fair will be in charge of the Alumni squad and has a list of 34 eligibles. However, many will be unable to be present, but it is expected approximately 15 will turn out. Coach Fair has requested all to report at the high school at 6 o'clock.

George Forney's Warriors copped victories over Delone and Westminster before bowing to Hershey Friday evening. They face a big problem tonight in overcoming the height advantage of the stars of yester-year.

STOCKS DROP AGAIN

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market stepped gingerly into Christmas week today with prices slightly lower on balance in early trading.

Leading issues were off from fractions to around a point but there was a scattering of small gainers and a number of stocks were unchanged.

The weekend news brought no tidings of great joy to Wall Street to change the mood of last week's sizable decline. Although there were published reports of government intentions to help business recover the latest spot news was of layoffs and the squeeze on profits.

North, South Teams Prepare For Clash

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — College All Stars from the North and South sharpened their passing games in practice sessions yesterday for Saturday's annual Blue-Gray football game.

The nation's No. 1 collegiate passer, Ken Ford of Hardin-Simmons, was hitting his receivers consistently during the Gray workout while Dick Larson and Bobby Cox of Minnesota were throwing strikes for the Yankees.

Chief receivers for the Blue passers were ends Dick Scherer of Pittsburgh, Paul North of Penn State and Minnesota's Jon Jelacic.

Ford's targets included halfback Jimmy Orr of Georgia, ends John Collar of North Carolina State, Will Billion of Tulane and Pat Hartsfield of Texas Tech.

TIBBS BATTLES PEREZ TONIGHT

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tommy Tibbs, a busy young lightweight from Boston, makes his 12th appearance of the year Monday night at St. Nicholas Arena when he takes on Lulu Perez of Brooklyn.

The 10-round match will be carried on television (Dumont) in some sections of the country.

Joey Giardello continues his drive toward a middleweight title shot—if and when the logjam is ended—by boxing Ralph (Tiger) Jones, the hardy TV perennial from Yonkers, N. Y., on the Wednesday show at Miami Beach, Fla.

The match is part of the usual Friday night network (NBC) radio and television schedule.

Orville Pitts, the University of Wisconsin collegian who has become a big favorite in Milwaukee, meets Joe Rowan of Phoenixville, Pa. Saturday at Milwaukee. Pitts lost a split decision to Jimmy Slade, Nov. 26 in his fourth pro fight after three first-round knockouts.

Bob Zuppke, 78, Of Grid Fame Dies

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Bob Zuppke of Illinois, one of the most inventive coaches in American football history, is dead.

Affectionately known as "Little Dutchman," Zuppke died yesterday at the age of 78 in Cole Memorial Hospital. Cause of death was prostatic cancer, complicated by high blood pressure and a long-standing heart ailment. He suffered a serious stroke in 1955.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow.

Zuppke, who retired in 1941 after 29 years as Illinois' football coach, was given little hope during the past week when his health began failing rapidly.

DETROIT LIONS WIN PLAYOFF AFTER TRAILING

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Can Detroit's Lions beat the Cleveland Browns in Sunday's National Football League championship game?

Sure, and not just Lion quarterback Tobin Rote. He had just engineered a 31-27 comeback victory for his club over the San Francisco 49ers yesterday in their playoff for the Western Conference title.

The 49ers built up a 27-7 lead against the Lions with 2 minutes and 22 seconds gone in the third quarter only to falter and fail.

Tittle Pitched TD's

San Francisco quarterback Y. A. Tittle pitched touchdown passes of 34 yards to R. C. Owens, 47 to Hugh McElhenny and 12 to Billy Wilson. Gordy Soltau added three conversions and two field goals, of 25 and 10 yards.

Then the Lions roared back. Tittle unloaded and Doo Long recovered at the San Francisco 27. With fourth down at the 20, Rote passed complete to Hopalong Cassady at the 6. Two plays later, Tom Tracy boomed over from the 1.

Less than two minutes later, Tracy, a 210-pound reserve fullback playing for the injured John Henry Johnson, raced 59 yards to score. Jim Martin's conversion made it 27-21.

Steelers Rout Cards

On the last play of the third period, Rote hit end Steve Junker for a 37-yard gain to the 15. Tracy crashed for 10. Rote for 3 and Gene Gedman scored. Martin converted and Detroit led for the first time, 28-27.

Later, Martin added a 13-yard field goal.

In the last game of the regular NFL season yesterday at Chicago, the Pittsburgh Steelers clinched third place in the Eastern Division with a 27-2 rout of the Cardinals.

Call Seixas Key To U. S. Tennis Team

MELBOURNE (AP)—It's Vic Seixas against Australia in the Davis Cup challenge round starting Thursday in the opinion of Harry Hopman, non-playing captain of the Aussies.

"You have to say Vic is the key to the United States' chances," the veteran Australian leader said as he conceded the American ace has a 50-50 chance of winning his two singles assignments.

"He is experienced in Davis Cup play," Hopman added. "And he's a tenacious fighter who apparently is in good shape. I figure he is the only man who can win points for America.

So I think we will keep the Cup 4-1 or 3-2, depending on how many matches Vic can win."

appliqued with French lace, was worn over a hoop. Her fingertip veil fell from a crown of seed pearls and sequins and she carried a Bible topped with a white orchid.

Miss Johnetta Murray, 133 W. Middle St., the maid of honor, wore a ballerina length gown of emerald green velvet fashioned on princess lines with a cowl neckline, worn over hoops with a headpiece of matching velvet. She carried a bouquet of white poinsettias and pompons.

The bridesmaids, Miss Sophia Matthews, R. 4, and Miss Jean Allender, Baltimore, sisters of the groom, wore gowns and matching headpieces of American Beauty red, similar to that of the maid of honor and carried bouquets of white poinsettias and pompons.

James Church, N. J., fraternity brother of the groom, was best man and the ushers were Samuel Young, Gettysburg, and Robert Gardner, Cockeysville, Md.

In College Here

The bride's mother wore a gown of peacock blue with black accessories and a yellow rosebud corsage. The mother of the groom wore a dusty rose gown with black accessories and a corsage of yellow rosebuds.

Mrs. Allender was wearing a green school sheath dress with black accessories when the bridal couple left on a wedding trip to an unannounced destination. Upon their return they will reside at 333 York St., Gettysburg.

Mrs. Allender is a graduate of Gettysburg High School with the class of 1956 and is employed at the Mechanicsburg Naval Supply Depot. Mr. Allender attended Milford Mill High School, Baltimore, and is a member of the senior class at Gettysburg College. He is a member of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity.

Out-of-town guests were present from Baltimore, Denton, Clear Springs and Hamilton, Md.; Washington, D. C.; New Jersey and Hanover, Pa.

NORTH CAROLINA UPSET BIGGEST W. VA. VICTORY

By ED CORRIGAN
The Associated Press

While West Virginia, the giant killer of the year basks in its glory, a dozen important holiday basketball tournaments get under way after Christmas.

In one—the Dixie Classic at Raleigh, N. C.—North Carolina will try to pick up the pieces after seeing its 37-game streak shattered by West Virginia 75-64 in the final of the Kentucky Invitional Tournament Saturday.

This was perhaps the biggest victory for Mountaineer Coach Fred Schaus since he took over at West Virginia little more than three season ago.

26 Straight Now

His next aim is to carry the Southern Conference banner past the first round of the NCAA Championships, something he has failed to do three times. The Mountaineers have won 26 straight league games and their steady beatings in the first round of the NCAA tournament have been a sore spot with Schaus.

North Carolina goes at it again against St. Louis Thursday in the first round of the Dixie Classics.

Another tournament which could wind up matching two of the goliaths of the country is the Big Eight, which also starts Thursday at Kansas City. Kansas and Kansas State are the favorites to go through to the final.

12 Major Tourneys

Kansas plays Oklahoma and Kansas States goes against Missouri in the first round.

Here are the 12 major tournaments and the teams involved:

Opening Thursday:

Holiday Festival at New York—Dayton vs. Manhattan, Temple vs. Pitt, Seattle vs. Connecticut, California vs. NYU.

All College Tournament at Oklahoma City—San Francisco vs. Denver, Western Kentucky vs. Niagara, Oklahoma City vs. Tulane, Idaho State vs. Tulsa.

Others On List

Dixie Classic at Raleigh, N. C.—Wake Forest vs. Duquesne, North Carolina State vs. Northwestern, Duke vs. Seton Hall, North Carolina vs. St. Louis.

Big Eight Tournament at Kansas City—Kansas vs. Oklahoma, Colorado vs. Iowa State, Kansas State vs. Missouri, Nebraska vs. Princeton.

Southwest Conference Tournament at Houston—Southern Methodist vs. Texas Tech, Texas Christian vs. Texas A&M, Arkansas vs. Texas, Rice vs. Baylor.

Louisiana Invitational at Shreveport—Centenary vs. The Citadel, Tennessee Tech vs. Mississippi Southern, West Texas vs. Northwestern Louisiana, Hardin-Simmons vs. Louisiana Tech.

Friday's List

Opening Friday:

Far West Classic at Corvallis, Ore.—Utah vs. Washington, Yale vs. Oregon State.

Motor City Classic at Detroit — Georgia Tech vs. Marquette, Columbia vs. Detroit.

Richmond Invitational — Richmond vs. Penn, Virginia vs. La Salle.

Holy Cross Invitational — Dartmouth vs. Colgate, Holy Cross vs. Brown.

Those For Saturday

Opening Saturday:

Queen City Tournament at Buffalo—Iowa, Cornell, Syracuse, Canisius.

Sugar Bowl at New Orleans — Maryland vs. Vanderbilt, Memphis State vs. Loyola of New Orleans.

Alabama turned back Louisiana Tech 63-42 in the final of the Carrousel Tournament at Charlotte over the weekend.

San Francisco won the Blue Grass Tournament at Louisville, defeating Louisville 62-55.

Huge Fund Will Support Furman

PITTSBURGH (AP) — At least a half-million dollars would be available to Lt. Gov. Roy E. Furman should he decide to run for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, says a Reading industrialist.

Clarence B. Bowers estimated in a statement Saturday night that at least that much money would be required next year for the campaigns of candidates seeking the gubernatorial and U.S. Senator nominations.

And, Bowers added, sufficient funds would be made available to Furman by various groups and individuals "whenever he decides to announce his canidacy."

Heavy NBA Scoring In Weekend Games

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

There were six National Basketball Assn. games this weekend, two Saturday and four yesterday, with a total of 1,430 points being scored over-all. Tops on the list was the St. Louis Hawks' record-breaking 146-136 victory over Syracuse Saturday night.

Sunday, the Hawks took it easy, scoring only 123 in their 123-115 win over Minneapolis. Other games found the New York Knicks beating the Philadelphia Warriors, 126-100, the Boston Celtics winning over the Cincinnati Royals 115-98 and the Nats recouping from the Saturday drubbing for a 119 - 93 win over Detroit. Boston beat Minneapolis 140-119 in Saturday's other game.

TWO SLAIN, FOUR ARE WOUNDED IN TWO SHOOTINGS

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Two persons were slain and four others wounded in two separate shooting incidents across the state yesterday in which jealousy apparently triggered the gunplay.

The shootings occurred southwest of Dayton; and in Petersburg, west of the Ohio-Pennsylvania border near Youngstown.

In Petersburg, a divorced husband, who had warned his wife he wouldn't be responsible if she brought a man into the house he bought and paid for, shot and killed a man who did show up in the house, authorities said.

Sheriff's deputies said the former husband, Wilbur Rauch, 41, admitted firing a shotgun blast through the window of his ex-wife's home. Inside, George Shandor, 41, of New Middletown, fell mortally wounded. Alice Rauch, 35, was wounded in the left hand as she stood talking to Shandor.

No Charges Filed

No charges have been filed against Rauch, arrested a short time later at his mother's home. The couple, divorced three years ago, have five children who were asleep in the Rauch home when the shooting occurred.

Detective Robert C. Beckett in Dayton announced the arrest of a 24-year-old man, Dan Myrick, for questioning in a shooting that killed Marie McElroy, 27-year-old mother of a 2-week-old baby. The baby was asleep in Mrs. McElroy's three-room apartment which was riddled by bullets from a revolver. The child escaped unharmed, but two other persons were wounded.

Myrick had been hunted throughout central Ohio and was taken into custody here without incident this morning by Beckett and Harland Grooms. The detectives accused Myrick of the shooting and said the man must have loaded his revolver at least four times. No charges have been filed.

Three Wounded

Mrs. Doris Bateman, 33, who lived with the slain woman; her husband, Lonnie Bateman; and Samuel Mills, 24, were wounded in the shooting fray.

The gunman, they added, apparently was jealous of attentions paid Mrs. McElroy by Mills.

Investigators said Mrs. McElroy and Mrs. Bateman are white and that Bateman and Mills are Negroes.

Texas A. And M. To Get New Coach

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP) — A new football coach for Texas A.&M. may be obtained today and best indications are that it will be either Henry (Red) Sanders of UCLA or Frank Leahy, who once led Notre Dame.

Leahy's name entered the picture yesterday when it became known that the former successful coach of the Fighting Irish had visited the A.&M. campus. Sanders was here last week and is supposed to confer with the UCLA board of control on whether he will remain there or pull up stakes and journey to Texas.

SPORTS IN BRIEF
RACING

MIAMI, Fla. — Hubcap ($10.20) took the lead at the start and stayed in front all the way to win the $12,125 Dade County Handicap at Tropical Park.

NEW ORLEANS — Bullin ($7) closed fast in the stretch to take the $10,000 Yuletide Handicap at the Fair Grounds.

ALBANY, Calif. — Omelia ($35.10) never was headed in the $21,100 closing day feature at Golden Gate Fields.

HERSHEY BEARS WIN TWO MORE

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It might be better from a fan interest standpoint in the American Hockey League if the Hershey Bears would take it easy on their five rivals now and then. But the Bears have no such intentions.

Take the weekend's results for example. Just when it appeared that the Cleveland Barons or even the Providence Reds might close in, the Bears up and won two games. They smacked down the Reds 5-4 in overtime Saturday and then whipped the Buffalo Bisons 6-2 last night.

Cleveland beat Buffalo 3-1 in its lone game with the result the Barons find themselves 11 points back of the Bears today while holding a four-point margin over third-place Providence.

Goals by Andy Branigan and Ray Cyr within 61 seconds of each other in the first period and another rapid pair by Bruce Cline and Zellio Topazzini in the third carried the Reds to a 5-2 triumph over the Rochester Americans last night. Rochester had beaten Springfield 2-0 Saturday.

Bowling

The Aces continued their winning ways in the Black Walnut Boy Scout District Explorer Post Bowling League Sunday afternoon at the alleys of the Albert J. Lentz American Legion Home, by defeating the Misfits 4 to 0, thus making it 16 straight wins without a loss for the Aces.

The Lucky Strikers defeated the Zorros 4 to 0 and the Screwballers won a forfeit 4 to 0 over Anonymous.

Ted Orner had the high single game, a 134, and Robert Zhea had the high three game, 366.

Richard Kershner, chairman of the league, announced that teams scheduled to bowl at 3:30 o'clock on Sunday afternoon in the league schedule will hereafter bowl at the Albert J. Lentz American Legion bowling alleys on Saturday afternoons at 1:30 o'clock. The time of the first game on Sundays at the Legion alleys will be advanced from 1 to 1:30 o'clock.

Frosh Girl Star Is Electrocuted

BROWNSVILLE, Pa. (AP)—Robert Worrell, a member of the Penn State freshman football squad who was named to the WPIAL all-star grid team four years straight, was electrocuted yesterday while helping his father raise a television antenna.

Authorities said Worrell, 19, was holding the antenna as it came in contact with a high tension line. His father, Thomas, was shocked but escaped serious injury.

A 1956 graduate of Centerville High School, Worrell was married and the father of a daughter.

Resume Drills For East-West Contest

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—East and West Shrine football squads resumed practice today in preparation for their Dec. 28 clash after taking time off to watch the Detroit Lions-San Francisco 49er pro game.

Penn State Head Coach Rip Engle of the East squad expects to return to the helm after spending three days confined to bed with the flu.

Although the East with five All-Americans is rated a 10-point favorite, the West under coach Jack Curtice of Utah is expected to provide tough competition with a varried offense quarterbacked by Stanford's Jack Douglas, Oregon State's Joe Francis or COP's Tom Flores.

The bride who was given away by her father, wore a ballerina-length gown of net over taffeta with a bodice of Chantilly lace which extended over the skirt. The gown had long tapered sleeves of Chantilly lace ending in points. The neckline was scalloped, and the headpiece was a crown of pearls with a waist length veil. Her only jewelry was small pearl earrings. She carried a white Bible with an orchid.

Bride's Attendants

The maid of honor, Miss Jean Ellen Conner, Gardners R. 2, wore a pale turquoise taffeta dress with a full circular skirt worn over crinolines with a bow in the back. She carried a bouquet of pink and white mums and wore a small matching hat with a veil.

The attendants, Mrs. Joyce Slaybaugh, Biglerville and Mrs. Shirley Cashman, Biglerville R. 1, wore pale coral dresses identical to the maid of honor. They carried bouquets of white and yellow mums and wore small matching hats with veils.

The best man was Richard Murtoff, Gardners R. 1. The ushers were Gene Baptisti, Dillsburg R. 2; Douglas Murtoff, Gardners R. 2; Robert Cashman, Biglerville R. 1, and Adrian Slaybaugh, Biglerville.

Will Reside At Gardners R. 1

The bride's mother wore a light blue dress with white accessories and had a corsage of red and white carnations.

The pages were Richard and Wayne Arnsberger, Gardners R. 1. The ringbearer was Stephen Walde, Biglerville R. 1, and the flower girl was Susan Arnsberger, Biglerville R. 1.

The reception was held in the social room of the church.

The couple will reside at Gardners R. 1.

The bride attended Biglerville High School and is employed at the United Telephone Co. in Biglerville. The groom attended Boiling Springs High School and is employed at the C. H. Musselman Co. in Gardners.

Out-of-town guests were from Baltimore, York, Carlisle, Red Lion, New Oxford, Dillsburg, Hummelstown and Harrisburg.

GHS, Alumni In Annual Contest Tonight At 7

Tonight at 7 o'clock the Gettysburg High School varsity cagers and Alumni tangle in their annual holiday game. There will be no preliminary.

George Fair will be in charge of the Alumni squad and has a list of 34 eligibles. However, many will be unable to be present, but it is expected approximately 15 will turn out. Coach Fair has requested all to report at the high school at 6 o'clock.

George Forney's Warriors copped victories over Delone and Westminster before bowing to Hershey Friday evening. They face a big problem tonight in overcoming the height advantage of the stars of yester-year.

STOCKS DROP AGAIN

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market stepped gingerly into Christmas week today with prices slightly lower on balance in early trading.

Leadng issues were off from fractions to around a point but there was a scatterng of small gainers and a number of stocks were unchanged.

The weekend news brought no tidings of great joy to Wall Street to change the mood of last week's sizable decline. Although there were published reports of government intentions to help business recover, the latest spot news was of layoffs and the squeeze on profits.

North, South Teams Prepare For Clash

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — College All Stars from the North and South sharpened their passing games in practice sessions yesterday for Saturday's annual Blue-Gray football game.

The nation's No. 1 collegiate lasser, Ken Ford of Hardin-Simmons, was hitting his receivers consistently during theGray workout while Dick Larson and Bobby Cox of Minnesota were throwing strikes for the Yankees.

Chief receivers for the Blue passers were ends Dick Scherer of Pittsburgh, Paul North of Penn State and Minnesota's Jon Jelacic.

Ford's targets included halfback Jimmy Orr of Georgia, ends John Collar of North Carolina State, Will Billion of Tulane and Pat Hartsfield of Texas Tech.

TIBBS BATTLES PEREZ TONIGHT

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tommy Tibbs, a busy young lightweight from Boston, makes his 12th appearance of the year Monday night at St. Nicholas Arena when he takes on Lulu Perez of Brooklyn.

The 10-round match will be carried on television (Dumont) in some sections of the country.

Joey Giardello continues tis drive toward a middleweight title shot—if and when the logjam is ended—by boxing Ralph (Tiger) Jones, the hardy TV perennial from Yonkers, N. Y., on the Wednesday show at Miami Beach, Fla.

The match is part of the usual Friday night network (NBC) radio and television schedule.

Orville Pitts, the University of Wisconsin collegian who has become a big favorite in Milwaukee, meets Joe Rowan of Phoenixville, Pa. Saturday at Milwaukee. Pitts lost a split decision to Jimmy Slade, Nov. 26 in his fourth pro fight after three first-round knockouts.

Bob Zuppke, 78, Of Grid Fame Dies

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Bob Zuppke of Illinois, one of the most inventive coaches in American football history, is dead.

Affectionately known as "Little Dutchman," Zuppke died yesterday at the age of 78 in Cole Memorial Hospital. Cause of death was prostatic cancer, complicated by high blood pressure and a long-standing heart ailment. He suffered a serious stroke in 1955.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow.

Zuppke, who retired in 1941 after 29 years as Illinois' football coach, was given little hope durin the past week when his health began failing rapidly.

DETROIT LIONS WIN PLAYOFF AFTER TRAILING

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Can Detroit's Lions beat the Cleveland Browns in Sunday's National Football League championship game?

"Sure, why not," said Lion quarterback Tobin Rote. He had just engineered a 31-27 comeback victory for his club over the San Franciscc 49ers yesterday in their playoff for the Western Conference title.

The 49ers built up a 27-7 lead against the Lions with 2 minutes and 22 seconds gone in the third quarter only to falter and fail.

Tittle Pitched TD's

San Francisco quarterback Y.A. Tittle pitched touchdown passes of 34 yards to R. C. Owens, 47 to Hugh McElhenny and 12 to Billy Wilson. Gordy Soltau added three conversions and two field goals, of 25 and 10 yards.

Then the Lions roared back. Tittle fumbled and Bob Long recovered at the San Francisco 27. With fourth down at the 20, Rote passed complete to Hopalong Cassady at the 6. Two plays later Tom Tracy boomed over from the 1.

Less than two minutes later, Tracy, a 210-pound reserve fullback playing for the injured John Henry Johnson, raced 59 yards to score. Jim Martin's conversion made it 27-21

Steelers Rout Cards

On the last play of the third period, Rote hit end Steve Junker for a 37-yard gain to the 15. Tracy crashed for 10, Rote for 3 and Gene Gedman scored, Martin converted and Detroit led for the first time 28-27.

Later Martin added a 13-yard field goal.

In the last game of the regular NFL season yesterday at Chicago, the Pittsburgh Steelers clinched third place in the Eastern Division with a 27-2 rout of the Cardinals.

Call Seixas Key To U. S. Tennis Team

MELBOURNE (AP)—It's Vic Seixas against Australia in the Davis Cup challenge round starting Thursday in the opinion of Harry Hopman, non-playing captain of the Aussies.

"You have to say Vic is the key to the United States' chances," the veteran Australian leader said as he conceded the American ace has a 50-50 chance of winning his two singles assignments.

"He is experienced in Davis Cup play," Hopman added. "And he's a tenacious fighter who apparently is in good shape. I figure he is the only man who can win points for America.

"So I think we will keep the Cup 4-1 or 3-2, depending on how many matches Vic can win."

MISS M'CLEAF

appliqued with French lace, was worn over a hoop. Her fingertip veil fell from a crown of seed pearls and sequins and she carried a Bible topped with a white orchid.

Miss Johnetta Murray, 133 W. Middle St., the maid of honor, wore a ballerina length gown of emerald green velvet fashioned on princess lines with a cowl neckline, worn over hoops, with a headpiece of matching velvet. She carried a bouquet of white poinsettias and pompons.

The bridesmaids, Miss Sophia Matthews, R. 4, and Miss Jean Allender, Baltimore, sisters of the groom, wore gowns and matching headpieces of American Beauty red similar to that of the maid of honor and carried bouquets of white poinsettias and pompons.

James Church, N. J., fraternity brother of the groom, was best man and the ushers were Samuel Young, Gettysburg, and Robert Gardner, Cockeysville, Md.

In College Here

The bride's mother wore a gown of peacock blue with black accessories and a yellow rosebud corsage. The mother of the groom wore a dusty rose gown with black accessories and a corsage of yellow rosebuds.

Mrs. Allender was wearing a green whool sheath dress with black accessories when the bridal couple left on a wedding trip to an unannounced destination. Upon their return they will reside at 333 York St. Gettysburg.

Mrs. Allender is a graduate of Gettysburg High School with the class of 1956 and is employed at the Mechanicsburg Naval Supply Depot. Mr. Allender attended Milford Mill High School, Baltimore, and is a member of the senior class at Gettysburg College. He is a member of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity.

Out-of-town guests were present from Baltimore, Denton, Clear Springs and Hampstead, Md.; Washington, D. C.; New Jersey and Hanover, Pa.

The world's earliest known coins were lumps of silver stamped with marks of Lydian kings in the 7th Century B.C.

Out Of The Past

ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO

The Weather And The Poor: The weather continues delightful and remarkably mild for this season of the year. Should it continue so until after the holidays, the whole winter, comparatively speaking, will be a short one, and spring will be upon us ere we have half realized that we have passed through a season of frost and snow. — Should our present hope be realized the poor will have cause to be thankful; for should the present winter prove as long and severe as the last one, their sufferings and privations would be greatly augmented. Let us hope then that the present winter will be a mild one, and that the spring will open with a general revival of business, and that "hard times come again no more" will find no sorrowful singer through the whole length and breadth of the land.

Today's Talk

THE ENTHUSIASTS

The world's best has been achieved by those who believed in better things, and whose enthusiasm gave birth to new ideas, new inventions and new enterprises. The enthusiasts who arm themselves with faith are the ones who put hope and spirit into the world.

It has often been said that nothing worth while has ever been accomplished without enthusiasm. The brave of the earth can testify to this fact. How about Columbus, Ford, Edison, Westinghouse, Pasteur, and countless others? How about those who first settled the West, after great sacrifices, including hunger and all manner of hardships?

The enthusiasts are the builders of better things and a better world. Their faith has been contagious and inexhaustible. An example to us all. What a permanent debt we owe to the scientists and to all builders! Not a mother's son of us should ever become totally discouraged. We should always take heart and go forward. The best things in life are the ones yet to be! Leave all your doubts behind. This day will never dawn again. Live it well while you may.

I have in my office a small ing press. This has been in my replica of Franklin's first printing press. This has been in my mind as I have watched the great printing presses of today gushing forth their thousands of newspapers, so fast you cannot count them. The press does this! It has taken enthusiasts to perfect the printing press of today.

What noble pieces of machinery are the latest models of the airplane! Did the Wrights have them in mind? They were the first to point the path. Let us join the enthusiasts and help toward a better and safer world.

Tomorrow Mr. Adams will talk on the subject: "No Room In The Inn"

CARDINAL IS VISITING GI'S

TOKYO (AP) — Francis Cardinal Spellman, Roman Catholic archbishop of New York, moved at top speed through a full schedule today on his annual Christmas visit to GIs around the world.

The cardinal, who arrived yesterday aboard a crippled airliner, called on U.S. Ambassador Douglas MacArthur II and Lt. Gen. Charles D. Palmer, commanding general of the U.S. Army in Japan.

The 68-year-old prelate also met patients in the Camp Zama U.S. Army hospital and celebrated mass for personnel at the U.S. 5th Air Force headquarters at Fuchu Air Force Base and at Camp Zama.

The cardinal, who is military vicar of the U.S. armed forces, leaves tomorrow for South Korea.

The four-engine airliner which brought him came in with one propeller feathered. The pilot alerted the airport and six Japanese fire engines converged on the scene but the big ship landed without mishap.

Ocean-going vessels can go into the Port of Baltimore because a suspension span in the center of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge lifts it 198 feet above the ship channel.

Santa's Helpers A Simpson's

a tendancy to wear out before the year is out. So ten big express wagons were entirely built.

Given Road Test

Wilbur Henninger, Railroad St., built the wooden bodies 22 inches wide, by 36 inches long with a half-inch marine plyboard bottom and one by four-inch maple sides. Simpson's Machine Shop employes welded together heavy metal undercarriages and 12-inch wheels with roller bearings were placed on the heavy frames. The result was a wagon able to hold 500 pounds and with a great willingness to coast — Simpson and his men "field tested" the wagons.

Funds on hand also permitted purchase of 12 new 16-inch tricycles of the sturdiest construction.

Simpson revealed htat the Christmas project has become a year around program. Last summer his steel crew went to the Protectory and built nine big swings and this year hope to place additional playground equipment at the home.

Lists Helpers

Among those listed by Simpson as aiding in the renovation of the Christmas toys are: John Sachs, Gettysburg R. 1; Guy Horner, Gettysburg R. D.; Charles Riley, Baltimore St.; George Bower, Harney; Francis Ruth, Fairfield; Paul Ready, Gettysburg R. D.; Michael Witherow, Gettysburg R. D.; Robert Welty, Gettysburg R. D.; Harry Woods, Gettysburg R. D.; Charles Althoff, Hanover St.; Jay Brown, Howard Ave.; Kenneth Hess, Hanover St.; Harry Scott, Hanover St.; Charles Heagy, McSherrystown; John Codori, York St.; Redding Supply, Stouck-Reaser, Shelby and Orner, Citizens Oil Co., J. R. Weaver and Co., Frank Linn, Glenn L. Bream Inc., Wilbur Henninger, Railroad St., and "especially" Leo Dete, and the Carlisle Tire and Rubber Co. whose donation of all tires and tubes for the large bicycles permitted use of funds for such items as the new tricycles and wagons.

Grand Secretary Of Masons Passes Away

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—The Rev. George A. Avery, 65, grand secretary of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, Free and Accepted Masons, died yesterday at University Hospital.

The Rev. Mr. Avery, who became the state Masonic group's secretary on his retirement from active ministerial service in 1952, was pastor of the Hope Presbyterian Church in South Philadelphia for 35 years.

Recently he had lived at nearby Secane, Pa.

Surviving are his widow, the former Minnie Thomas; a stepson, Howard Avery Milligan, and a sister, Mrs. Anna Donald.

Funeral services will be held Thursday, with burial in Arlington Cemetery, Drexel Hill, Pa.

GRAND UNION TO FACE U.S. CHARGE

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Federal Trade Commission has charged the Grand Union Co. with obtaining illegal promotional allowances from suppliers.

The FTC issued a complaint yesterday accusing the supermarket chain of inviting and receiving advertising payments "which it knew or should have known were not made equally available to its competitors."

The payments were allegedly made by various companies to have their products advertised in a panel of Grand Union's illuminated sign in New York Time's Square.

Under its agreement with Douglas Leigh, Inc., the New York advertising agency which built and operated the sign, the FTC said, Grand Union received from the agency a share of the monthly rental paid by the other advertisers.

The supermarket chain, with headquarters in East Paterson, N.J., leased the sign from the Leigh agency for $50 a month on a contract which provided that the food chain would obtain the participation of 15 other advertisers who were charged about $1,000 each. The FTC said payments to Grand Union totaled almost $15,000 in the nine months from July 1954 to March 1955.

ROBBER MISSES $25,000 IN GEMS

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A burglar who entered a 207-year-old renovated home of a wealthy suburbanite ignored a small fortune in gems and escaped with $200 yesterday.

The thief broke into the home of Harry A. Spock on a 140 acre estate in suburban Whitemarsh. He entered the Spock bedroom and took $200 from the top of a bureau while Spock and his wife, Stella, slept.

The Spocks said the burglar ignored some $25,000 in jewelry in plain view, plus a $3,500 mink coat and a quantity of antique silver on a downstairs buffet.

Police believe the same burglar broke into the nearby rectory of the Rev. James R. MacColl a short time earlier.

The Rev. Mr. MacColl said he and his wife were awakened by an intruder in their bedroom. He said to the man, "do you know you are on church property and I am a minister?"

The thief was quoted as replying:

"O—Well, I want you to know I want nothing but money."

He took $12 and disappeared, the Rev. Mr. MacColl said.

(CAMDEN, N. J. (AP)—Harry Brinning, 48, of Langhorne, Pa., was killed yesterday when his car crashed into a tree on the Pine Hill-Erial road after overshooting a curve. He was dead on arrival at Our Lady of Lourdes Hospital here.

The Legacy Of Luke

A Memorable Interview Preserves Mary's Inspiring Triumph Of Faith

EDITOR'S NOTE: Were it not for the gospel of Luke, the world would not possess the powerfully moving words spoken between Mary and the messenger of the Lord at the Annunciation. There is reason to believe Luke received the information directly from view may have come about.

By GEORGE CORNELL
Associated Press Religion Writer

Only a mother knows the measure of that greatest drama: The bringing into the world of a new child.

No other could realize the yearnings, the anxieties and uncertainties, the tremendous joys and high dreams of bestowing life. No other but God.

So it was that the perceptive physician Luke, in his project to trace the genesis of Jesus, turned his course toward Mary. He walked rapidly, astir with hope.

It was about 20 miles from Nazareth to Capernaum, past undulating fields, vineyards and clusters of acacias and yew trees. Oxen-pulled carts, loaded with autumn's final crops, trundled along the road.

Luke glanced at the gray sky. Winter's rains soon would be starting. Smoke hung over the farm houses, and from within the rock pens came shouts, and the bleating of sheep getting a last shearing of the year.

Best Source

If Mary still lived, she would be in her 70s now. Almost 30 years before, her Son had made His tremendous sacrifice for man. Luke prayed silently. Grant that he might find her . . . she could reveal so much. . . .

The road curved steadily downward, descending from the high, clear region of Nazareth, 1,600 feet in elevation, to the Galilee lake, 700 feet below sea level, and on beside the clear, murmurous lake.

Here, on these shores, the Lord of Lords had stood and preached, a commanding figure, serene as the sun, forceful as lightning. Luke's eyes were misty as he passed the seven fountains and entered the fishing town of Capernaum.

It was a gray town, built of somber gray basalt. Gray streets, gray walls, gray houses. Like shadows, strangely shaped and solidified, their grayness darkened by the overcast.

Metropolitan Museum of Art

HANS BURGKMAIR the elder, a German painter and engraver, paid homage to St. Luke—the patron of artists—in this woodcut showing Luke painting Mary and a child. Although there is no original to prove it, legend says Luke was the painter of the first madonna.

A woman with a basket of onions on her head directed Luke to the house of John. This hardy apostle, the youngest of Jesus' band, would be about 50 little older than Luke. At the crucifixion, he had taken Mary into his care.

Bright Pleasantness

The house seemed different than the others. It was built of the same gray stone, but there was a bright pleasantness about it. A trellised bower of roses and golden heliotrope and oleander bloomed behind the hedges.

There, in the countryard, John sat mending a net.

"Peace be unto you."

Luke moved through the gate, and after they had exchanged blessings, the Greek doctor explained his purpose. John nodded slowly, meditatively. He stepped to the door, and pulled aside the woven covering for Luke to enter.

Was Mary there? There is no proof that Luke talked with her, but indications that he did are many and persuasive. He alone obtained intimate material about Jesus' infancy.

His language, in his book, is typically Greek in style, except for portions devoted to Mary, which have a distinctive semitic flavor as if quoting her own words directly.

Moreover, Luke himself writes that no one but Mary had the information. "Mary kept all these things . . . in her heart." Presumably, he saw her, must have had that exclusive, memorable interview.

The years had not aged her. Her skin was still soft and smooth, and her eyes shone with a tender, wise tranquility. She pressed Luke's hand, smiling, and led him to a stone seat in the garden.

The perfume of full-throated flowers was in the air.

Cherished Memories

Indeed, the coming of her beloved Son had been long ago, but those moments lived on in her mind and soul. Mary spoke quietly, her words caressing each cherished memory, each precious scene.

He had been hers, yet not hers; he had belonged, yet not belonged: what made him so dear also had parted him from her. Of many things, she had told no one before. Yet, it should be known.

She had been a young virgin, betrothed to Joseph in a happy, festive ceremony held at full moon before witnesses and neighbors in Nazareth. In turn the couple had sipped the cup of ritual wine. "Blessed, art thou, O Lord . . . who has sanctified . . . the betrothed . . ." Honey wafers had been passed to the guests.

Not long thereafter the miracle had occurred. To her, shy and pious, had come the bewildering message, brought by an angel of God. "Hail, O favored one," he had said, "the Lord is with you."

Mary shook her head, still overwhelmed by the astounding appearance of years ago. "I was greatly troubled at the saying," she related, "and considered in my mind what sort of greeting this might be."

Unobtrusively, Luke etched her words on his wax tablet. She went on.

"Found Favor With God"

The angel had said to her, "Do not be afraid Mary, for you have found favor with God. And behold, you will conceive in your womb and bear a son, and you shall call his name Jesus."

Mary's voice took on a melodious quality, like muted singing, as she repeated the angel's saying about her Son: "He will be great, and will be called the Son of the Most High . . . and of his kingdom there will be no end."

Mary recalled her stunned question: "How can this be since I have no husband?"

And the angel had said, "The Holy Spirit will come upon you, and the power of the Most High will overshadow you; therefore the child to be born will be called holy, the son of God . . ."

And Mary had said: "Behold, I am the handmaid of the Lord; let it be to me according to your word."

Luke's hand trembled as he marked down the wondrous passages. Mary told how, in her excitement, she had left Nazareth, and hastened to the home of her elderly cousin, Elizabeth, in Judea, who had met her with a jubilant, intuitive cry:

"Blessed are you among women, and blessed is the fruit of your womb . . . mother of my Lord."

Remembers Incident

Mary, remembering the incident, spoke very low, and Luke leaned toward her to catch each word. She seemed to be experiencing anew the emotions she knew then, and again, low and sweet, came the singing tones—the reverent, thrilled rapture of a maiden opening her heart at her older kinswoman's salutation:

"My soul magnifies the Lord, and my spirit rejoices in God my Savior, for He has regarded the low estate of his handmaiden. For behold, henceforth, all generations will call me blessed; for He who is mighty has done great things for me, and holy is His name . . . He has put down the mighty from their thrones, and exalted those of low degree; he has. . . ."

The song continued, beautiful, exalting, pure strains of human transport at one with God, and Luke inscribed all the words—words that would be the great hymns of Christianity — the Ave Maria, the Magnificat, the Benedicta, the Gloria in Excelsis.

Many other things, too, Luke alone learned concerning Mary and the child she reared. She went into her curtained room and from a chest, inscribed with the heraldic Lion of David, she took scrolls and ancestral documents to show him.

Ancient church traditions say that Luke, an artist and musician as well as a physician, painted a picture of Mary during his stay at the garden-enclosed house in Capernaum.

There, he had touched the well-spring of the majestic moment, of God's rendezvous with man, the juncture of flesh and eternity. But Luke's mission still was unfinished. He had yet to reconstruct that arduous, fateful trip to Bethlehem.

PARAMOUNT IS UNHAPPY ABOUT PRESLEY DRAFT

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Elvis Presley reports Jan. 20 for induction into the Army—unless Hollywood manages to have it put off eight weeks.

Draft board greetings for the 22-year-old rock 'n roll idol arrived Friday. He accepted it with far more calm than did his manager or Paramount pictures.

"I'm kinda proud of it," he said with a cheerful wink. "It's a duty I've got to fill and I'm going to do it. Daddy's already told me to be a good soldier or bust."

No Cheer At Paramount

There was no cheer at Paramount. In Hollywood, studio head Y. Frank Freeman said if Presley can't show up as scheduled Jan. 13, the studio will lose $300,000 already sunk in preparing to film "King Creole."

"I'm going to ask the draft board in Memphis if it will please postpone Elvis' induction for exactly eight weeks," Freeman said.

And there was nothing cheerful about the situation to Presley's manager, Tom Parker of Nashville, Tenn., who can't help but think of the drop in income.

Will Cost Half Million

Presley makes $50,000 or so with a couple of personal appearances. As an Army private he would draw $78 a month.

Parker said the draft notice would cost Presley half a million dollars in gross income immediately. Beyond, that, he said, it would be difficult to estimate.

In addition to Paramount's plans, there was a contract with 20th Century-Fox for a movie that would pay Presley $200,000. Another picture for Metro-Goldwyn Mayer in the fall would pay $275,000 plus a percentage of the profits.

Says U. S. Will Lose

Parker said the income tax loss to the government next year, with Presley in uniform, would amount to at least half a million, not to mention the cost of his upkeep.

"Of course," he said, "that's not as important as having the government treat everybody the same."

If inducted here, Presley would go to Ft. Chaffee near the city of Fort Smith, Ark.

Army service would interrupt a career that started for Presley in early 1955. In less than a year, the guitar-picking, hip-slinging singer was drawing capacity crowds of frantic fans.

The Associated Press named him 1956 Man of the Year in entertainment.

SAYS INDONESIA WILL NEGOTIATE DUTCH PROBLEM

JAKARTA (AP) — Foreign Minister Subandro told Parliament Saturday Indonesia is ready to negotiate the West New Guinea dispute, but the Netherlands must take the initiative.

Subandrio said a soluion may be sought through "negotiation or reconciliation" if the Dutch are prepared to settle the question peacefully.

Asserting that Indonesia on four occasions had tried unsuccessfully outside the United Nations to negotiate, the foreign minister declared that "it is now up to the Dutch."

Subandrio said if the question is not settled "we shall feel compelled to embark upon a policy of precluding the development of Dutch interests in Indonesia."

Puts Out Feelers

In The Hague, reliable sources said Indonesian Premier Djuanda has put out feelers to see whether the Netherlands will discuss relations between the two countries, badly strained since Indonesia began a pressure campaign against the Dutch in the island republic three weeks ago.

Asked whether there is a possibility of discussions, Dutch Foreign Minister Joseph Luns said: "I would certainly not say no."

The Netherlands previously has expressed willingness to talk, but not about West New Guinea, which Indonesia demands.

Want Future Satisfied

Dutch sources said The Hague would like to be satisfied about the future of Dutch property in Indonesia before any negotiations. Indonesia has taken over Dutch businesses, plantations, shipping operations, and other enterprises

Subandrio told a tense and crowded session of Parliament that news reports abroad were erroneous in saying Indonesia had ordered a mass evacuation of the 46,000 Dutchmen in the country.

"We have never issued any such statement any time, either before or after this campaign began," the foreign minister said.

As economic paralysis caused by the anti-Dutch campaign spread, the Cabinet called a special session to discuss means of heading off a potential rice famine.

COUPLE TO LOSE ADOPTED BABY

TORONTO (AP) — A couple who have been ordered to return their three-year-old adopted son to his American mother say they hope they will not have to give him up before Christmas.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond McNeilly of Scarborough, a suburb of Toronto, said losing Donald Cletus Agar will be a great shock.

"We've bought most of his presents," McNeilly said, "and he's expecting Santa to come here."

The Supreme Court of Canada Thursday upheld an Ontario Appeal Court ruling granting custody of Donald to his mother, Helen May Agar of Minneapolis.

Donald was put up for adoption immediately after his birth in Toronto. He has been with the McNeillys since he was six days old.

His mother won custody of the boy after contending that she signed adoption papers while in a weakened mental and physical condition.

The McNeillys said they signed a formal application for adoption but that there was never a formal adoption order.

Garretson Home Wins

The home of Earl Garretson on N. Main St., Biglerville, was judged the first place winner for overall lighting in the annual home decorations contest held by the Biglerville Business Club. The home is tastefully decorated with Christmas decorations and three wooden carol singers grace the yard, but the top effect is given by the colored lighting, which cannot be seen in black and white picture.

The Weeders Guide

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

CHAPPAQUA, N. Y. — The season for fireside gardening has begun and, of course, we are well into the Christmas shopping activity.

The easiest persons in the world to buy presents for are gardeners: there are always new varieties of plants to order; new garden gadgets to buy, and there's not a homeowner in the world who doesn't adore a Yuletide note saying that come March there will arrive a quantity of seed.

In this latter case, the present to be delivered in the future is even more welcome if the giver indicates specifically what he proposes to give: such seed as, for example, miniature zinnias, certain herbs, new columbines or such. This helps the gardeners when, in a couple of months, he is making out his own list of seeds.

One of my favorite gifts this coming Christmas will be a little tool I found in a hardware store called a "crab jack." It is a little metal tool with short tines on the end of a bent bar, obviously designed for those who still handweed crabgrass. I found it a fine general weeding tool, and used it constantly all season. It only costs $1.25, and makes a fine stocking-stuffer.

Another excellent gift — with delayed impact — is a gift of bulbs. A neighbor of mine just finished planting a 1956 Christmas gift of bulbs a few weeks ago. If you'd like a little faster action, give an order for summer-flowering or fall-flowering bulbs — varieties which most gardeners, even those who go in for the spring-flowering daffodils and tulips, too often overlook.

There used to be a joke about the gentleman who gave his wife a yard of well-rotted manure for a present. There are so many of us who are garden hobbyists today that it's no joke any more — particularly with that particular fertilizer as scarce and expensive as it is today. However, a 100-pound bag of commercial fertilizer, or a quantity of dehydrated organic material is always a most welcome present. So are such basic garden weapons as insecticides and weed-killers, although it is a good idea in such cases to make the gift in the form of a promissory note, to be delivered when needed so the material is fresh and effective.

There is really no end to garden gifts. We all love new gardening gloves. Pruning shears, from small to large, are always needed. Presents can range in price from a bunch of special plastic plant labels for less than a dollar to a tractor, complete with all accessories. Personally, I'm in the market for 15 new tomato stakes — nine feet tall and treated with creosote, if you don't mind; about six half-bushel baskets; some low, eight-inch African violet pots and a screen to sift compost through.

SAYS MOST TV STARS SET BAD EXAMPLE TO U. S.

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK (AP) — Most male television stars dress sloppily, have bad posture and set a poor example for the country's youth.

So says Larry L. Mack, president of a slenderizing firm, whom the New York Custom Tailors Guild has chosen one of the best-dressed men in America.

'Most college students, although tightly limited in funds, look neater and dress better than many of our highest paid TV stars," Mack said the other day.

Some Exceptions

"Of course there are many well dressed men on television, but most of them are masters of cermonies and newscasters. Few rank as stars. Bob Hope and Jack Benny are notable exceptions: they have always dressed in impeccable taste and invariably look dapper.

"Others who make a good appearance include Dennis Day, Mike Wallace, Steve Allen, Ed Murrow and John Cameron Swayze. Among the younger men who choose their clothes with care is Pat Boone."

Who's the worst dressed man to appear on television in recent seasonsb

Elvis Is Sloppiest

Elvis Presley, says Mack. "You can try—but it's impossible to look more sloppy than Presley. His clothes have that unmade-bed look, as if he shops in a bargain basement."

Other TV personalities whose style of dress leaves much to be desired, in Mack's opinion, are Liberace and Lawrence Welk.

"They go from one extreme to another," he said. "Liberace's dazzling jackts are too spectacular to be in good taste. Welk's are too nondescript. Liberace also is guilty of wearing out-size cufflinks. They look like miniature Sputniks."

Reminded that Jackie Gleason reputedly has the biggest wardrobe of any television male performer, Mack said:

"No man as fat as Gleason can be called well dressed, no matter how much he spends on his clothes nor how well they are cut. If he shelved 75 pounds, his wardrobe would appear to much better advantage. So would he."

Expects Squadrons Of Missiles Soon

NEW YORK (AP)—Gen. Lauris Norstad, leader of NATO's military forces, says he expects 6 to 10 squadrons of 15 intermediate missiles each will be placed in treaty organization countries within a year to 18 months.

Norstad was interviewed on NBC-TV's Meet the Press. It was shown yesterday but filmed earlier in the Palais de Chaillot in Paris, scene of the meeting last week of the heads of the NATO governments.

The United States offered at the meeting to make missiles available to other countries of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Norstad did not pinpoint the locations of the new bases. But he said he foresaw no difficulty in their distribution.

BURNING ISSUE

PONCA CITY, Okla. (AP)—Mrs. H. E. Briggs was so anxious to get to church with her family, she forgot all about Sunday dinner. It was in the stove, and the big roast burned. Neighbors called the fire department as smoke billowed out the kitchen window.

MUSICAL BURGLAR

PORT HURON, Mich. (AP) — A music-minded burglar played tunes on the organ in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Warren A. Beach before departing with about $25 and a bottle of wine. The Beaches found the controls of the organ had been shifted.

PROSPECTIVE FATHER-IN-LAW KILLS SUITOR

NEW YORK (AP)—A 28-year-old Brooklyn man, who was to have been married Christmas day, was shot to death yesterday by his prospective father-in-law.

Police gave this account:

Francisco Napoleon Landa, 60, telephoned police about 1 a.m. yesterday and said: "I shot a man with a rifle. He's dead."

Going to Landa's Manhattan apartment, patrolmen found Jacob Kalisch, a refrigerator repairman, dead on the floor. He had been shot through the throat.

Landa said he did not like Kalisch, who was to have married his red-haired daughter Maybelle, 32. The older man said he especially disliked what he termed Kalisch's hot temper.

Lana said Kalisch knocked on his apartment door shortly before 1 a.m. and demanded entrance. Landa's wife and daughter were at a late movie.

When he refuse to open the door, Landa said, Kalisch kicked it in. Landa said he then went to a closet, brought out the gun and fired.

Landa was held in $5,000 bond on a homicide charge.

SAYS INDONESIA WILL NEGOTIATE DUTCH PROBLEM

JAKARTA (AP) — Foreign Minister Subandro told Parliament Saturday Indonesia is ready to negotiate the West New Guinea dispute, but the Netherlands must take the initiative.

Subandrio said a solution may be sought through "negotiation or reconciliation" if the Dutch are prepared to settle the question peacefully.

Asserting that Indonesia on four occasions had tried unsuccessfully outside the United Nations to negotiate the foreign minister declared that "it is now up to the Dutch."

Subandrio said if the question is not settled "we shall feel compelled to embark upon a policy of precluding the development of Dutch interests in Indonesia."

Puts Out Feelers

In The Hague, reliable sources said Indonesian Premier Djuanda has put out feelers to see whether the Netherlands will discuss relations between the two countries badly strained since Indonesia began a pressure campaign against the Dutch in the island republic three weeks ago.

Asked whether there is a possibility of discussions, Dutch Foreign Minister Joseph Luns said: "I would certainly not say no."

The Netherlands previously has expressed willingness to talk, but not about West New Guinea, which Indonesia demands.

Want Future Satisfied

Dutch sources said The Hague would like to be satisfied about the future of Dutch property in Indonesia before any negotiations. Indonesia has taken over Dutch businesses, plantations, shipping operations and other enterprises.

Subandrio told a tense and crowded session of Parliament that news reports abroad were erroneous in saying Indonesia had ordered a mass evacuation of the 46,000 Dutchmen in the country.

"We have never issued any such statement any time either before or after this campaign began," the foreign minister said.

As economic paralysis caused by the anti-Dutch campaign spread, the Cabinet called a special session to discuss means of warding off a potential rice famine.

COUPLE TO LOSE ADOPTED BABY

TORONTO (AP) — A couple who have been ordered to return their three-year-old adopted son to his American mother say "now hope they will not have to give him up before Christmas.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond McNeily of Scarborough, a suburb of Toronto, said losing Donald Curtis Agar will be a great shock.

"We've bought most of his presents," McNeily said, "and he's expecting Santa to come here."

The Supreme Court of Canada Thursday upheld an Ontario Appeal Court ruling granting custody of Donald to his mother, Helen May Agar of Minneapolis.

Donald was put up for adoption immediately after his birth in Toronto. He has been with the McNeilys since he was six days old.

His mother won custody of the boy after contending that she signed adoption papers while in a weakened mental and physical condition.

The McNeilys said they signed a formal application for adoption but that there was never a formal adoption order.

Garretson Home Wins

The home of Earl Garretson on N. Main St., Biglerville, was judged the first place winner for overall lighting in the annual home decorations contest held by the Biglerville Business Club. The home is tastefully decorated with Christmas decorations and three wooden carol singers grace the yard, but the top effect is given by the colored lighting, which cannot be seen in black and white picture.

The Weeders Guide

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

CHAPPAQUA, N. Y. — The season for fireside gardening has begun and, of course, we are well into the Christmas shopping activity.

The easiest persons in the world to buy presents for are gardeners. there are always new varieties of plants to order, new garden gadgets to buy and there's not a homeowner in the world who doesn't adore a Yuletide note saying that come March there will arrive a quantity of seed.

In this latter case, the present to be delivered in the future is even more welcome if the giver indicates specifically what he proposes to give, such seed as, for example, miniature zinnias, certain herbs, new columbines or such. This helps the gardeners when, in a couple of months, he is making out his own list of seeds.

One of my favorite gifts this coming Christmas will be a little tool I found in a hardware store called a "crab jack." It is a little metal tool with short tines on the end of a bent bar, obviously designed for those who still handweed crabgrass. I found it a fine general weeding tool, and used it constantly all season. It only costs $1.25, and makes a fine stocking-stuffer.

Another excellent gift — with delayed impact — is a gift of bulbs. A neighbor of mine just finished planting a 1956 Christmas gift of bulbs a few weeks ago. If you'd like a little faster action, give an order for summer-flowering or fall-flowering bulbs — varieties which most gardeners, even those who go in for the spring-flowering daffodils and tulips too often overlook.

There used to be a joke about the gentleman who gave his wife a yard of well-rotted manure for a present. There are so many of us who are garden hobbyists today that it's no joke any more — particularly with that particular fertilizer as scarce and expensive as it is today. However a 100-pound bag of commercial fertilizer, or a quantity of dehydrated organic material is always a most welcome present. So are such basic garden weapons as insecticides and weed-killers, although it is a good idea in such cases to make the gift in the form of a promissory note, to be delivered when needed so the material is fresh and effective.

There is really no end to garden gifts. We all love new gardening gloves. Pruning shears from small to large are always needed. Presents can range in price from a bunch of special plastic plant labels for less than a dollar to a tractor, complete with all accessories. Personally, I'm in the market for 15 new tomato stakes — nine feet tall and treated with creosote, if you don't mind; about six half-bushel baskets; some low eight-inch African violet pots and a screen to sift compost through.

SAYS MOST TV STARS SET BAD EXAMPLE TO U. S.

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK (AP) — Most male television stars dress sloppily, have bad posture and set a poor example for the country's youth.

So says Larry L. Mack, president of a slenderizing firm, whom the New York Custom Tailors Guild has chosen one of the best-dressed men in America.

"Most college students although tightly limited in funds, look neater and dress better than many of our highest paid TV stars," Mack said the other day.

Some Exceptions

"Of course there are many well dressed men on television, but most of them are masters of ceremonies and newscasters. Few rank as stars. Bob Hope and Jack Benny are notable exceptions. They have always dressed in impeccable taste and invariably look dapper.

"Others who make a good appearance include Dennis Day, Mike Wallace, Steve Allen, Ed Murrow and John Cameron Swayze. Among the younger men who choose their clothes with care is Pat Boone."

Who's the worst dressed man to appear on television in recent seasons?

Elvis Is Sloppiest

Elvis Presley, says Mack. "You can try—but it's impossible to look more sloppy than Presley. His clothes have that unmade-bed look, as if he shops in a bargain basement."

Other TV personalities whose style of dress leaves much to be desired, in Mack's opinion are Liberace and Lawrence Welk.

"They go from one extreme to another," he said. "Liberace's dazzling jackets are too spectacular to be in good taste. Welk's are too nondescript. Liberace also is guilty of wearing out-size cufflinks. They look like miniature Sputniks."

Reminded that Jackie Gleason reputedly has the biggest wardrobe of any television male performer, Mack said:

"No man as fat as Gleason can be called well dressed, no matter how much he spends on his clothes nor how well they are cut. If he shelved 75 pounds, his wardrobe would appear to much better advantage. So would he."

Paint will not adhere to a waxed surface. Before undertaking any painting project, remove all traces of wax by washing the surface with turpentine. Then dry and clean the surface with fresh, clean rags or cheesecloth.

Expects Squadrons Of Missiles Soon

NEW YORK (AP)—Gen. Lauris Norstad, leader of NATO's military forces, says he expects 6 to 10 squadrons of 15 intermediate missiles each will be placed in treaty organization countries within a year to 18 months.

Norstad was interviewed on NBC-TV's Meet the Press. It was shown yesterday but filmed earlier in the Palais de Chaillot in Paris, scene of the meeting last week of the heads of the NATO governments.

The United States offered at the meeting to make missiles available to other countries of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Norstad did not pinpoint the locations of the new bases. But he said he foresaw no difficulty in their distribution.

BURNING ISSUE

PONCA CITY, Okla. (AP)—Mrs. H. E. Briggs was so anxious to get to church with her family she forgot all about Sunday dinner. It was in the stove and the big roast burned. Neighbors called the fire department as smoke billowed out the kitchen window.

MUSICAL BURGLAR

PORT HURON, Mich. (AP) — A music-minded burglar played tunes on the organ in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Warren A. Beach before departing with about $25 and a bottle of wine. The Beaches found the controls of the organ had been shifted.

Some good cooks like to add a suspicion of lemon juice to their pastry for fruit pies.

PROSPECTIVE FATHER-IN-LAW KILLS SUITOR

NEW YORK (AP) — A 28-year-old Brooklyn man who was to have been married Christmas day was shot to death yesterday by his prospective father-in-law.

Police gave the account.

Francisco Napoleon Landa, 60, telephoned police about 1 a.m. yesterday and said: "I shot a man with a rifle. He's dead."

Going to Landa's Manhattan apartment, policemen found Jacob Kalisch, a refrigerator repairman, dead on the floor. He had been shot through the throat.

Landa said he did not like Kalisch, who was to have married his red-haired daughter Maybelle, 32. The older man said he especially disliked what he termed Kalisch's temper.

Landa said Kalisch knocked on his apartment door, and, before 1 a.m. and demanded entrance. Landa's wife and daughter were at a late movie.

When he refused to open the door, Landa said, Kalisch kicked it in. Landa said he then went to a closet, brought out the gun and fired.

Landa was held in $5,000 bond on a homicide charge.

The Legacy Of Luke

Luke's Careful Research Establishes Time, Reason For Bethlehem Journey

EDITOR'S NOTE: The classic Biblical example of lack of charity is the innkeeper's refusal to make room for the travel-weary Mary and Joseph on what now is called Christmas Eve. Here is an account of how Luke might have obtained the background for this touching story.

By GEORGE CORNELL
Associated Press Religion Writer

The old, clay-brick inn stood just inside the east gate of Bethlehem. Luke, the physician and writer, threaded his way through the street traffic, tired and dust-grimed.

So this was the inn that had no room for Mary as her time grew near. A wind, carrying the first chill of winter, rippled Luke's cloak as he made his way toward it.

He had trudged many leagues in the last few months, assembling his chronicle of Christ. He had been over the nearly 100 miles that Mary and Joseph traveled to reach this ancestral city of David. He knew their travail.

But Luke, a painstaking researcher, had also gathered items in distant places, in the consulates of Antioch and Damascus, prying into official Roman annals and enactments to pinpoint the time of the nativity of his Lord.

"In those days," he would write later, "a decree went out from Caesar Augustus that all the world should be enrolled. This was the first enrollment, when Quirinius was governor of Syria." None but Luke gives the date or the circumstances.

Dispute His Report

Historians for centuries disputed his report, claiming Quirinius was not Syria's governor until 6 A.D. But modern archeological findings show Quirinius previously had been military governor when Rome ordered its first massive census.

The careful Luke was correct. These enrollments, held at 14-year intervals by the empire following that first one, were not to collect taxes, but to compile lists for future levies. Jews, by custom, had to register at the original seat of their tribe or clan.

For Mary and Joseph, this had meant a hard, hazardous trip from Nazareth, with her in most fragile condition. All of it had happened 60 years before Luke pieced together the sequence, but he had verified each step of the way.

As suggested by Matthew and by Mary's own words, however tactfully phrased, Luke knew there had been some shock among people in Nazareth when she conceived.

Needed Her Husband

Although she was not required by law to accompany Joseph for the enrollment, she did so rather than remain alone among tongue-wagging neighbors, even with the delivery of her child near at hand. She needed her husband at her side.

Luke had retraced their journey, from the slopes of Nazareth down into the mosquito-swarming

Metropolitan Museum of Art

ALBRECHT DURER, the German Renaissance painter who achieved unsurpassed perfection in his woodcuts, executed this Visitation scene as part of a series on the life of the Virgin. During her visit to Elizabeth, Mary first made known she was to be the mother of the Messiah.

marshes of the Jordan, and on into the rocky footpaths of Judea.

This route, though often traveled by Galileans to avoid the hostile main road through anti-Jewish Samaria, was an exhausting, rugged passage, cruelly hot in summer, a soggy, dank morass in winter.

Mary and Joseph made the trip in the cold, wet season, with their one donkey, a bag of food, a goatskin of water and a few coverlets folded on the donkey's back. It must have been a terrible strain.

On the way down from Nazareth, Luke had halted briefly several times to treat the sick. He administered wormwood extract to a child in Nain with an intestinal infection.

Renders First Aid

A little farther on, he bound up a sickle cut on a farmer's leg after disinfecting it with wine oil. Near Beth-shean, he put a hot fig poultice on a stonemason with a furuncle on his neck, then gathered his apothecary kit, and went on.

"Inasmuch as you have done it to one of the least of these, my brethren," Jesus had said, "ye have done it unto me."

As Luke followed the course of Joseph and Mary along the serpentine river, with its overgrown swamps and bogs, he could visualize the trials they met. Creatures hissed and croaked in the moss-draped mangroves, and insects buzzed at one's ears.

At night, sparks of eyes glittered from the foliage, jackals yapped, bats whirred overhead and underbrush snapped with the movement of wild boars, cats and creepers. Mary and Joseph must have camped here at least one night.

It was a 40-mile stretch through the river bottom, but finally, the road swung back eastward, across the fords toward Archelais and Jericho in Judea.

Three-Day Trip

Altogether, the trip must have taken them at least three days, probably four, with worry about Mary in every step. Possibly they spent a night in a vineyard watchman's hut, or with other strangers. Jewish law urges such hospitality.

Luke had tramped on along the couple's path, through the odd, barren sink near Jericho, with its whirling columns of dust, on past ing the tortuous mountain roads, on past Rachel's tomb, and up the terraced plateau that sweeps upward like the walls of an amphitheater, dotted with pink almond trees and olives, to the heights of Bethlehem.

Visits the Inn

This was ancient Ephrath, patriarchal seat of David, city of the shepherd king—Bethlehem.

"And Joseph also went up from Galilee, from the city of Nazareth, to Judea, to the city of David, which is called Bethlehem, because he was of the house and lineage of David, to be enrolled with Mary, his betrothed, who was with child."

The inn was a two-floor structure, forming an enclosed courtyard in the rear. On the upper level were sleeping quarters for travelers. Below animals were sheltered. Luke could hear their bawling and braying.

The front gate faced the street. Along it moved donkey pack trains, burdened with wine casks and bales of flax. Traders haggled. Women caried baskets of linen to wash at a nearby pool. Slaves, with litters of rich owners, shouted, "Make way!"

Luke shouldered his way through idlers on the columned portico, and into the inn's big public room. A profusion of smoke, odors, shouts, laughter, babbling and lights assailed him.

Pleads For Room

This must have been what the desperate Joseph encountered when, his voice shaking and pleading, he asked a room for his weary wife, with her child only hours away.

"And while they were there, the time came for her to be delivered."

In the big room, a knot of leather-garbed Roman soldiers held tankards of cider, and sang lustily. Men wandered about, or lounged on seats. Arms reached out at serving women as they passed with steaming platters, amid loud laughter.

A fireplace crackled, and a sweating, bearded man, his tunic open at the chest, turned a spit of meat over it. Apparently he was the inn keeper. A younger man was roasting cuts of meat over two burning tripods. Somewhere, a dish crashed.

Luke approached the distraught innkeeper. "Might you be able . . ." He did not get to finish the question. The innkeeper barked: "There's no room, no room I tell you, no room!"

Luke, there at the bustlign inn, knew how it must have been for Joseph and Mary.

PROPOSALS ON SCHOLARSHIP PLAN LIKELY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Proposals for some sort of federal scholarship program probably will be offered in the new congressional session starting Jan. 7.

Rep. Barden (D-NC), chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee, said Saturday his committee "has been giving consideration to a program and will very likely make some expression of its views during the next session."

Barden, reached by telephone at his home in New Bern, N. C., said he preferred not to comment at this time on the proposals made yesterday by the National Education Assn.

NEA Suggestion

The NEA suggested the federal government start an educational support program of indefinite length which would increase in cost from about 1.1 billion dollars the first year to about 4.8 billion dollars in five years.

The NEA program includes proposals for college scholarships for at least 20,000 high school graduates each year, and at least 5,000 fellowships annually for university graduate study.

A statement from the NEA legislative commission suggested scholarship awards might average $1,200 per year to start and fellowships $3,000 per year. That would make the total starting cost for scholarships and fellowships about 40 million dollars annually. This would increase to about 160 millions in four years.

27 Bills So Far

Twenty-seven bills proposing federal scholarships in higher education have been referred to the House Education Committee. Six of them relate to scientific scholarships.

The NEA program, in addition to the scholarships and fellowships, proposes:

1. At least 25 million dollars a year for expansion of services of state education agencies in all fields, not alone in science and mathematics education or in testing and guidance

Other Proposals

2. Passage of pending legislation to allow teachers to make income tax deductions for the cost of professional improvement such as work at summer school.

3. Continuation of such federal activities as vocational education, library services and school lunches "until it can be demonstrated that the need can be met from other resources."

James L. McCaskill, NEA legislative director, and William G. Carr, NEA executive secretary, said at a news conference the whole NEA program should be carried out through state channels.

Sociable Hermit Says Don't Buy An Island To Be Alone

By HAL BOYLE

EVERGLADES CITY, Fla. (AP)—If you want solitude, take a tip from "the world's most sociable hermit"—don't buy an island.

"Most people say they'd like to have an island so they can be by themselves," said Roy Ozmer, 60, the hermit of Pelican Key. "But it doesn't work out that way.

"Last year I had more than 6,000 visitors—and thank God for every one of them. If I just sat out here twiddling my thumbs and listening to the birds, I'd be crazier than—well, than I am."

Everybody should be as crazy as Ozmer, a lean utterly friendly man who wears a green beret and a trim graying Van Dyke beard. He is one of the few men who wearied of steady work, turned to hermiting, and made it pay

Three-Acre Island

His paradise is a three-acre island seven miles from here, a key on which 260 varieties of trees, shrubs and flowers flourish. He settled here in 1949 as a career hermit after working as a merchant seaman, apple farmer, and movie exhibitor.

"I just got tired of the rat race and wanted out of it," he explained. "I got tired of working one week just to make enough to live the next week."

Ozmer's simple needs are easily met. He is so charming that everybody in the area vies in trying to help him. He has three shacks on the island and rents them out to sportsmen. Neighboring fishermen drop by his refuge to give him part of their catch.

Has Many Visitors

Tourists, anxious to see a real live hermit, come by the thousands to chat with him and share a hospitable coffee pot. Many insist on leaving a small money gift behnd, although the hermit never asks for anything. He doesn't have to.

"This place is like 42nd St. and Broadway," he remarked. "Sooner or later everybody gets here. And, unless they are liars, at least 75 per cent leave envying me. Anyway, that's what they say."

Among his visitors have been Mickey Rooney, Lt. Gen. James A. Doolittle, Gypsy Rose Lee and John L. Lewis.

Roy's philosophy toward the world can be gleaned from a number of defiant signs he has posted about his island. Here are a few:

"I will mind your baby, crank your motor, or cash your check, but I will not go fishing."

"Ladies tolerated."

"To hell with the Joneses!"

"Now at last I have a pot to put a petunia in and a window ledge to set it on."

The hermit isn't all alone. He has two dogs, "Little Sister" and "Boojum," and three pet egrets — "Doctor Doolittle," "Grumpy," and "Dopey," who like to chase and eat butterflies.

"A man has to have something to pamper," he said, "and they are pretty pampered."

DEATHS

NEW YORK (AP)—Walter Page, 57, jazz bass player who helped Count Basie bring jazz music to New York from the Midwest in 1935, died Friday. Page gave Basie one of his first jobs as a piano player. Basie now leads one of the foremost big jazz bands.

KENDALLVILLE, Ind. (AP)—Dr. C. B. Goodwin, 95, considered one of the oldest practicing physicians in the country, died of a heart attack Friday. He kept up an active practice, driving his own car on calls, until one week ago when he fell and fractured a hip.

SAYS STASSEN LACKS BACKING

PITTSBURGH (AP) — James F. Malone, president of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Assn., says he knows of no responsible Republican who would support Harold E. Stassen for the GOP gubernatorial nomination

In a statement recently Malone said several months ago he told Stassen "I couldn't find anybody who was for him," adding: "Today, I still can't find anyboy who is for him."

Stassen wrote letters this week to the state's Republican county chairmen ndicating he plans to seek the nomination.

In a separate statement Edward L. Flaherty, Allegheny County Chairman said:

"Definitely, I would not approve him (Stassen). He is not entitled to consideration for governor."

Committee Says No Extra Tax To Be Necessary To Finance Improvements At County Home

The fifth and final installment follows on the report submitted last Wednesday to the Adams County Commissioners by the Committee on the Adams County Home.

Comments Regarding Financing

Mention was made in Recommendation 5 that the estimated cost of the work on the Women's Building and the Men's Building would total $130,000. The cost of the Hub with equipment and the passageways is estimated at $50,000. If the sum of these is increased by $20,000 to cover the estimate of the cost of razing certain structures and for contingencies, the overall maximum sum required should not exceed $200,000.

The proceeds from the sale of the farm together with funds now in the possession of the Institution District should quite adequately provide the necessary monies for the recommended changes at the Home. Therefore, no extra tax levy should be necessary to provide the County with a modern County Home possessing adequate facilities for present needs and capable of being enllarged for possible future needs.

Don't Want Delay

Short term borrowing might be necessary to provide immediate funds at some stages of the renovation if the sale of the land did not keep pace with the improvements at the Home. However, it is recommended that the start of the renovation program should not await the acquisition of all funds that will be necessary to carry the program through to completion. As funds become available, the next step in the development program could be started. Or a step could even be undertaken if all the funds were not immediately available for its completion, knowing that borrowing could be done to complete it and that, at its completion, work could be stopped before the next step is undertaken.

There might be some saving to the County to contract for the complete renovation operation at one time. However, if such an arrangement were to delay materially the initiation of the program, it is recommended that such small savings be sacrificed.

Other Comments

Your committee wishes to call attention to a matter of finances unrelated to the proposed modernization program. The per diem cost of maintaining a guest in our County Home hase been less than the corresponding cost found to exist in any other home studied, be it public or private, profit or non-profit. While the reason for this may be, in part, due to good management, it is believed that there are other contributory factors.

Whereas the per diem cost as our Home is approximately $1.75, the average cost for other homes (not necessarily in seventh class counties) is in excess of three dollars. In some counties the figure is in excess of five dollars.

If the recommendations contained in this report with respect to the care of the indigent infirm are followed, costs will increase. However, it is believed that these costs can easily be kept in line with the average cost in other counties, with Adams County giving a type of service superior to many of the counties. It might be mentioned here that the members of your committee have come to believe, through contact with residents of the County, that they are perfectly willing to pay the costs of maintaining a modern, well - managed County Home, though such cost be materially in excess of present costs.

May Recover Some Costs

However, it is likely that some additional costs may be recovered. For instance, the employment of a case worker in connection with a program of homemaker service and foster home use can save money by keeping guests out of the County Home who might otherwise have to go there. Also, a case worker might be able to investigate more thoroughly whether or not applicants are eligible for entrance to the County Home. This, of course, depends somewhat on the resources, present or potential, of the individual. As more of the population become available for Social Security, it becomes increasingly important that the County know of this when application is being made. Since the County can recover the costs of maintaining an individual up to the extent of the resources of the individual, it is most important that a complete picture of his resources be available. Also, a case worker could keep informed of any change in this picture through a close liason with the relatives of the guest.

Some counties charge more for bedfast patients than for ambulatory guests, charges for the former sometimes being twice that of the latter. When an individual has resources, this matter might well be taken into consideration.

There are counties in the state which are performing rehabiliation services for the County Home guests, thereby enabling some residents to become self-supporting members of the community again. This service also helps to remove the belief so prevalent in County Homes that the road to the Home is a one-way road.

Conclusion

This report bears the signature of all five members of the committee. Of course, this does not imply that each signer endorses all recommendations without reservation. However, an unusual degree of unanimity of opinion exists with respect to the major parts of the report, and where there was a lack of complete harmony of opinion, it was with only isolated parts.

The committee sincerely hopes that this report be given careful consideration immediately, not only by the commissioners, but by public-spirited citizens as well. Your committee firmly recommends that if the renovation program is undertaken, no appreciable delay should be permitted. The danger is that if the county waits for all conditions to be ideal and for all problems to be solved before proceeding with the program, nothing will be done. If approval is given to the over-all renovation plan, the work on the women's building could begin as soon as detailed plans are available.

Your committee also recommends that the operation of the County Home be considered as a task where improvement is always possible. To avoid stagnation and satisfaction with the status quo, the search for means of improving the home and of making happier the lives of its guests should be a continuing part of the administration of the home.

(Dr. C. G. Crist endorses all Parts of this report except those parts dealing with foster homes, homemaker service and a special facility at the Warner Hospital. He also believes that all the farm land should be sold.)

APPROVES PAYMENT

The York court Saturday approved payment of $2,685 to George L. McMaster, 205 Oxford Rd., Mc-Sherrystown, on behalf of his 18-year-old son, Joseph Benedict McMaster. The youth suffered a fractured jaw and broken nose in a two-car crash near Reisterstown, Md., on June 7. McMaster was a passenger in a car owned by Kenneth D. Starner and driven at the time by Francis D. Kuhn, both of Hanover.

Fairfield

FAIRFIELD — Zion Lutheran Church will hold a candlelighting service Christmas Eve at 11 o'clock. The pastor will speak on "Bethlehem, Village of Revelation."

The Rev. John McAnulty, pastor of St. Mary's Catholic Church, has announced the following Christmas Day services: Preceding the Mass of midnight Tuesday the choir will sing Christmas carols beginning at 11:40 o'clock. Other Masses on Christmas morning will be at 7 and 9 o'clock.

The combined choirs of Trinity United Church of Christ, Cashtown; St. John's United Church of Christ, Fairfield, and St. John's United Church of McKnightstown will present a choral pantomime, "The Christmas Story," written and arranged by the pastor, the Rev. Robert D. Myers, Christmas Eve at 11 o'clock in Trinity United Church of Christ, Cashtown. This will be followed by the traditional Christmas candlelight communion service.

Members of Den No. 5, Cub Scouts of Fairfield, paid a surprise visit to Mrs. Fannie Hartzell, 88-year-old resident of Fairfield, Sunday afternoon. The group, accompanied by Den Mothers Mrs. Kermit Spence, Mrs. Thomas Newman and Mrs. Raymond Miller, sang Christmas carols and presented her a Christmas gift. Cubs making the visit were Alistair Heinly, Thomas Newman, Ronald Miller, Lynn Newman, Ronald Myers, Michael Reindollar, Robert Sanders and Gary Spence.

The Amvets Auxiliary of Post No. 172 of Fairfield held its monthly meeting at the post home Tuesday evening. The group will distribute baskets to the needy [illegible] Eve. Following the business meeting a social hour [illegible] exchange of gifts. Games were played and refreshments were served.

The Charles Gillen Post No. 172 Amvets of Fairfield and the Amvets Auxiliary, who sponsor the Cub Scout Pack No. 78, entertained the Cubs and members of their families at a Christmas party in the fire company hall Thursday evening. Entertainment for the evening included the singing of Christmas carols, the arrival of Santa Claus who distributed gifts to the Cubs and little guests and the playing of games.

During the business meeting, the presentation of awards was made by Assistant Cubmaster Kermit Spence and Assistant Cub Master David Heinly to the following: Thomas Kittinger, Bear Badge; Donald Geesaman, gold and silver arrows; Harvey Gladhill, gold arrow; Floyd Brown, gold arrow; Paul Dagenhart, gold arrow; Richard Russel, wolf badge. The pack presented a gift to Cubmaster Paul Crist for his outstanding service since the organization in November, 1956. Refreshments were served.

For a mixed grill main course use halved tomatoes and mushroom caps with fish steaks or fillets; add mushrooms the last five minutes of broiling time.

The Legacy Of Luke

Luke's Careful Research Establishes Time, Reason For Bethlehem Journey

EDITOR'S NOTE: The classic Biblical example of lack of charity is the innkeeper's refusal to make room for the travel-weary Mary and Joseph on what now is called Christmas Eve. Here is an account of how Luke might have obtained the background for this touching story.

By GEORGE CORNELL
Associated Press Religion Writer

The old, clay-brick inn stood just inside the east gate of Bethlehem. Luke the physician and writer, threaded his way through the street traffic, tired and dust-grimed.

So this was the inn that had no room for Mary as her time grew near. A wind, carrying the first chill of winter, rippled Luke's cloak as he made his way toward it.

He had trudged many leagues in the last few months, assembling his chronicle of Christ. He had been over the nearly 100 miles that Mary and Joseph traveled to reach this ancestral city of David. He knew their travail.

But Luke, a painstaking researcher, had also gathered items in distant places, in the consulates of Antioch and Damascus, plying into official Roman annals and enactments to pinpoint the time of the nativity of his Lord.

"In those days," he would write later, "a decree went out from Caesar Augustus that all the world should be enrolled. This was the first enrollment, when Quirinius was governor of Syria." None but Luke gives the date or the circumstances.

Dispute His Report

Historians for centuries disputed his report, claiming Quirinius was not Syria's governor until 6 A.D. But modern archeological findings show Quirinius previously had been military governor when Rome ordered its first massive census.

The careful Luke was correct.

These enrollments, held at 14-year intervals by the empire following that first one, were not to collect taxes, but to compile lists for future levies. Jews, by custom, had to register at the original seat of their tribe or clan.

For Mary and Joseph, this had meant a hard, hazardous trip from Nazareth, with her in most fragile condition. All of it had happened 60 years before Luke pieced together the sequence, but he had verified each step of the way.

As suggested by Matthew and by Mary's own words, however tactfully phrased, Luke knew there had been some shock among people in Nazareth when she conceived.

Needed Her Husband

Although she was not required by law to accompany Joseph for the enrollment, she did so rather than remain alone among tongue-wagging neighbors, even with the delivery of her child near at hand. She needed her husband at her side.

Luke had retraced their journey, from the slopes of Nazareth down into the mosquito-swarming

Courtesy Art Museum of Art

ALBRECHT DURER, the German Renaissance painter who achieved unsurpassed perfection in his woodcut, executed this Visitation scene as part of a series on the life of the Virgin. During her visit to Elizabeth, Mary first made known she was to be the mother of the Messiah.

marshes of the Jordan and on into the rocky footpaths of Judea.

This route, though often traveled by Galileans to avoid the hostile main road through anti-Jewish Samaria, was an exhausting, rugged passage, cruelly hot in summer, a soggy, dank morass in winter.

Mary and Joseph made the trip in the cold, wet season, with their one donkey, a bag of food, a goatskin of water and a few coverlets folded on the donkey's back. It must have been a terrible strain.

On the way down from Nazareth, Luke had halted briefly several times to treat the sick. He administered wormwood extract to a child in Nain with an intestinal infection.

Renders First Aid

A little farther on, he bound up a sickle cut on a farmer's leg after disinfecting it with wine oil. Near Beth-shean, he put a hot fig poultice on a stonemason with a furuncle on his neck, then gathered his apothecary kit, and went on.

"Inasmuch as you have done it to one of the least of these, my brethren," Jesus had said, "ye have done it unto me."

As Luke followed the course of Joseph and Mary along the serpentine river, with its overgrown swamps and bogs, he could visualize the trials they met. Creatures hissed and croaked in the moss-draped mangroves, and insects buzzed at one's ears.

At night, sparks of eyes glittered from the bushes, jackals yapped, bats whirred overhead and underbrush snapped with the movement of wild boars, cats and creepers. Mary and Joseph must have camped here at least one night.

It was a 40-mile stretch through the river bottom, but finally, the road swung back eastward, across the fords toward Archelais and Jericho in Judea.

Three-Day Trip

Altogether, the trip must have taken them at least three days, probably four, with worry about Mary in every step. Possibly they spent a night in a vineyard watchman's hut, or with other strangers. Jewish law urges such hospitality.

Luke had tramped on along the couple's path, through the odd, barren sink near Jericho, with its whirling columns of dust, on past the tortuous mountain roads, on past Rachel's tomb, and up the terraced plateau that sweeps upward like the walls of an amphitheater, dotted with pink almond trees and olives, to the heights of Bethlehem.

Visits the Inn

This was ancient Ephrath, patriarchal seat of David, city of the shepherd king—Bethlehem.

"And Joseph also went up from Galilee, from the city of Nazareth, to Judea, to the city of David, which is called Bethlehem, because he was of the house and lineage of David, to be enrolled with Mary, his betrothed, who was with child."

The inn was a two-floor structure, forming an enclosed courtyard in the rear. On the upper level were sleeping quarters for travelers. Below animals were sheltered. Luke could hear their bawling and braying.

The front gate faced the street. Along it moved donkey pack trains, burdened with wine casks and bales of flax. Traders haggled. Women carried baskets of linen to wash at a nearby pool. Slaves, with litters of rich owners, shouted, "Make way!"

Luke shouldered his way through idlers on the columned portico and into the inn's big public room. A profusion of smoke, odors, shouts, laughter, babbling and lights assailed him.

Pleads For Room

This must have been what the desperate Joseph encountered when, his voice shaking and pleading, he asked a room for his weary wife, with her child only hours away.

"And while they were there, the time came for her to be delivered."

In the big room, a knot of leather-garbed Roman soldiers held tankards of cider, and sang lustily. Men wandered about, or lounged on seats. Arms reached out at serving women as they passed with steaming platters amid loud laughter.

A fireplace crackled, and a sweating bearded man, his tunic open at the chest, turned a spit of meat over it. Apparently he was the inn keeper. A younger man was roasting cuts of meat over two burning tripods. Somewhere, a dish crashed.

Luke approached the distraught innkeeper. "Might you be able . . ." He did not get to finish the question. The innkeeper barked: "There's no room, no room I tell you—no room!"

Luke knew at the bustling inn, knew how it must have been for Joseph and Mary.

PROPOSALS ON SCHOLARSHIP PLAN LIKELY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Proposals for some sort of federal scholarship program probably will be offered in the new congressional session starting Jan. 7.

Rep. Barden (D-NC), chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee, said Saturday his committee "has been giving consideration to a program and will very likely make some expression of its views during the next session."

Barden, reached by telephone at his home in New Bern, N. C., said he preferred not to comment at this time on the proposals made yesterday by the National Education Assn.

NEA Suggestion

The NEA suggested the federal government start an educational support program of indefinite length which would increase its cost from about 1.1 billion dollars the first year to about 4.8 billion dollars in five years.

The NEA program includes proposals for college scholarships for at least 20,000 high school graduates each year, and at least 5,000 fellowships annually for university graduate study.

A statement from the NEA legislative commission suggested scholarship awards must average $1,200 per year to start and fellowships $3,000 per year. That would make the total starting cost for scholarships and fellowships about 40 million dollars annually. This would increase to about 160 millions in four years.

27 Bills So Far

Twenty-seven bills proposing federal scholarships in higher education have been referred to the House Education Committee. Six of them relate to scientific scholarships.

The NEA program, in addition to the scholarships and fellowships, proposes:

1. At least 25 million dollars a year for expansion of services of state education agencies in all fields, not alone in science and mathematics education or in testing and guidance.

Other Proposals

2. Passage of pending legislation to allow teachers to make income tax deductions for the cost of professional improvement such as work at summer school.

3. Continuation of such federal activities as vocational education, library services and school lunches "until it can be demonstrated that the need can be met from other resources."

James L. McCaskill, NEA legislative director, and William G. Carr, NEA executive secretary, said at a news conference the whole NEA program should be carried out through state channels.

Sociable Hermit Says Don't Buy An Island To Be Alone

By HAL BOYLE

EVERGLADES CITY, Fla. (AP)—If you want solitude, take a tip from "the world's most sociable hermit"—don't buy an island.

"Most people say they'd like to have an island so they can be by themselves," said Roy Ozmer, 60, the hermit of Pelican Key. "But it doesn't work out that way.

"Last year I had more than 6,000 visitors—and thank God for every one of them. If I just sat out here twiddling my thumbs and listening to the birds, I'd be crazier than—well, than I am."

Everybody should be as crazy as Ozmer, a lean utterly friendly man who wears a green beret and a trim graying Van Dyke beard. He is one of the few men who weaned of steady work, turned to hermiting, and made it pay.

Three-Acre Island

His paradise is a three-acre island seven miles from here, a key on which 260 varieties of trees, shrubs and flowers flourish. He settled here in 1949 as a career hermit after working as a merchant seaman, apple farmer, and movie exhibitor.

"I just got tired of the rat race and wanted out of it," he explained. "I got tired of working one week just to make enough to live the next week."

Ozmer's simple needs are easily met. He is so charming that everybody in the area vies in trying to help him. He has three shacks on the island and rents them out to sportsmen. Neighboring fishermen drop by his refuge to give him part of their catch.

Has Many Visitors

Tourists, anxious to see a real live hermit, come by the thousands to chat with him and share a hospitable coffee pot. Many insist on leaving a small money gift behind, although the hermit never asks for anything. He doesn't have to.

"This place is like 42nd St. and Broadway," he remarked. "Sooner or later everybody gets here. And, unless they are liars, at least 75 per cent leave envying me. Anyway, that's what they say."

Among his visitors have been Mickey Rooney, Lt. Gen. James A. Doolittle, Gypsy Rose Lee and John L. Lewis.

Roy's philosophy toward the world can be gleaned from a number of defiant signs he has posted about his island. Here are a few.

"I will mind your baby, crank your motor, or cash your check but I will not go fishing."

"Ladies tolerated."

"To hell with the Joneses!"

"Now at last I have a pot to put a petunia in and a window ledge to set it on."

The hermit isn't all alone. He has two dogs, "Little Sister" and "Boojum," and three pet egrets — "Doctor Doolittle," "Grumpy," and "Dopey" — who like to chase and eat butterflies.

"A man has to have something to pamper," he said, "and they are pretty pampered."

DEATHS

NEW YORK (AP)—Walter Page, 57, jazz bass player who helped Count Basie bring jazz music to New York from the Midwest in 1935, died Friday. Page gave Basie one of his first jobs as a piano player. Basie now leads one of the foremost big jazz bands.

KENDALLVILLE, Ind. (AP)—Dr. C. B. Goodwin, 95, considered one of the oldest practicing physicians in the country, died of a heart attack Friday. He kept up an active practice driving his own car on calls, until one week ago when he fell and fractured a hip.

SAYS STASSEN LACKS BACKING

PITTSBURGH (AP) — James F. Malone, president of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Assn., says he knows of no responsible Republican who would support Harold E. Stassen for the GOP gubernatorial nomination.

In a statement recently Malone said several persons told he told Stassen "I couldn't find anybody who was for him," adding "Today, I still can't find anybody who is for him."

Stassen wrote letters this week to the state's Republican county chairmen indicating he plans to seek the nomination.

In a separate statement Edward L. Flaherty, Allegheny County Chairman said:

"Definitely, I would not approve him (Stassen). He is not entitled to consideration for governor."

DOLLAR VOLUME OF XMAS SALES CLOSE TO 1956

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP) — The last of some 2½ billion Christmas cards are dropping into the mail boxes today. Thousands of kilowatts are ready to course through some 110 million dollars worth of new decorative lighting. Late greetings are speeding by wire and also late orders for millions of dollars worth of flowers and candy.

Christmas catalogues, more colorful and numerous this year, have been thumbed—and soon will become books for reference on prices and for possible gift exchanges.

And merchants big and small have gone all out to offer gifts from the simple to the unusual, from the inexpensive to the lavish.

Businessmen Tried

If your holiday isn't merry, don't blame it on businessmen. They tried.

The final tally today and tomorrow will show if total retail store record dollar volume. The two years are running neck and neck in the stretch.

Christmas spirit this year seems to have risen above talk of recession. Stephen Q. Shannon, executive director of the Greeting Card Assn., estimated that 200 million more Christmas cards made by some 300 manufacturers are being sent this year than last. Since sales are averaging around 11 cents a card, total retail dollar volume will come to 250 million dolars compared with 245 milion dollars compared with 245 million lion dollars will be spent in mailing them.

Figures Highlight '57

Makers of decorative lighting say sales are 10 per cent ahead this year and should come to 110 million dollars.

A 12 per cent increase in ordering flowers by wire is estimated by John Bodette, general manager of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Assn.

He says total dollar volume for the holiday season—starting with Thanksgiving and running through New Years — should reach 5½ million dollars.

Many retail stores and mail order houses increased their catalogues this season, both in size and circulation. Sears, Roebuck mailed 7½ million of its 418 page Christmas books at a cost of 5½ million dollars. F. W. Woolworth sent out 4¼ millions, and Allied Stores three million, or 600 thousand more than last year.

HARRISBURG (AP)—Turkey will be the main course at Christmas dinner in many state-operated institutions.

The heads of the departments which supervise the institutions said there will be other festivites, such as caroling and pageants, to make each of the hospitals and prisons "as much like home as possible."

SCHENECTADY, N.Y. (AP)—The fellow who lost a saw near here can get it back by applyng to the Glenville Grange—if he has the nerve. The saw was found lying on the ground near the stump of what had been a 14-foot Christmas tree, part of the Grange's landscaping.

DR. ALBRECHT MAY GET HEALTH POST IN PENNA.

HARRISBURG (AP) — A Pennsylvania-educated medical adminis trator who formerly held high Posts in Alaska and Ohio may be appointed deputy director of the Pennsylvania Health Department, probably this week.

Administration sources who declined to be identified Friday night confirmed that Dr. C. Earl Albrecht of Columbus, Ohio, is to be appointed by Gov. Leader to the number two job in the department headed by Dr. C. L. Wilbar Jr. He will fill the vacancy created when Dr Wilbar moved up to become Secretary last month after the resignation of Dr. Berwyn Mattison.

Report $15,000 Salary

Dr. Wilbar referred queries on the appointment to the governor's office. A governor's spokesman declined comment.

The salary figure was not immediately available, but it was believed in the neighborhood of $15,000.

Dr. Albrecht is now clinical director of Columbus State School, an institution for feeble minded. Until last September he served as acting director of the Ohio Department of Mental Hygiene and Correction and before that he was an assistant director in the department.

For 21 years prior to joining the Ohio Department in 1956,-Dr. Albrecht lived in Alaska, where he was the territory's first full-time commissioner of health Durng World War II he was in command of several Army hospitals.

Dr. Albrecht attended Moravian College in Bethlehem, Pa., and received his medical degree at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, in 1932. He spent three years of residency training in general surgery at Abington Memorial Hospital in suburban Philadelphia.

Noel Postmark For Half Million

NOEL, Mo. (AP)—Volunteer workers at the Noel Post Office expect to stamp the Noel postmark on half a million pieces of mail this Christmas season.

Much of it is sent here in large batches by individuals and companies who want the special Noel touch on their greeting cards.

STATE SEEKS TO OUST BUSINESS

HARRISBURG (AP)—A suit seeking to drive a large discount chain out of Pennsylvania for doing business on Sundays was before Dauphin County Court today.

The Justice Department filed the suit on Friday.

It asks not only that the firm, part of the "Two Guys From Harison" chain, be enjoined from operating on Sunday, but it also asks that its charter to do busness in Pennsylvania be forfeited. The chain store is located in Whitehall Township, a suburb of Allentown. Its headquarters is in Newark, N. J.

Asked whether the chain store may be allowed to continue trading if it agrees to comply with the state's old Blue Laws forbidding business activity on Sunday, attorney General Thomas D. McBride answered bluntly:

"We're past the stage for that kind of tactic."

The chain has been in the middle of a two-weeks-old controversy in Lehigh County over nonessential Sunday business activity.

It has 20 days to answer the state's request for an injunction. Some court sources added that the state's efforts to forfeit he chain's charter here may lead to lengthy litigation.

MORE THAN 11 MILLIONS FOR REA TO SPEND

By RICHARD L. GRAVES

HARRISBURG (AP)—Construction planned by Rural Electrification Administration borrowers in Pennsylvania during the five-year period ending in 1963 totals more than 11 million dollars.

A federal survey indicated that at least half of the construction would be financed through REA loans. The agency finanles ronstruction of power and telephone lines into regions where regular utilities usually don't find it feasible to provide service.

The borrowers plan to finance their extension this way: $2,535,000 in 1959; $2,401,000 in 1960; $2,177,000 in 1961; $2,233,000 in 1962 and $1,781,000 in 1963.

Figures May Change

Changes in both construction and application figures may occur during the next 18 months, the REA said, as borrowers revise plans to meet changing power needs.

The construction plans are based only on those systems already partially financed by the REA. Additional new applications probably will swell the total. In addition the estimates are usually on the conservative side, meaning the actual construction through 1963 probably will be closer to 15 million.

The report on proposed REA construction withn the sate followed a meeting by the REA advisory committee at which a number of recommendations were made affecting the transmission of power and telephone service into new areas.

May Apply To Phone Service

The advisory group, recognizing that most states have nearly reached the situation point in providing power and telephone service — Pennsylvania is nearly 10 per cent—recommended that systems start turning their attention oward improving service.

One proposal recommended:

"That REA and borrowers, in view of the increasing dependence of rural people on electric power, give increasd attntion to matters concerning the service relability of the rural system."

That proposal applied particularly to power service, but could also apply to telephone service in some parts of Pennsylvania.

HARRISBURG (AP) — E. E. Mensch, vice president of the Pennsylvania Power and Light Co.'s Susquehanna Division, will retire the end of this year, it was announced Saturday.

Mensch has been with the utility 24 years, since it merged with Jersey Shore Co. He started in 1909 as an office boy with Jersey Shore and was its manager at the time of the merger.

ONLY PICTURE POINT CLOSED AT CANAVERAL

CAPE CANAERAL, Fla. (AP) — The Air Force moved Saturday to completely box off the approaches to the Missile Test Center, from which America's mightiest long-range pilotless air weapons are launched.

Lt. Col. Sam Bruno, the Center's security chief, said the road to a coastal observation post about three miles north of the Center will be blocked as soon as barricades and no trespass signs can be installed.

The northern observation post, deep inside government owned land but outside the Center boundaries, is the only private property from which clear pictures can be made of Atlas intercontinental ballistic missile launchings.

Earlier this week the road into the best shore-line observation post south of the Cape—some four miles from the Center—was closed to all persons with cameras, binoculars, walkie talkies or automobile radio-telephones.

Bruno told a reporter that before taking action the Center researched its position carefully and made sure it was on legal and enforceable grounds.

The Air Force information office here said in a prepared statement "It has recently been determined that the easement agreement" — on the use of the road and land immediately south of the Test Center—gives the Air Force the right to "take such security and safety measures as are deemed necessary to protect the interests of the U.S. government."

Electrical Santa Worth $200 Stolen

NEW YORK (AP)—A thief broke into a display window of Flowerized Presentation, Inc., in the Bronx yesterday and made off with a 70-pound electrically operated model Santa Claus valued at $200.

The bandit ignored money in a safe and the petty cash box.

Detective Charles Morgan made out his report on a missing person form referring to a short, plump old man "last seen wearing white-trimmed red suit, black belt and black boots."

DEATHS

Plan Series Of Public Institutes

The Pennsylvania Citizens Association for Health and Welfare has announced plans for a series of public institutes in more than 20 communities throughout Pennsylvania during the first half of 1958, "to acquaint the public with the legislative process in Pennsylvania, review state welfare programs, and develop leadership in citizen action among the people of the state," according to Frank C. Foose, association president.

Two one-day sessions are scheduled to be held in each of 20 communities. The first series will cover "The Legislative Process And Citizen Action," and the second sessions, to be held about six weeks later in each community, will deal with "Statewide Services For Health, Welfare And Correction In Pennsylvania."

The present schecule calls for meetings to be held in these cities: Allentown, Altoona, Beaver Falls, Bethlehem, Coatesville, Erie, Harrisburg, Johnstown, Lancaster, Norristown, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Reading, Scranton, Uniontown, Washington, Wellsboro, Wilkes-Barre, Williamsport and York. Some dates have already been set, the earliest being at Harrisburg January 8.

LITTLE HOPE FOR 29 MEN ON SHIP LOST IN STORM

LONDON (AP) — Rescue officials held slight hope today for 28 crewmen missing from a Scottish freighter which went down during a mercy mission in a raging North Sea storm.

Royal Air Force planes despite bad weather resumed the search at dawn for survivors of the 1,991-ton Narva, which sank yesterday.

The Narva, en route to Sweden from Aberdeen, Scotland, with a cargo of pulp, ran into trouble about 120 miles southwest of Stavanger, Norway, while reportedly going to the English coastal vessel Boswell, in difficulty in the same area.

Second Ship Sinks

The 865-ton Boswell also sank, but its 14 crewmen were picked up by an English trawler about 150 miles east of Kirdkleness, Kincardineshire.

An official of Geln and Co., which owns the Narva, said there was a slim chance up to 20 of the crewmen could be on an inflatable life raft a plane reported sighting or that some of them were aboard a ship without radio communication.

"Apart from those possibilities there is barely a chance of survivors," he said.

Freighter Disappears

The Norwegian passenger ferry Leda reported she sighted a distress light signals from the Narva but that the freighter disappeared in darkness about 4:40 a.m., before a lifeboat from the Leda could reach her.

The Leda's lifeboard located no survivors. The Swedish oiler Vasara also searched the scene for six hours and found no one.

One plane searching the area sighted an orange-colored raft, and other planes and ships said they saw a capsized lifeboat, two buoys with flares still blazing and scattered bits of wreckage.

17 BELOW ZERO, COOL AND WET IN WESTERN AREAS

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It was cool and wet in Western areas but fairly mild winter weather prevailed in most other sections of the country today.

The lowest temperature in the nation this morning was 17 degrees below zero It was recorded at Big Piney in west-central Wyoming.

Other readings as much as -1° were charted in parts of the Wyoming-Colorado mountains as the cold air moved into the northern and central Rockies and the Great Basin area Evanston Wyo., had -9. This was in contrast to a reading of 38 degrees yesterday morning

Some of the cold air dipped into Southern California and temperatures dropped into the 30s in some areas

Blustery Weather

Blustery weather—rain and strong southwesterly winds—was reported along the north Pacific coast Gusts of 58 m.p.h. whipped extreme northwestern Washington.

Strong southerly winds brought a warming trend over most of the Eastern half of the country. Temperatures were far above seasonal levels in the Great Lakes region and southward through the Ohio Valley, the mid-Mississippi Valley and throughout the Gulf Coast.

Skies were clear in most areas Cloudy weather was reported in the Great Lakes region and Florida

TEEN-AGE TRIO FIRES ROCKET 'SUCCESSFULLY'

OGDEN, Utah (AP)—A trio of secretive teenagers has an announcement for the world. Their weekend firing of a rocket was "successful."

No motion picture news cameras ground, no government officials observed, no bulletins on countdown proceedings were issued.

Used Solid Fuel

The two-inch heavy steel rocket, 69 inches long, roared through the clouds over northern Utah. It hurtled back to earth—as planned — near the "secret" launching site. It was recovered "very badly mangled."

The boys, using trigonometry, calculated their rocket had gone up 3,000 feet at a speed of 338 m.p.h. It took 15 pounds of solid chemical fuel to do the job and the material burned about a second.

Then the youths forgot security momentarily to "leak" word of their accomplishment to the press.

Plan 2nd Firing

Absolute secrecy was necessary they said, lest other "unexperienced" rocketeers injure themselves trying the same thing.

Noell Marble, Weber High chemistry instructor, and E. Rich Green, physics teacher, monitored the project "with very little direct supervision."

Another firing is scheduled before the year is out and future rockets will be of two-stage design using different fuels and carrying instruments.

The Swedish Air Force has a new fighter plane "Draken" (The Dragon) which can exceed the speed of sound It was given a test flight for United States and Canadian newspapermen.

REPORT RESULT ON AMENDMENTS

HARRISBURG (AP) — The State Election Bureau today reported tabulation of the official vote through which two amendments to the State Constitution were approved at the Nov. 5 election.

The vote was:

Absentee balloting: Yes, 1,170,253, No, 330,693

Korean bonus: yes, 1,117,376; no, 495,850.

The absentee ballot amendment extends that privilege to civilians unable to appear at their polling place on election day. Absentee ballots previously were limited to members of the armed forces and hospitalized or sick veterans.

The Korean War bonus authorized a 150 million dollar bond issue for a state bonus to veterans of the Korean War However, the bonds may not be issued until the Legislature has provided the money through taxes.

For the first time in several years the death rate among life insurance policyholders in the United States showed an increase in 1957. The increase is credited to the epidemic of Asian Flu, which resulted in a rise in heart disease deaths.

Andorra is a republic in the Pyrenees mountains which has 5,500 people and an area of 191 square miles. Sheep raising is the principal occupation.

Other than aircraft, jet engines have many other uses. England has been using them to clear snow from the streets, and mud from the Thames River.

Plan Series Of Public Institutes

The Pennsylvania Citizens Association for Health and Welfare has announced plans for a series of public institutes in more than 20 communities throughout Pennsylvania during the first half of 1958, "to acquaint the public with the legislative process in Pennsylvania, review state welfare programs, and develop leadership in citizen action among the people of the state," according to Frank C. Foose, association president.

Two one-day sessions are scheduled to be held in each of 20 communities. The first series will cover "The Legislative Process And Citizen Action," and the second sessions, to be held about six weeks later in each community, will deal with "Statewide Services For Health, Welfare And Correction In Pennsylvania."

The present schedule calls for meetings to be held in these cities: Allentown, Altoona, Beaver Falls, Bethlehem, Coatesville, Erie, Harrisburg, Johnstown, Lancaster, Norristown, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Reading, Scranton, Uniontown, Washington, Wellsboro, Wilkes-Barre, Williamsport and York. Some dates have already been set, the earliest being at Harrisburg January 8.

LITTLE HOPE FOR 29 MEN ON SHIP LOST IN STORM

LONDON (AP) — Rescue officials held slight hope today for 28 crewmen missing from a Scottish freighter which went down during a mercy mission in a raging North Sea storm.

Royal Air Force planes despite bad weather resumed the search at dawn for survivors of the 1,991-ton Narva, which sank yesterday.

The Narva, en route to Sweden from Aberdeen, Scotland, with a cargo of pulp, ran into trouble about 120 miles southwest of Stavanger, Norway, while reportedly going to the English coastal vessel Boswell, in difficulty in the same area.

Second Ship Sinks

The 865-ton Boswell also sank, but its 14 crewmen were picked up by an English trawler about 150 miles east of Kirdkleness, Kincardineshire.

An official of Geln and Co., which owns the Narva, said there was a slim chance up to 20 of the crewmen could be on an inflatable life raft a plane reported sighting or that some of them were aboard a ship without radio communication.

"Apart from those possibilities, there is barely a chance of survivors," he said.

Freighter Disappears

The Norwegian passenger ferry Leda reported she sighted a distress light signals from the Narva but that the freighter disappeared in darkness about 4:40 a.m., before a lifeboat from the Leda could reach her.

The Leda's lifeboard located no survivors. The Swedish oiler Vasara also searched the scene for six hours and found no one.

One plane searching the area sighted an orange-colored raft, and other planes and ships said they saw a capsized lifeboat, two buoys with flares still blazing and scattered bits of wreckage.

17 BELOW ZERO, COOL AND WET IN WESTERN AREAS

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It was cool and wet in Western areas but fairly mild winter weather prevailed in most other sections of the country today.

The lowest temperature in the nation this morning was 17 degrees below zero. It was recorded at Big Piney in west-central Wyoming.

Other readings as much as -14 were charted in parts of the Wyoming-Colorado mountains as the cold air moved into the northern and central Rockies and the Great Basin area. Evanston, Wyo., had -9. This was in contrast to a reading of 38 degrees yesterday morning.

Some of the cold air dipped into Southern California and temperatures dropped into the 30s in some areas.

Blustery Weather

Blustery weather—rain and strong southwesterly winds—was reported along the north Pacific coast. Gusts of 58 m.p.h. whipped extreme northwestern Washington.

Strong southerly winds brought a warming trend over most of the Eastern half of the country. Temperatures were far above seasonal levels in the Great Lakes region and southward through the Ohio Valley, the mid-Mississippi Valley and throughout the Gulf Coast.

Skies were clear in most areas. Cloudy weather was reported in the Great Lakes region and Florida.

TEEN-AGE TRIO FIRES ROCKET 'SUCCESSFULLY'

OGDEN, Utah (AP)—A trio of secretive teenagers has an announcement for the world. Their weekend firing of a rocket was "successful."

No motion picture news cameras ground, no government officials observed, no bulletins on countdown proceedings were issued.

Used Solid Fuel

The two-inch heavy steel rocket, 69 inches long, roared through the clouds over northern Utah. It hurtled back to earth—as planned — near the "secret" launching site. It was recovered "very badly mangled."

The boys, using trigonometry, calculated their rocket had gone up 3,000 feet at a speed of 338 m.p.h. It took 15 pounds of solid chemical fuel to do the job and the material burned about a second.

Then the youths forgot security momentarily to "leak" word of their accomplishment to the press.

Plan 2nd Firing

Absolute secrecy was necessary they said, lest other "unexperienced" rocketeers injure themselves trying the same thing.

Noell Marble, Weber High chemistry instructor, and E. Rich Green, physics teacher, monitored the project "with very little direct supervision."

Another firing is scheduled before the year is out and future rockets will be of two-stage design using different fuels and carrying instruments.

The Swedish Air Force has a new fighter plane "Draken" (The Dragon) which can exceed the speed of sound. It was given a test flight for United States and Canadian newspapermen.

REPORT RESULT ON AMENDMENTS

HARRISBURG (AP) — The State Election Bureau today reported tabulation of the official vote through which two amendments to the State Constitution were approved at the Nov. 5 election.

The vote was:

Absentee balloting: Yes, 1,170,253; No, 330,883.

Korean bonus: yes, 1,117,376; no, 435,850.

The absentee ballot amendment extends that privilege to civilians unable to appear at their polling place on election day. Absentee ballots previously were limited to members of the armed forces and hospitalized or sick veterans.

The Korean War bonus authorized a 150 million dollar bond issue for a state bonus to veterans of the Korean War. However, the bonds may not be issued until the Legislature has provided the money through taxes.

DOLLAR VOLUME OF XMAS SALES CLOSE TO 1956

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP) — The last of some 2½ billion Christmas cards are dropping into the mail boxes today. Thousands of kilowatts are ready to course through some 110 million dollars worth of new decorative lighting. Late greetings are speeding by wire and also late orders for millions of dollars worth of flowers and candy.

Christmas catalogues more colorful and numerous this year have been thumbed—and soon will become books for reference on prices and for possible gift exchanges.

And merchants big and small have gone all out to offer gifts from the simple to the unusual from the inexpensive to the lavish.

Businessmen Tried

If your holiday isn't merry, don't blame it on businessmen. They tried.

The final tally today and tomorrow will show if total retail store record dollar volume. The two years are running neck and neck in the stretch.

Christmas spirit this year seems to have risen above talk of recession. Stephen Q Shannon executive director of the Greeting Card Assn., estimated that 300 million more Christmas cards made by some 300 manufacturers are being sent this year than last. Since sales are averaging around 11 cents a card, total retail dollar volume will come to 250 million dollars compared with 245 million dollars compared with 245 million dollars will be spent in mailing them.

Figures Highlight '57

Makers of decorative lighting say sales are 10 per cent ahead this year and should come to 110 million dollars.

A 12 per cent increase in ordering flowers by wire is estimated by John Bodette general manager of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Assn.

He says total dollar volume for the no day season—starting with Thanksgiving and running through New Years — should reach 5½ million dollars.

Many retail stores and mail order houses increased their catalogues this season both in size and circulation. Sears Roebuck mailed 71½ million of its 418 page Christmas books at a cost of 5½ million dollars. F. W. Woolworth sent out 4½ millions and Allied Stores three million or 600 thousand more than last year.

HARRISBURG (AP)—Turkey will be the main course at Christmas dinner in many state-operated institutions.

The heads of the departments which supervise the institutions said there will be other festivities such as caroling and pageants to make each of the hospitals and prisons "as much like home as possible."

SCHENECTADY, N.Y. (AP)—The fellow who lost a saw near here can get it back by applying to the Glenville Grange—if he has the nerve. The saw was found lying on the ground near the stump of what had been a 14-foot Christmas tree, part of the Grange's landscaping.

DR. ALBRECHT MAY GET HEALTH POST IN PENNA.

HARRISBURG (AP) — A Pennsylvania-educated medical administrator who formerly held high Posts in Alaska and Ohio may be appointed deputy director of the Pennsylvania Health Department, probably this week.

Administration sources who declined to be identified Friday night confirmed that Dr. C. Earl Albrecht of Columbus, Ohio, is to be appointed by Gov. Leader to the number two job in the department headed by Dr. C. L. Wilbar Jr. He will fill the vacancy created when Dr. Wilbar moved up to become Secretary last month after the resignation of Dr. Berwyn Mattison.

Report $15,000 Salary

Dr. Wilbar refused queries on the appointment to the governor's office. A governor's spokesman declined comment.

The salary figure was not immediately available but it was believed in the neighborhood of $15,000.

Dr. Albrecht is now clinical director of Columbus State School, an institution for feeble minded. Until last September he served as acting director of the Ohio Department of Mental Hygiene and Correction and before that he was an assistant director in the department.

For 21 years prior to joining the Ohio Department in 1956 Dr. Albrecht lived in Alaska, where he was the territory's first full-time commissioner of health. During World War II he was in command of several Army hospitals.

Dr. Albrecht attended Moravian College in Bethlehem, Pa., and received his medical degree at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, in 1932. He spent three years of residency training in general surgery at Abington Memorial Hospital in suburban Philadelphia.

Noel Postmark For Half Million

NOEL, Mo. (AP)—Volunteer workers at the Noel Post Office expect to stamp the Noel postmark on half a million pieces of mail this Christmas season.

Much of it is sent here in large batches by individuals and companies who want the special Noel touch on their greeting cards.

STATE SEEKS TO OUST BUSINESS

HARRISBURG (AP)—A suit seeking to drive a large discount chain out of Pennsylvania for doing business on Sundays was before Dauphin County Court today.

The Justice Department filed the suit on Friday.

It asks not only that the firm, part of the "Two Guys From Harrison" chain be enjoined from operating on Sunday, but it also asks that its charter to do business in Pennsylvania be forfeited. The chain store is located in Whitehall Township, a suburb of Allentown. Its headquarters is in Newark, N.J.

Asked whether the chain store may be allowed to continue trading if it agrees to comply with the state's old Blue Laws forbidding business activity on Sunday, Attorney General Thomas D. McBride answered bluntly:

"We're past the stage for that kind of tactic."

The chain has been in the middle of a two-weeks-old controversy in Lehigh County over non-essential Sunday business activity.

It has 20 days to answer the state's request for an injunction. Some court sources added that the state's efforts to forfeit the chain's charter here may lead to lengthy litigation.

MORE THAN 11 MILLIONS FOR REA TO SPEND

By RICHARD L. GRAVES

HARRISBURG (AP)—Construction planned by Rural Electrification Administration borrowers in Pennsylvania during the five-year period ending in 1963 totals more than 11 million dollars.

A federal survey indicated that at least half of the construction would be financed through REA loans. The agency finances construction of power and telephone lines into regions where regular utilities usually don't find it feasible to provide service.

The borrowers plan to finance their extension this way: $2,535,000 in 1959, $2,401,000 in 1960, $2,177,000 in 1961, $2,233,000 in 1962 and $1,781,000 in 1963.

Figures May Change

Changes in both construction and application figures may occur during the next 18 months, the REA said, as borrowers revise plans to meet changing power needs.

The construction plans are based only on those systems already partially financed by the REA. Additional new applications probably will swell the total. In addition the estimates are usually on the conservative side, meaning the actual construction through 1963 probably will be closer to 15 million.

The report on proposed REA construction with the sale followed a meeting by the REA advisory committee at which a number of recommendations were made affecting the transmission of power and telephone service into new areas.

May Apply To Phone Service

The advisory group, recognizing that most states have nearly reached the situation point in providing power and telephone service — Pennsylvania is nearly 10 per cent—recommended that systems start turning their attention toward improving service.

One proposal recommended:

"That REA and borrowers, in view of the increasing dependence of rural people on electric power, give increased attention to matters concerning the service reliability of the rural system."

That proposal applied particularly to power service, but could also apply to telephone service in some parts of Pennsylvania.

HARRISBURG (AP)—E. E. Mensch, vice president of the Pennsylvania Power and Light Co.'s Susquehanna Division, will retire the end of this year, it was announced Saturday.

Mensch has been with the utility 24 years, since it merged with Jersey Shore Co. He started in 1909 as an office boy with Jersey Shore and was its manager at the time of the merger.

ONLY PICTURE POINT CLOSED AT CANAVERAL

CAPE CANAERAL, Fla. (AP) — The Air Force moved Saturday to completely box off the approaches to the Missile Test Center, from which America's mightiest long-range pilotless air weapons are launched.

Lt. Col. Sam Bruno, the Center's security chief, said the road to a coastal observation post about three miles north of the Center will be blocked as soon as barricades and no trespass signs can be installed.

The northern observation post, deep inside government owned land but outside the Center boundaries, is the only private property from which clear pictures can be made of Atlas intercontinental ballistic missile launchings.

Earlier this week the road into the post, shore-line observation post south of the Cape—some four miles from the Center—was closed to all persons with cameras, binoculars, walkie talkies or automobile radio-telephones.

Bruno told a reporter that before taking action the Center researched its position carefully and made sure it was on legal and enforceable grounds.

The Air Force information office here said in a prepared statement: "It has recently been determined that the easement agreement" — on the use of the road and land immediately south of the Test Center—gives the Air Force the right to "take such security and safety measures as are deemed necessary to protect the interests of the U.S. government."

Electrical Santa Worth $200 Stolen

NEW YORK (AP)—A thief broke into a display window of Flowerzed Presentation, Inc., in the Bronx yesterday and made off with a 70-pound electrically operated model Santa Claus valued at $200.

The bandit ignored money in a safe and the petty cash box.

Detective Charles Morgan made out his report on a missing person form referring to a short, plump old man "last seen wearing white-trimmed red suit, black belt and black boots."

M'ELROY LOOKS LIKE BIG ASSET WITH CONGRESS

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of Defense McElroy may become the Eisenhower administration's chief asset toward softening sharp criticsm from congressional Democrats on the progress of the missile and satellite programs.

McElroy, two months in the Cabinet, has shown some signs of becoming the take-charge sort of official many Democrats have said is needed to crack the bottlenecks they contend have let Russia take the lead in rocketry.

Whether Congress tries its hand at shakng up the Defense Department—possibly through establishment of a separate agency to develop missiles and satellites—seems likely to depend largely on McElroy's performance in the next few weeks.

Johnson Pressing

Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas had made it clear the prime objective of an investigation of the missiles program by the Senate Preparedness subcommittee he heads is to push the administration into full-blast action on space weapons.

Johnson has indicated he doesn't care particularly who does the job or how it is done, just so missiles are produced in quantity.

McElroy evidently made a good first impression on subcommittee members when he announced he had lifted overtime restrictions and restored some funds to the missile program.

Like His Action

Several members said they liked McElroy's action in ordering continued development on both the Jupiter and Thor intermediate range ballistic missiles. With one of the competing weapons scheduled to be dropped, there had been uncertainty about the work on both.

If McElroy comes up with some new moves to straighten out the guide lines, simplify Pentagon procedures and get the missile supply belt moving, he could go a long way toward tempering the continuing criticism.

POPE CALLS ON MANKIND TO END ARMS RACE

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope Pius XII called on mankind yesterday to halt the arms race lest it lead to disaster and endanger the fate of "the earth itself." He implied that he endorses the West's proposals for controlled disarmament.

In his 19th annual Christmas message to the world, the 81-year-old pontiff counseled Christians not to fear Russia's current triumphs in the Sputnik field.

Such records, the leader of the Roman Catholic Church declared, were "often of very short duration."

Right For Defense

The pontiff's speech, beamed to a host of nations by the Vatican's powerful new radio transmitter, was believed to be the most widely broadcast message in history.

As he did last Christmas, the Pope affirmed man's right for self defense, but he called on the governments of the world not to be mislead by pride in a race for arms supremacy.

Without calling them by name, the Pope endorsed the North Atlantic Alliance, the United Nations and Western disarmament proposals, saying: "The divine law of harmony strictly imposes on all rulers of nations the obligation to prevent war by means of suitable international organizatons, to reduce armaments under a system of effective inspection, to deter whoever should aim at disturbing the peace with the most fully guaranteed mutual dependence between the nations which sincerely desire it."

Bestrows Blessing

In a clear reference to Russia's successes with space missiles, he cautioned: "Let those who observe today's competition, therefore, know how to reduce the facts to their true proportions, and, while not rejecting approaches aiming at peace agreements which are always desirable, let them not permit themselves to be misled by records, often of very short duration, nor to be too much influenced by fears skillfully evoked to win the interest and support of others."

After delivering his annual message, the Pope bestowed his blessing "urbi et orbi," upon the city (Rome) and the world.

ALHAMBRA, Calif. (AP) — Four-year-old Kelley Marie Aikens stirred up considerable concern when she wandered away from home. But she was dressed a little too distinctively to stay lost for long.

When police spotted her standing at a busy intersection, she was wearing only a T-shirt and a smile.

Egyptian Students Hail Red Visitors

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Five thousand students and workers turned out yesterday to cheer 70 delegates and secretaries arriving from Communist countries for the Asian-African Congress. The arrivals were pelted with flowers.

A Soviet TU104 jet airliner brought the visitors from the Soviet Union, Outer Mongolia, North Viet Nam, North Korea and Red China.

The Communist delegates were the first large group to arrive for the weeklong conference of "non-government" groups from 44 countries, which opens Thursday. Major topics to be discussed include imperialism and national independence, the Algerian rebellion, racial discrimination and the banning of nuclear weapons and their testing.

YOST MAY BE SENT TO SYRIA

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP)— Charles W. Yost, 50-year-old career diplomat and former ambassador to Laos, reportedly will be the new U.S. ambassador to Syria.

Reliable sources said the Syrian government had approved Yost's nomination. Diplomatic sources in Washington reported last week that President Eisenhower had chosen an envoy, whose identity was not revealed then, and the Syrians had accepted him.

The new ambassador will succeed James R. Moore Jr. Moore was in the United States last August when Syria expelled three U.S. Embassy officials on charges of plotting against the Pro-Soviet government. The U.S. government kept him at home in protest against the charges and expelled the Syrian ambassador, Dr. Farid Zeineddine, in retalation. During the U.N. Assembly, the Syrian and American governments agreed to resume full relations.

'Tis said that the famous "red gravy" of the south is made by combining ham gravy basted with black coffee.

PRESIDENT AND SEC. DULLES TO REPORT TONIGHT TO U. S. ON PARIS

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower and Secretary of State Dulles make a radio-television report to the nation tonight on the NATO conference last week in Paris.

The conference, seeking unity among the North Atlantic Treaty countries in the face of Russia's missile developments, adopted a two-way approach. The NATO chiefs of state approved the U. S. idea of basing intermediate range missiles in Europe and at the same time called for further disarmament negotiations with the Russians.

Russia already has indicated it is not interested in a NATO-proposed meeting of foreign ministers to discuss disarmament. Soviet leaders called instead for a special United Nations session, or some other full-scale international conference.

Broadcast Schedule

The Eisenhower-Dulles broadcast will be carried "live" at 8:30 p.m., EST, by CBS-TV and all four major radio networks. ABC-TV will carry the program on film at 10:30 p. m., and NBC will show it at 11:30 p. m.

The President returned last Friday from Europe, and he has not made any public statements about the NATO meeting since his return.

Dulles told newsmen upon his arrival here Saturday that the 15-nation Atlantic Pact meeting "took all the essential decisions for which we had hoped."

Dulles Critized

New York Gov. Averell Harriman criticized Dulles last night for, as Harriman put it, not fully preparing the President for the Paris conference. The governor said that was "unfortunate and unfair."

But, Harriman said in a TV interview, Eisenhower is "a great salesman of our American ideals," and he praised the President for "pulling the NATO conference together."

HOTEL, MOTEL WORKERS WILL GET INCREASE

HARRISBURG (AP)—An estimated 72,000 restaurant, hotel and motel workers would receive substantial wage boosts under regulations regarded as "almost certain" to go into effect April 15.

Secretary of Labor and Industry William L. Blatt Jr., said the regulations would affect women and minors in various categories and raise wage minimums for them from 150 to 200 per cent.

At a weekend news conference, Batt said the regulations—which would revise those in existence since 1937—had been recommended by the nine-member wage study board of his department.

Formal adoption of the board's recommendations, Batt said, was "almost certain" to follow the last of a series of public hearings, to be held Jan. 14 at Harrisburg. The effective date of the new regulations, he said, would be April 15.

New Hourly Minimum

The new hourly minimums, as compared with present ones, are as follows (present minimums in brackets):

With meals and tips—58 cents (20 cents)

With tips only—73 cents (39 cents)

With meals only—90 cents (30 cents)

With neither meals nor tops—$1.05 (39 cents)

Batt noted that the new regulations would provide for fines and arrests for employers who violate the minimums. He said "only a very few" employers had reported the higher minimums would compel them to raise prices to clients.

Under law, the Labor and Industry Department may conduct studies of economic conditions and hold public hearings in order to arrive at minimum wage scales.

TROUBLE KIT

A home repair kit is designed to offer an effective method of repairing rubber products. It may be used to make repairs on everything from tubeless tires, tire tubes, toys, overshoes and raincoats to floor mats and rubber gloves say manufacturers. The kit contains patching material, a tube of vulcanizing solution, abrasive and an instruction sheet.

Newest instant-dry indelible writing implement is a laundry marker equipped with a felt nib, and the marker ink in spillproof bottle.

In this connection, Batt revealed that such studies are now under way in the retailing and the laundry industries.

Merry Christmas

Christmas is a time for remembering the miracle of Our Saviour's birth... a time for rejoicing in His Glorious message of "Peace on Earth, Good Will to All Men." Just as the Wise Men brought to the Christ Child their gifts of "gold, frankincense and myrrh," may we bring to the observance of His Birthday our own most precious gifts . . . faith, love and the rededication of our hearts and our lives to His divine promise and purpose in the spirit of the First Christmas.

M'ELROY LOOKS LIKE BIG ASSET WITH CONGRESS

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of Defense McElroy may become the Eisenhower administration's chief asset toward softening sharp criticism from congressional Democrats on the progress of the missile and satellite programs.

McElroy, two months in the Cabinet, has shown some signs of becoming the take-charge sort of official many Democrats have said is needed to crack the bottlenecks they contend have let Russia take the lead in rocketry.

Whether Congress tries its hand at shaking up the Defense Department—possibly through establishment of a separate agency to develop missiles and satellites—seems likely to depend largely on McElroy's performance in the next few weeks.

Johnson Pressing

Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas had made it clear the prime objective of an investigation of the missiles program by the Senate Preparedness subcommittee he heads is to push the administration into full-blast action on space weapons.

Johnson has indicated he doesn't care particularly who does the job or how it is done, just so missiles are produced in quantity.

McElroy evidently made a good first impression on subcommittee members when he announced he had lifted overtime restrictions and restored some funds to the missile program.

Like His Action

Several members said they liked McElroy's action in ordering continued development on both the Jupiter and Thor intermediate range ballistic missiles. With one of the competing weapons scheduled to be dropped, there had been uncertainty about the work on both.

If McElroy comes up with some new moves to straighten out the guide lines, simplify Pentagon procedures and get the missile supply belt moving, he could go a long way toward tempering the continuing criticism.

POPE CALLS ON MANKIND TO END ARMS RACE

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope Pius XII called on mankind yesterday to halt the arms race lest it lead to disaster and endanger the fate of "the earth itself." He implied that he endorses the West's proposals for controlled disarmament.

In his 19th annual Christmas message to the world, the 81-year-old pontiff counseled Christians not to fear Russia's current triumphs in the Sputnik field.

Such records, the leader of the Roman Catholic Church declared, were "often of very short duration."

Right For Defense

The pontiff's speech beamed to a host of nations by the Vatican's powerful new radio transmitter, was believed to be the most widely broadcast message in history.

As he did last Christmas, the Pope affirmed man's right for self defense, but he called on the governments of the world not to be mislead by pride in a race for arms supremacy.

Without calling them by name the Pope endorsed the North Atlantic Alliance the United Nations and Western disarmament proposals saying "The divine law of harmony strictly imposes on all rulers of nations the obligation to prevent war by means of suitable international organizations, to reduce armaments under a system of effective inspection, to deter whoever should aim at disturbing the peace with the most fully guaranteed mutual dependence between the nations which sincerely desire it."

Bestows Blessing

In a clear reference to Russia's successes with space missiles, he cautioned: "Let those who observe today's competition, therefore know how to reduce the facts to their true proportions, and while not rejecting approaches aiming at peace agreements which are always desirable let them not permit themselves to be misled by records often of very short duration not to be too much influenced by fears skillfully evoked to win the interest and support of others."

After delivering his annual message the Pope bestowed his blessing "urbi et orbi" upon the city Rome and the world.

IN BRIEF

ALHAMBRA, Calif. (AP) — Four-year-old Kelly Marie Aikens stirred up considerable concern when she wandered away from home. But she was dressed a little too distinctively to get lost for long.

When police spotted her standing at a bus stop in Inspection she was wearing only a T-shirt and a smile.

Egyptian Students Hail Red Visitors

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Five thousand students and workers turned out yesterday to cheer 70 delegates and secretaries arriving from Communist countries for the Asian-African Congress. The arrivals were pelted with flowers.

A Soviet TU104 jet airliner brought the visitors from the Soviet Union, Outer Mongolia, North Viet Nam, North Korea and Red China.

The Communist delegates were the first large group to arrive for the weeklong conference of "non-government" groups from 44 countries, which opens Thursday. Major topics to be discussed include imperialism and national independence, the Algerian rebellion, racial discrimination and the banning of nuclear weapons and their testing.

YOST MAY BE SENT TO SYRIA

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP)— Charles W. Yost, 50-year-old career diplomat and former ambassador to Laos, reportedly will be the new U.S. ambassador to Syria.

Reliable sources said the Syrian government had approved Yost's nomination. Diplomatic sources in Washington reported last week that President Eisenhower had chosen an envoy, whose identity was not revealed then, and the Syrians had accepted him.

The new ambassador will succeed James R. Moore Jr. Moore was in the United States last August when Syria expelled three U.S. Embassy officials on charges of plotting against the Pro-Soviet government. The U.S. government kept him at home in protest against the charges and expelled the Syrian ambassador, Dr. Farid Zeineddine, in retaliation. During the U.N. Assembly, the Syrian and American governments agreed to resume full relations.

'Tis said that the famous "red gravy" of the south is made by combining ham gravy basted with black coffee.

PRESIDENT AND SEC. DULLES TO REPORT TONIGHT TO U. S. ON PARIS

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower and Secretary of State Dulles make a radio-television report to the nation tonight on the NATO conference last week in Paris.

The conference, seeking unity among the North Atlantic Treaty countries in the face of Russia's missile developments, adopted a two-way approach. The NATO chiefs of state approved the U.S. idea of basing intermediate range missiles in Europe and at the same time called for further disarmament negotiations with the Russians.

Russia already has indicated it is not interested in a NATO-proposed meeting of foreign ministers to discuss disarmament. Soviet leaders called instead for a special United Nations session or some other full-scale international conference.

Broadcast Schedule

The Eisenhower-Dulles broadcast will be carried "live" at 8:30 p.m., EST, by CBS-TV and all four major radio networks. ABC-TV will carry the program on film at 10:30 p.m., and NBC will show it at 11:30 p.m.

The President returned last Friday from Europe, and he has not made any public statements about the NATO meeting since his return.

Dulles told newsmen upon his arrival here Saturday that the 15-nation Atlantic Pact meeting "took all the essential decisions for which we had hoped."

Dulles Critized

New York Gov. Averell Harriman criticized Dulles last night for, as Harriman put it, not fully preparing the President for the Paris conference. The governor said that was "unfortunate and unfair."

But, Harriman said in a TV interview, Eisenhower is "a great salesman of our American ideals" and he praised the President for "pulling the NATO conference together."

DEATHS

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Ray Sprigle, 70, Pulitzer prize-winning reporter of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, died yesterday. The veteran reporter won a Pulitzer Prize in 1938 for an article naming Supreme Court Justice Hugo Black as a member of the Ju Klux Klan. He was born in Akron, Ohio.

ZANESVILLE, Ohio (AP)—Earl J. Jones, 64, publisher of the Massillon (Ohio) Independent since 1945 and former head of a vast coal mining operation in Ohio, died yesterday. He was publisher of the old Zanesville News until 1954 when it was sold to the Zanesville Publishing Co.

HOTEL, MOTEL WORKERS WILL GET INCREASE

HARRISBURG (AP)—An estimated 72,000 restaurant, hotel and motel workers would receive substantial wage boosts under regulations regarded as "almost certain" to go into effect April 15.

Secretary of Labor and Industry William L. Batt Jr. said the regulations would affect women and minors in various categories and raise wage minimums for them from 150 to 200 per cent.

At a weekend news conference Batt said the regulations—which would revise those in existence since 1937—had been recommended by the nine-member wage study board of his department.

Formal adoption of the board's recommendations, Batt said, was "almost certain" to follow the last of a series of public hearings, to be held Jan. 14 at Harrisburg. The effective date of the new regulations, he said, would be April 15.

New Hourly Minimum

The new hourly minimums, as compared with present ones, are as follows (present minimums in brackets):

With meals and tips—58 cents (26 cents).

With tips only—73 cents (39 cents).

With meals only—90 cents (30 cents).

With neither meals nor tips—$1.05 (39 cents).

Batt noted that the new regulations would provide for fines and arrests for employers who violate the minimums. He said "only a very few" employers had reported the higher minimums would compel them to raise prices to clients.

Under law, the Labor and Industry Department may conduct studies of economic conditions and hold public hearings in order to arrive at minimum wage scales.

TROUBLE KIT

A home repair kit is designed to offer an effective method of repairing rubber products. It may be used to make repairs on everything from tubeless tires, tire tubes, toys, overshoes and raincoats to floor mats and rubber gloves, say manufacturers. The kit contains patching material, a tube of vulcanizing solution, abrasive and an instruction sheet.

Newest instant-dry indelible writing implement is a laundry marker equipped with a felt nib, and the marker ink in spillproof bottle.

In this connection Batt revealed that such studies are now under way in the retailing and the laundry industries.

Under Commercialization, Christ's Message Shines

By REV. JAMES E. WAGNER, D.D., LL.D., Th.D.
President of the Evangelical and Reformed Church

Sure there is an indefensible commercialization of Christmas and Christian people's sensibilities are offended when, nowadays even before Thanksgiving Day, the shop windows are dressed with Christmas displays and sidewalk amplifiers are blaring out "White Christmas" and "Silent Night" six weeks ahead of time.

But those who have eyes to see will discern, beneath the tinsel prematurely hung, a response to the perennial return of Christian communities to the hopes and yearnings which are clustered about the celebration of Christmas.

It is a time of giving, inspired by the Christian faith that at the first Christmas God went all out in demonstrating His love for sinful and unworthy mankind by giving the very best He had to give: His only begotten Son. So those who share the Christian tradition give, whether it is a greeting card, a mink coat, or simply stopping by some friend or relative's door long enough to say "Merry Christmas."

It is a time of remembering. Remembering the people whom we may not have had in mind all through the year, but whose names come readily to mind when we sit down to prepare our gift or greeting-card lists. Remembering our better selves — genial, compassionate, sensitive to the less fortunate among our friends and acquaintances and to the vast unhappy areas of the world where poverty and oppression play havoc with others of God's children — remembering these motions of our better selves which tend to be pushed aside by the daily grind and the mad pace of contemporary living. Something happens to us at Christmas and the old familiar strain of a Christmas hymn or song or a simple gesture of generosity from some unexpected source reopens the floodgates of our own long-suppressed better impulses and we find ourselves caught up with remembering what so often and for so long we tend to forget.

It is a time when childlikeness takes possession of people so generally that no one feels embarrassed at exhibiting a little of it himself. Grown men and women —aggressive, sophisticated, competitive, so habitually given to "looking out for No. 1" — become children once more, selfless, interested, full of wonder, rubbing their eyes in half-surprise at the rediscovery that stars and music and laughter are just as real as curbstones and countinghouses.

It is a time of moral reinforcement for every troubled soul. The almost daily dismal headlines with their portent of impending doom, the enervating perpetuation of Cold War as if mankind were incapable of achieving peace, the injustices and inhumanities which so often mark the relations between nations, races, rich and poor, employer and employe—all these contrive to foster a tragic sense of life which assumes that men never were meant for better things. And then, once a year comes the reminder of the angels' song and the ancient certainty of the prophets that God, Who set the stars in their courses and newed the valleys out with the strength of His arm and heaped the mountains up with the hollow of His hand, has woven into the very fabric of history a destiny of brotherhood and peace. And with that reminder men are enabled to take a fresh grip on the business of living again.

So, when we writhe under some of the premature and blatant ways in which Christmas is prostituted for material ends, it is good to remember that this is not Christmas as Christmas comes to the generality of our fellows. For them it still holds at its heart the dreams and hopes and yearnings which have always made it and make it now, perhaps the holiest season of the year.

Santa Claus Has Been Written Into Law In State Of Oklahoma

SANTA'S EXECUTIVE secretary, Mrs. Jessie Fountain, examines inventory. Toys will be distributed among Oklahoma orphans.

By DAYTON BLAIR

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—You don't believe in Santa Claus?

Oklahoma does. It's written into law. And 3,000 children — all orphans — know that Santa Claus is real to them.

For 21 years Oklahoma has operated its Santa Claus Commission, the only one of its kind in the country. The state legislature backs it up with a $2,500 appropriation each year, to be augmented by private donations.

Began In 1936

As a result, Oklahoma's orphans will open presents on Christmas morning just like other children the world over. They wrote Santa Claus several weeks ago what they wanted and they will get at least two presents plus candy and nuts.

The commission was created in 1936 after R. R. Owen, then state budget officer, and his wife visited the state orphanage and witnessed a lonely, drab Christmas eve. Returning to the capitol they told a friend, Sandy Singleton, a member of the legislature, about it and he sponsored a bill creating the commission.

Mrs. Jessie Fountain, the veteran executive secretary of the commission, spends most of the year buying presents. She hunts for bargains and gets as many as possible at wholesale from sympathetic businessmen.

Then about Oct. 1 each year she opens a workshop at the capitol. With a small staff, she gets each package wrapped and addressed to some child. Highway department trucks are pressed into service just before Christmas to make the deliveries.

An effort is made to get the children what they want. Many ask for a Bible and they always get it. Some — just like your children a home — will ask that their brothers and sisters be remembered.

One of the letters Mrs. Fountain likes to talk about came from an Indian boy one year.

"Santa, my name is Yellow Bird Buzzard and I am 12 years old," he wrote. "I am in the seventh grade. For my first choice, I would like a gun and caps; second choice, a flash light and batteries, and my third choice, a Bible. Thank you." He was sent a Bible and one of his other choices.

Another letter from a boy didn't ask anything for himself but wondered if Santa would bring three dolls for his three sisters in another home. The dolls were sent and the boy had a special present for himself, too.

Poinsettias Can Be Saved By Using Care

There is no need to let your Christmas poinsettia die. Instead, with proper care, it will bloom next Christmas, and you can also start others from it.

After the poinsettia is through blooming this winter and its leaves are yellow, put it where the air is dry and the temperature 50 to 60 degrees. Give it no water until May.

Bring it out then, cut it back to a height of six or eight inches, remove it from its pot, and pick away as much of the old soil as you easily can.

Re-pot in a container just large enough to hold the roots comfortably. Use a general purpose soil Place in a sunny place where the temperature is 60 to 70 degrees. Water sparingly at first and more freely as growth starts. Let no more than three strong shoots develop. When the container is moderately filled with roots, transfer to a larger pot.

After the weather is really warm, you may sink the pot to its rim in a sunny place outdoors. Do not remove the plant from the pot, but fertilize regularly during the summer. In early August pinch the shoots or cut them back. Now let develop only a few strong ones and remove all weak growth. Bring indoors before nights turn cold and place in full sun.

When the shoots are cut off it is easy to start new plants from them. Just pot them and cover with a glass and keep soil real wet.

Probably the most important thing in getting a poinsettia to blossom is to give it a long night, almost 12 hours of complete darkness. This must be uninterrupted by even the briefest illumination. If a light is turned on for only one minute each night it will prevent blooming. Either grow your poinsettias in a room not lighted at night or else construct a light proof cover of black cloth or dark paper for them. The critical period is from Oct. 10 on.

Poinsettias are sensitive to temperatures below 60 degrees and to drafts, dryness of soil, excessive wetness. Any of these conditions may cause the leaves to turn yellow and drop off.

Xmas Traditions Pure In Remote German Alps

By HANNS NEUERBOURG

MUNICH, Germany (AP)—Centuries-old Christmas customs dating from heathen times are still being observed in atomic age Germany.

In lonely mountain villages tucked away in the towering Alps, Christmas is possibly more colorful than anywhere else in the world. Because of their isolation, these Yuletide celebrations have been less affected by commercialization and two world wars than those in the rest of Germany.

Wide Influence

To German - speaking people, Christmas has a deep-rooted sentimental importance. The customs developed here from an ancient mixture of heathen and Christian cultures — many of them still widely observed in an almost pure form — are the source of many traditions now thriving in the United States.

Folklore experts say that Santa Claus — as we know him today — probably first presented his gifts to German children. The Christmas tree also originated in Germany or its German-speaking neighbor areas.

But some customs are unique to the snow-clad villages of Germany's Bavaria. In the Berchtesgaden area, the villagers shoot off medieval firearms during the Christmas season. The purpose is — like that of many other German Yule customs—to chase away demons.

Another custom originating in the pre-Christian era and still observed in Bavaria is the "Kloepflnaechte" (Knock Nights). These start on Nov. 30 with children and needy adults parading through the village streets after nightfall, singing Christmas carols and getting food from those they visit. They knock at doors with hammers and brushes and ring bells to drive away evil spirits.

Covered With Straw

Berchtesgaden villagers also run around during the pre-Christmas period clad in straw and ringing big cowbells. They accompany "Sankt Nikolaus" (Santa Claus) and the "Gangerl" (a devil-like creature) from door to door.

The Santa Claus figure had its origin in a Bishop Nicolaus of Myra, who lived in the Fourth Century in what is now Turkey and gained sainthood as a benefactor of the poor.

Veneration for this saint spread to all of western Europe in the Middle Ages. In Germany, "Sankt Nikolaus" was known as a giver of gifts at the turn of the 14th Century.

In some rural areas of Germany, children still believe that Santa Claus comes riding through the air on a white horse, dropping his gifts into the chimney. Accordingly, they place a shoe into the fireside to receive the gifts. In most areas, however, stockings, plates or shoes are put before the door or on the window sill for gifts.

Calls Twice

Sankt Nikolaus visits German children twice during the Christmas season—on Dec. 6 and Dec. 24. But he has a different name for his second visit. Then he's Weihnachtsmann or Christmas Man.

On Dec. 6, he usually brings only apples, nuts or a small toy in his bag for the "nice children." To the bad ones, he points warningly to his traditional rod.

On Heiligabend (Christmas Eve) and again on Christmas Day Germans swarm into their churches by the millions. This nation is divided almost half and half among Catholics and Protestants.

Most German families light their trees before or after going to church for Christmas Eve services. The holiday extends to December 26.

Tune In WGET, 1450 On Your Dial

PAGAN AND CHRISTIAN mixture is apparent in this procession descending on a Bavarian village, where ancient Christmas customs remain intact. St. Nicholas and a child helper are followed by the devil-like "Gangerl" and straw-clad villagers made up as cattle.

Have "Choose, Cut" Xmas Tree Farms In West

By P. D. ELDRED

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (AP) — "Choose and cut" Christmas tree and the kids can enjoy a mountain farms, where the price is right and the kids can enjoy a mountain picnic to boot, are catching on fast on the West Coast.

Turning cutover and unproductive timberland into tree farms where the city family can cut down a fir or pine of its own choosing is paying off this year in the Santa Cruz Mountains.

And in the coastal ranges to the north and south many more such farms are coming into production.

There is nothing particularly new about tree farms, as such, for they are big business across the land. But the "choose and cut" marketing system is something else again.

It wasn't until 1956, when about 14 farms in the Santa Cruz Montains sold around 5,000 trees, that the project started paying off.

This year, somewhere between 3,000 and 10,000 trees will be sold in this area, according to Howard Nielsen, president of the Santa Cruz County Christmas Tree Growers' Assn. He vividly remembers last Dec. 3 when 3,000 people, most of them from not-too-distant big cities, swarmed in on his place in response to a little newspaper publicity.

A 6-foot Douglas fir sells for around $3.50 on a tree farm, perhaps twice as much in the city.

In addition, the family that drives out into the hinterland — Nielsen lives nine miles out on a mountainous back road — finds parking facilities, picnic tables and other essentials for an outing. They make a day of it.

Cut Your Own

When a family shows up they are given a curved saw and guided to the growing trees, rows and rows of them. After they pick their tree and saw it down, they haul it back to the farm, where the price is figured by the foot.

"It's a perpetual operation," Nielsen explained. "We ask the customers to cut the trees two or three branches above the ground. Then the tree sprouts and, growing about a foot a year, is ready for cutting again in five or six years."

Nielsen added that "people's tastes differ, so growers plant for variety."

Most of the plantings are Douglas fir or three varieties of pine — Monterey, Ponderosa or Scott. A little spruce and some — not much—redwood is grown.

Tree farmers here credit county farm advisor Henry Washburn, now retired, with encouraging the start of the program in the Santa Cruz area in 1948.

Growers point out that operating these tree farms isn't just a matter of sticking seedlings in the ground and five or six years later coming back to harvest the crop. There is a lot of work fighting insect pests, fertilizing and keeping weeds from getting out of hand.

At the outset, a tract is cleared completely of brush, scrub oak and second growth timber. Then the seedlings are planted in rows and carefully tended, just as any other farm crop has to be tended to do ts best.

A lot of the tree farmers are semi-retired men like Nielsen, who like outdoor living.

Legacy Of Banker Makes Xmas Gifts

PIERRE, S.D. (AP) — It would be hard to sell the children of the Pierre vicinity that bankers are as hard-hearted as "ol' Scrooge."

It was a legacy of a banker which for the last 30 years has assured every Pierre child under 12—rich and poor—a Christmas party.

Their benefactor is the late Pattison F. McClure, former president of the Pierre National bank. He died in 1927.

McClure left his estate to the Masonic order with the provision that the interest would be used each Christmas to buy goodies for the kiddies.

The children swarm the city auditorium each Christmas to receive a generous bag of candy, nuts and fruits.

The Christmas caroling of a group of Campfire Girls helped the banker decide that a share of his estate should entertain the children during the Yuletide.

BRUSHES FOR GIFTS

For the man who is handy around the house, a welcome gift is a set of paint brushes. A basic home painting set consists of five brushes. This includes a sash brush (an inch or inch and a half wide), a two inch varnish brush, a wider varnish or enamel brush and two wall brushes (three or four inches wide).

Greetings

Xmas Traditions Pure In Remote German Alps

By HANNS NEUERBOURG

MUNICH, Germany (AP)—Centuries-old Christmas customs dating from heathen times are still being observed in atomic age Germany.

In lonely mountain villages tucked away in the towering Alps, Christmas is possibly more colorful than anywhere else in the world. Because of their isolation, these Yuletide celebrations have been less affected by commercialization and two world wars than those in the rest of Germany.

Wide Influence

To German - speaking people, Christmas has a deep-rooted sentimental importance. The customs developed here from an ancient mixture of heathen and Christian cultures — many of them still widely observed in an almost pure form — are the source of many traditions now thriving in the United States.

Folklore experts say that Santa Claus — as we know him today — probably first presented his gifts to German children. The Christmas tree also originated in Germany or its German-speaking neighbor areas.

But some customs are unique to the snow-clad villages of Germany's Bavaria. In the Berchtesgaden area, the villagers shoot off medieval firearms during the Christmas season. The purpose is — like that of many other German Yule customs—to chase away demons.

Another custom originating in the pre-Christian era and still observed in Bavaria is the "Kloepflnaechte" (Knock Nights). These start on Nov. 30 with children and needy adults parading through the village streets after nightfall, singing Christmas carols and getting food from those they visit. They knock at doors with hammers and brushes and ring bells to drive away evil spirits.

Covered With Straw

Berchtesgaden villagers also run around during the pre-Christmas period clad in straw and ringing big cowbells. They accompany "Sankt Nikolaus" (Santa Claus) and the "Gangerl" (a devil-like creature) from door to door.

The Santa Claus figure had its origin in a Bishop Nicolaus of Myra, who lived in the Fourth Century in what is now Turkey and gained sainthood as a benefactor of the poor.

Veneration for this saint spread to all of western Europe in the Middle Ages. In Germany, "Sankt Nikolaus" was known as a giver of gifts at the turn of the 14th Century.

In some rural areas of Germany, children still believe that Santa Claus comes riding through the air on a white horse, dropping his gifts into the chimney. Accordingly, they place a shoe into the fireside to receive the gifts. In most areas, however, stockings, plates or shoes are put before the door or on the window sill for gifts.

Calls Twice

Sankt Nikolaus visits German children twice during the Christmas season—on Dec. 6 and Dec. 24. But he has a different name for his second visit. Then he's Weihnachtsmann or Christmas Man.

On Dec. 6, he usually brings only apples, nuts or a small toy in his bag for the "nice children." To the bad ones, he points warningly to his traditional rod.

On Heiligabend (Christmas Eve) and again on Christmas Day Germans swarm into their churches by the millions. This nation is divided almost half and half among Catholics and Protestants.

Most German families light their trees before or after going to church for Christmas Eve services. The holiday extends to December 26.

Tune In WGET, 1450 On Your Dial

PAGAN AND CHRISTIAN mixture is apparent in this procession descending on a Bavarian village, where ancient Christmas customs remain intact. St. Nicholas and a child helper are followed by the devil-like "Gangerl" and straw-clad villagers made up as cattle.

Have "Choose, Cut" Xmas Tree Farms In West

By P. D. ELDRED

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (AP) — "Choose and cut" Christmas tree and the kids can enjoy a mountain farms, where the price is right and the kids can enjoy a mountain picnic to boot, are catching on fast on the West Coast.

Turning cutover and unproductive timberland into tree farms where the city family can cut down a fir or pine of its own choosing is paying off this year in the Santa Cruz Mountains.

And in the coastal ranges to the north and south many more such farms are coming into production.

There is nothing particularly new about tree farms, as such, for they are big business across the land. But the "choose and cut" marketing system is something else again.

It wasn't until 1956, when about 14 farms in the Santa Cruz Montains sold around 5,000 trees, that the project started paying off.

This year, somewhere between 3,000 and 10,000 trees will be sold in this area, according to Howard Nielsen, president of the Santa Cruz County Christmas Tree Growers' Assn. He vividly remembers last Dec. 3 when 3,000 people, most of them from not-too-distant big cities, swarmed in on his place in response to a little newspaper publicity.

A 6-foot Douglas fir sells for around $3.50 on a tree farm, perhaps twice as much in the city.

In addition, the family that drives out into the hinterland — Nielsen lives nine miles out on a mountainous back road — finds parking facilities, picnic tables and other essentials for an outing. They make a day of it.

Cut Your Own

When a family shows up they are given a curved saw and guided to the growing trees, rows and rows of them. After they pick their tree and saw it down, they haul it back to the farm, where the price is figured by the foot.

"It's a perpetual operation," Nielsen explained. "We ask the customers to cut the trees two or three branches above the ground. Then the tree sprouts and, growing about a foot a year, is ready for cutting again in five or six years."

Nielsen added that "people's tastes differ, so growers plant for variety."

Most of the plantings are Douglas fir or three varieties of pine — Monterey, Ponderosa or Scott. A little spruce and some — not much—redwood is grown.

Tree farmers here credit county farm advisor Henry Washburn, now retired, with encouraging the start of the program in the Santa Cruz area in 1948.

Growers point out that operating these tree farms isn't just a matter of sticking seedlings in the ground and five or six years later coming back to harvest the crop. There is a lot of work fighting insect pests, fertilizing and keeping weeds from getting out of hand.

At the outset, a tract is cleared completely of brush, scrub oak and second growth timber. Then the seedlings are planted in rows and carefully tended, just as any other farm crop has to be tended to do ts best.

A lot of the tree farmers are semi-retired men like Nielsen, who like outdoor living.

Legacy Of Banker Makes Xmas Gifts

PIERRE, S.D. (AP) — It would be hard to sell the children of the Pierre vicinity that bankers are as hard-hearted as "ol' Scrooge."

It was a legacy of a banker which for the last 30 years has assured every Pierre child under 12—rich and poor—a Christmas party.

Their benefactor is the late Pattison F. McClure, former president of the Pierre National bank. He died in 1927.

McClure left his estate to the Masonic order with the provision that the interest would be used each Christmas to buy goodies for the kiddies.

The children swarm the city auditorium each Christmas to receive a generous bag of candy, nuts and fruits.

The Christmas caroling of a group of Campfire Girls helped the banker decide that a share of his estate should entertain the children during the Yuletide.

BRUSHES FOR GIFTS

For the man who is handy around the house, a welcome gift is a set of paint brushes. A basic home painting set conists of five brushes. This includes a sash brush (an inch or inch and a half wide), a two inch varnish brush, a wider varnish or enamel brush and two wall brushes (three or four inches wide).

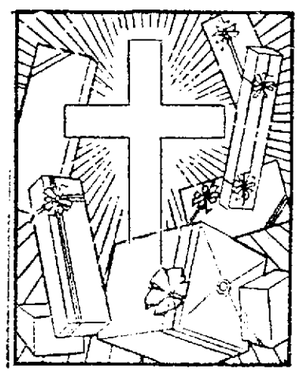
Under Commercialization, Christ's Message Shines

By REV. JAMES E. WAGNER, D.D., LL.D., Th.D.
President of the Evangelical and Reformed Church



Sure there is an indefensible commercialization of Christmas and Christian people's sensibilities are offended when, nowadays even before Thanksgiving Day, the shop windows are dressed with Christmas displays and sidewalk amplifiers are blaring out "White Christmas" and "Silent Night" six weeks ahead of time.

But those who have eyes to see will discern, beneath the unseemly premature hunt, a response to the perennial return of Christian communities to the hopes and yearnings which are clustered about the celebration of Christmas.

It is a time of giving, inspired by the Christian faith that at the first Christmas God went all out in demonstrating His love for sinful and unworthy mankind by giving the very best He had to give: His only begotten Son. So those who share the Christian tradition give, whether it is a greeting card, a mink coat, or simply stopping by some friend or relative's door long enough to say "Merry Christmas."

It is a time of remembering. Remembering the people whom we may not have had in mind all through the year, but whose names come readily to mind when we sit down to prepare our gift or greeting-card lists. Remembering our better selves — genial, compassionate, sensitive to the less fortunate among our friends and acquaintances and to the vast unhappy areas of the world where poverty and oppression play havoc with others of God's children — remembering these motions of our better selves which tend to be pushed aside by the daily grind and the mad pace of contemporary living. Something happens to us at Christmas and the old familiar strain of a Christmas hymn or song or a simple gesture of generosity from some unexpected source reopens the floodgates of our own long-suppressed better impulses and we find ourselves caught up with remembering what so often and for so long we tend to forget.

It is a time when childlikeness takes possession of people so generally that no one feels embarrassed at exhibiting a little of it himself. Grown men and women —aggressive, sophisticated, competitive, so habitually given to "looking out for No. 1" — become children once more, selfless, interested, full of wonder, rubbing their eyes in half-surprise at the rediscovery that stars and music and laughter are just as real as curbstones and countinghouses.

It is a time of moral reinforcement for every troubled soul. The almost daily dismal headlines with their portent of impending doom, the enervating perpetuation of Cold War as if mankind were incapable of achieving peace, the injustices and inhumanities which so often mark the relations between nations, races, rich and poor, employer and employe—all these contrive to foster a tragic sense of life which assumes that men never were meant for better things. And then, once a year comes the reminder of the angels' song and the ancient certainty of the prophets that God, Who set the stars in their courses and hewed the valleys out with the strength of His arm and heaped the mountains up with the hollow of His hand, has woven into the very fabric of history a destiny of brotherhood and peace. And with that reminder men are enabled to take a fresh grip on the business of living again.

So, when we writhe under some of the premature and blatant ways in which Christmas is prostituted for material ends, it is good to remember that this is not Christmas as Christmas comes to the generality of our fellows. For them it still holds at its heart the dreams and hopes and yearnings which have always made it and make it now, perhaps the holiest season of the year.

Santa Claus Has Been Written Into Law In State Of Oklahoma

SANTA'S EXECUTIVE secretary, Mrs. Jessie Fountain, examines inventory. Toys will be distributed among Oklahoma orphans.

By DAYTON BLAIR

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—You don't believe in Santa Claus?

Oklahoma does. It's written into law. And 3,000 children — all orphans — know that Santa Claus is real to them.

For 21 years Oklahoma has operated its Santa Claus Commission, the only one of its kind in the country. The state legislature backs it up with a $2,500 appropriation each year, to be augmented by private donations.

Began In 1936

As a result, Oklahoma's orphans will open presents on Christmas morning just like other children the world over. They wrote Santa Claus several weeks ago what they wanted and they will get at least two presents plus candy and nuts.

The commission was created in 1936 after R. R. Owen, then state budget officer, and his wife visited the state orphanage and witnessed a lonely, drab Christmas eve. Returning to the capitol they told a friend, Sandy Singleton, a member of the legislature, about it and he sponsored a bill creating the commission.

Mrs. Jessie Fountain, the veteran executive secretary of the commission, spends most of the year buying presents. She hunts for bargains and gets as many as possible at wholesale from sympathetic businessmen.

Then about Oct. 1 each year she opens a workshop at the capitol. With a small staff, she gets each package wrapped and addressed to some child. Highway department trucks are pressed into service just before Christmas to make the deliveries.

An effort is made to get the children what they want. Many ask for a Bible and they always get it. Some — just like your children a home — will ask that their brothers and sisters be remembered.

One of the letters Mrs. Fountain likes to talk about came from an Indian boy one year.

"Santa, my name is Yellow Bird Buzzard and I am 12 years old," he wrote. "I am in the seventh grade. For my first choice, I would like a gun and caps; second choice, a flash light and batteries, and my third choice, a Bible. Thank you." He was sent a Bible and one of his other choices.

Another letter from a boy didn't ask anything for himself but wondered if Santa would bring three dolls for his three sisters in another home. The dolls were sent and the boy had a special present for himself, too.

Poinsettias Can Be Saved By Using Care

There is no need to let your Christmas poinsettia die. Instead, with proper care, it will bloom next Christmas, and you can also start others from it.

After the poinsettia is through blooming this winter and its leaves are yellow, put it where the air is dry and the temperature 50 to 60 degrees. Give it no water until May.

Bring it out then, cut it back to a height of six or eight inches, remove it from its pot, and pick away as much of the old soil as you easily can.

Re-pot in a container just large enough to hold the roots comfortably. Use a general purpose soil. Place in a sunny place where the temperature is 60 to 70 degrees. Water sparingly at first and more freely as growth starts. Let no more than three strong shoots develop. When the container is moderately filled with roots, transfer to a larger pot.

After the weather is really warm, you may sink the pot to its rim in a sunny place outdoors. Do not remove the plant from the pot, but fertilize regularly during the summer. In early August pinch the shoots or cut them back. Now let develop only a few strong ones and remove all weak growth. Bring indoors before nights turn cold and place in full sun.

When the shoots are cut off it is easy to start new plants from them. Just pot them and cover with a glass and keep soil real wet.

Probably the most important thing in getting a poinsettia to blossom is to give it a long night, almost 12 hours of complete darkness. This must be uninterrupted by even the briefest illumination. If a light is turned on for only one minute each night it will prevent blooming. Either grow your poinsettias in a room not lighted at night or else construct a light proof cover of black cloth or dark paper for them. The critical period is from Oct. 10 on.

Poinsettias are sensitive to temperatures below 60 degrees and to drafts, dryness of soil, excessive wetness. Any of these conditions may cause the leaves to turn yellow and drop off.

Legendary Haven Still Stands In Suburb Of Modern Cairo

By WILTON WYNN

CAIRO (AP) — A gnarled and broken tree in a suburb of Cairo has a special Christmas significance to Egyptian Christians.

The tree is not an ordinary Christmas tree. A million Christians living in Egypt believe this old sycamore sheltered the Holy Family on the day they entered the Nile Valley after their long flight from the wrath of King Herod in Palestine.

In the West little is known about the flight into Egypt. The New Testament refers to it briefly in a few verses. But for nearly 400 miles up the Nile from Cairo, shrines found at intervals tell the story of the flight which spared the life of the newborn child Jesus from the Slaughter of the Innocents in Bethlehem.

Commemoration of this flight forms an important part of Christmas festivities for Egypt's Copts, an ancient Christian community founded by St. Mark in the First Century.

Caverns Mark Beginnings

A series of gloomy caverns in Bethlehem mark the beginning of the flight into Egypt. Underneath the ancient church of the Nativity is the cave in which the birth of Christ is said to have occurred. Adjoining it is a similar cavern where the angel is said to have warned Joseph in a dream to take his family and flee the wrath of Herod. A third in the series of caverns supposedly was the mass grave for baby boys killed by Herod in his efforts to destroy the Child destined to be King.

On a hillside on the edge of Bethlehem is the so-called "milk grotto." Here the Holy Family paused to rest in a cavern. A drop of milk from the Virgin's breast fell on the stone and turned it white. A Franciscan chapel sits on the site today.

If the Holy Family tried to flee from Bethlehem to Egypt today, their way would be barred by the Arab - Israeli military frontier. Bethlehem is in the Arab kingdom of Jordan. The route to Egypt runs across Israel, at war with Jordan since 1948.

The Holy Family would have had to cross the armistice line a second time in leaving Israel to enter the Gaza Strip on the coastal plain of southern Palestine. From Gaza they would journey down the coast to enter Egypt proper in the Sinai Peninsula.

According to Egyptian legends, the Holy Family first moved out of the desert into the lush green valley of the Nile at ancient Heliopolis, a famous Egyptian city with a temple dedicated to sunworship.

LEGEND SAYS the Holy Family rested under this ancient sycamore during the flight from Herod's wrath. Only one of its two trunks appears to be alive; the other is barren of leaves.

Rested Under Tree

Exhausted by the ride across the desert, the weary family stopped to rest under the spreading branches of a sycamore tree.

Traditions say the Virgin sat on the roots of the tree, holding the child Jesus in her lap. Joseph leaned against the tree while the donkey on which Mary rode grazed nearby.

One legend says Herod's soldiers almost caught up with the family here. They escaped by climbing into the branches of the tree. A huge spider spun a web to hide the family from the soldiers.

The legendary tree still stands in Mataria, the modern suburb built on the site of ancient Heliopolis. The tree is so old its trunk has split in two and both parts of the trunk have been weighted almost to the ground by the continually spreading limbs. Wooden beams serve as props to keep the tree from collapsing completely. One of the trunks still has green leaves at the tips of its limbs; the other looks dead.

The tree is enclosed within a crumbling brick and plaster wall, inside a cornfield. Egyptian men in long cloaks will come to tell the legends of the Holy Family to any curious visitor.

The next stop for the Holy Family was on the bank of the Nile near what is now the residential suburb of Maadi. Here they boarded a sailing vessel for a journey up the river. Remains of the harbor where they boarded the vessel still may be seen.

From Maadi, the Holy Family sailed nearly 400 miles up the Nile to a point deep inside Egypt where they could be secure from Herod's soldiers and spies. Their refuge was near the modern town of Assiut, still a Christian center after 13 centuries of Moslem rule.

On that spot today is the Monastery of the Blessed Virgin, founded in the Fourth Century and reputed to be the richest in Egypt. In that remote site the Holy Family remained till the death of King Herod allowed them to return safe to Palestine.

DISPUTED DAY

Dec. 25 as Christmas day was not among the earliest feasts of the Church. The Early Fathers disputed the date of the birth of Christ until the Fifth Century. Some maintained that other dates including Jan. 6, March 25, May 20, and April 20, were more correct.

Holiday Songs, Stories, Carols Have Hi-Fi Ring

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

If the sound of sleigh bells echoes clearer and louder over the snow-thatched rooftops this Christmas Eve, it's due no doubt to the fact that Santa and his reindeer will come crashing through the sound barrier via the medium of high fidelity recordings.

Ever since Gene Autry deserted his faithful horse "Champion" and took a lucrative ride on "Rudolph the Red-nosed Reindeer," record companies have come to realize that Christmas songs, stories, carols and gift albums are a multi-million dollar business. This year the industry expects to ring up 150 million dollars in Christmas sales of records alone, and an even larger volume in the sales of hi-fi rigs, components and factory - made medium-fi sets. Christmas is to the record industry what Easter is to the clothing field, a time for introducing the latest styles and models in their fanciest trimmings.

Something For Everybody

In the best tradition of Christmas giving, there's something in Santa's record collection for every taste and age.

Children, of course, come highest on the list. Eugene Ormandy, the Philadelphia Orchestra and narrator Cyril Ritchard give an enchanting performance of Prokofiev's "Peter and the Wolf" (Columbia). Antal Dorati and the Minneapolis Orchestra joyously romp through Tchaikovsky's "The Nutcracker Ballet" on a Mercury label and Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra do likewise in an RCA Victor album. Both are musically superb and technically exciting. To woo children away from television toward the hi-fi set in easy doses, Decca offers "The Music from Disneyland" and Columbia recommends Rosemary Clooney singing favorite children's songs in an album called "Clooney Tunes." Conductor Leopold Stokowski gives a musical dissertation on how a symphony orchestra works (Capital).

The Christmas carolers this year include such veteran knights of the turntable as Bing Crosby, Perry Como, Mario Lanza, Fred Waring, Mantovani, the Norman Luboff and Robert Wagner Choirs, Father Sydney MacEwan, counter-tenor Alfred Deller and various church and boys choirs from many lands. Even the marching bands, always a hi-fi favorite, have caught the Christmas tempo, as evidenced by the Westminster album of the Deutschmeister band playing carols.

No Christmas would be complete without a trip to New York's Radio City Music Hall. Roulette Records provides the means with an album of Raymond Paige and the Radio City symphony orchestra performing the music for a complete stage show.

Classics Available

In the field of serious Christmas music, Leonard Bernstein, the New York Philharmonic and the Westminster Choir are heard in a new and excellent recording of Handel's "Messiah" (Columbia). Angel offers Sir Malcolm Sargent conducting "Messiah Highlights" and the Berlin Philharmonic and St. Hedwig's Cathedral Choir in an album of Mozart sacred music. Epic devotes a full album and an accompanying illustrated book to "The Christmas Story." And two companies have taken their recording equipment behind monastery walls for haunting Gregorian masterpieces sung by the monks of the Abbey of St. Pierre de Solesmes in France (London) and the Trappist monks of Gethsemani, Ky. (Columbia).

This year, happily, the trend is away from gimmicks and oddball instruments in Christmas recordings and back to first class musicians playing and singing first class music.

Choose Gifts That Match Fan's Hobby

Getting a Christmas gift for a camera fan, a hunter—or any other hobbyist—can be a problem. Here are some suggestions:

For gardeners: An "automatic gardener" for fertilizing, for killing insects, and for stopping the growth of crabgrass and weeds. It can be attached to any hose or sprinkler system and mixes chemicals with the water spray.

A tropic torch which gives light without attracting insects. It burns kerosene and so operates as a smudge pot, also. They're available in aluminum and brass.

For bridge players: An adjustable lamp which stands on the floor and can be raised or lowered to a desirable height.

Card cases, which vary in size and material. They're available in four-deck or eight-deck sizes, and in leather, plastic and other materials.

For stamp and coin collectors: Whenever possible find out what the field of specialization is. Otherwise, concentrate on informative literature — catalogues, reference books, albums and auction records. New gadgets are always on the market, but collectors eventually fall back on standard items—pincers, glass, coin cases, etc.

Outdoor cooks: A service lamp for night - time barbecuing that attaches to the rotisserie spit motor.

A draft grill with a lever that opens and closes holes located at the bottom of the bowl, providing faster cooking with less fuel.

For model makers: Miniature trains which can be assembled, car kits, locomotive kits, and accessories: extra tracks, buildings, tunnels, etc.

Radio unit (for remote control of model planes, boats and cars) which can be put together at home.

For golfers: A puttee board, with electric cord attachment, for home practice.

A portable oasis—a plastic water container inside a leather case that straps on to the golf bag.

For hunters: A ducker's muff in nylon with goose down lining.

A lightweight shooting vest, equipped with game and shell pockets.

A ¾ length, nylon parka muffler, with zippered front and attached hood.

Laws Against Fireworks To Muffle South's Celebration

By PERRY MULLEN

ATLANTA (AP)—An old French custom adopted many years ago in the Old South is wearing thin

Yankees visiting in the deep South have been surprised at what they viewed as an extremely unorthodox method of celebrating Christmas by shooting off fireworks.

The practice was brought in by early French settlers in Louisiana. Use of fireworks on Christmas is common in France Spain and Italy The French settlers' noisy greeting of Christmas Eve spread to most of the Southern states but did not find favor in Yankee territory

Double Jeopardy

Mounting Fourth of July fireworks casualties brought restrictive ordinances or legislation in many states over the country But the double jeopardy of Christmas and Fourth of July explosives in careless hands prompted legislatures and city governing bodies in the South to bear down even harder on use of ear-splitting miniature bombs, rockets that can knock out an eye or tear off a finger.

State laws in Georgia, North Carolina, Florida and Alabama ban fireworks except in supervised public displays, with a few exceptions Georgia law permits their sale for use outside the state and in farming areas to break up bird infestations. Florida law also permits farmers to explode fireworks to chase birds from their crops Fish hatchery operators in that state also may use firecrackers to scare off predators.

North Carolina relaxed its ban in 1955 by legalizing use of caps for toy pistols in 77 of 100 counties The Alabama law permits use of sparklers but some cities have local ordinances banning them as well as fireworks.

A Kentucky state law makes it illegal to buy, sell, import, shoot or possess fireworks, except at wholesale. The exception opens the way for a few roadside "wholesale" operations but State Fire Marshal Ray Humkey said the 1950 law accomplished its purpose with a phenomenal decrease in accidents.

South Carolina law bans all fireworks except small firecrackers, sparklers and toy pistol caps. Several South Carolina cities enacted ordinances against use of fireworks but these and the state law permit public displays.

Local Ordinances

In Louisiana, where the Christmas fireworks started, there is no general prohibition but most major cities have ordinances against them and their use is declining

Little or no fireworks are used in New Orleans or Baton Rouge on either July 4 or Christmas

Most Tennessee cities and many counties have local ordinances banning fireworks A bill to completely outlaw all kinds was introduced in the 1957 legislature but was watered down to ban Roman candles, sky rockets and similar, except small "soft-shell" variety. The state law doesn't interfere with local laws many of which are more strict

Most larger cities in Mississippi enacted ordinances against fireworks under a local option plan approved by the legislature in 1956. But there has been little decrease in their use since dealers set up shop outside city limits and do a good business.

In Arkansas, Little Rock, Fort Smith, Jonesboro, Pine Bluff and Hot Springs ban fireworks by ordinance. Fort Smith permits supervised displays and police there report a marked decrease in their use.

Texas law limits retail sales of fireworks to periods between June 24 and July 4 and between Dec 15 and Jan 1 The measure passed at the last regular session of the legislature was opposed by the Texas Safety Assn, which wanted the manufacture and sale outlawed completely.

BRIGHTEN YOUR GIFTS

Nothing decorates a Christmas package more prettily than to tie pine cones under the ribbon bow on top of a package

Christmas Is Great—But It Does Bring Its Problems

Broken Crockery Shows Popularity

In Denmark nobody minds if some glass and china are broken during the Christmas festivities The Danes have a use for the pieces just a week later.

On Dec. 31 they welcome the New Year by throwing all the broken china and glassware they can find against the front door of their best friend. The person who has most smashed crockery on the front path next morning is the most popular person in town.

THINK OF OTHERS

Do you know some older person who cannot get out to buy greeting cards? If so, why not buy cards and stamps for them and send before Christmas? It is sure to be appreciated.

SAVE FLASH BULBS

Old flash blubs can be painted and used in Christmas decorations very effectively.

Woman's Call Leads To Many Xmas Adoptions

By LARRY FRIEDMAN

TULSA, Okla (AP) — On a December afternoon in 1947 a woman called at the office of County Probation Officer Chauncey O Moore to inquire if he could find her a needy child to care for over Christmas

Moore's job was dealing with adult probationers, but a newspaper reporter overheard the conversation, and wrote a story about it

Reaction to the story came quickly That Christmas, Moore put 53 underprivileged children in foster homes to enjoy true holiday happiness

Receptive Chord

From that spontaneous experiment, the Child Christmas Placement Program has grown steadily. In 10 years, 1,089 children have been placed for Yuletide "adoption" Last year 194 from 4 to 12 years of age went to 137 homes

In the program, Moore gets assistance from schools and teachers, from churches, clubs and news media "We could not possibly have accomplished all we have without the help of many people," he says

Now the city's acting postmaster, one of Moore's biggest rewards is the sheaf of letters he gets after each Christmas Some are from couples with as many as four or five children They write that having a needy child in their homes for the holidays has helped teach their own children to be unselfish and to share good fortune.

As one letter put it, "Our children learned a very real Christmas lesson which might be paraphrased by 'Do unto others ' "

Some of the placements produce heart-tugging stories

Deaf mute parents wrote Moore asking that their normal 5-year-old girl be placed in a temporary home for the holidays

"We'd like Mary to be able to hear people laughing and singing this Christmas," their letter read Later they reported the holiday was the most exciting of their daughter's life

One woman, grateful for an enjoyable Christmas provided her 9-year-old son while she recuperated from a serious illness, asked two children into her home the next year.

"My son received so much happiness last year," she wrote Moore, 'that I now want him to experience the joy of bringing happiness to others"

Education Assured

Some of the "foster" parents have come to refer to their holiday visitors as "our kids" and a few have confided to Moore they will 'see them through" high school or college

Moore circulates questionnaires in the city's schools—one for the those wanting the guests Moore requires the requesting family to submit three letters of recommendation, which are carefully checked. The needy child's parents, of course, must also consent.

Why does Moore who has no children, take on this work?

"It's very simple," he smiles "I enjoy seeing the children, and the people who take them, so happy I get a big kick knowing the youngsters will have a Christmas to remember—and for some it will be the first time they ever received a gift."

USE RETURN ADDRESS

Always put your return address on your Christmas card envelopes If they are not returned, you know the persons to whom they are sent received them.

Laws Against Fireworks To Muffle South's Celebration

By PERRY MULLEN

ATLANTA (AP)—An old French custom adopted many years ago in the Old South is wearing thin.

Yankees visiting in the deep South have been surprised at what they viewed as an extremely unorthodox method of celebrating Christmas by shooting off fireworks.

The practice was brought in by early French settlers in Louisiana. Use of fireworks on Christmas is common in France, Spain and Italy. The French settlers' noisy greeting of Christmas Eve spread to most of the Southern states but did not find favor in Yankee territory.

Double Jeopardy

Mounting Fourth of July fireworks casualties brought restrictive ordinances or legislation in many states over the country. But the double jeopardy of Christmas and Fourth of July explosives in careless hands prompted legislatures and city governing bodies in the South to bear down even harder on use of ear-splitting miniature bombs, rockets that can knock out an eye or tear off a finger.

State laws in Georgia, North Carolina, Florida and Alabama ban fireworks except in supervised public displays, with a few exceptions. Georgia law permits their sale for use outside the state and in farming areas to break up bird infestations. Florida law also permits farmers to explode fireworks to chase birds from their crops. Fish hatchery operators in that state also may use firecrackers to scare off predators.

North Carolina relaxed its ban in 1955 by legalizing use of caps for toy pistols in 77 of 100 counties. The Alabama law permits use of sparklers but some cities have local ordinances banning them as well as fireworks.

A Kentucky state law makes it illegal to buy, sell, import, shoot or possess fireworks, except at wholesale. The exception opens the way for a few roadside "wholesale" operations but State Fire Marshal Ray Humkey said the 1950 law accomplished its purpose with a phenomenal decrease in accidents.

South Carolina law bans all fireworks except small firecrackers, sparklers and toy pistol caps. Several South Carolina cities enacted ordinances against use of fireworks but these and the state law permit public displays.

Local Ordinances

In Louisiana, where the Christmas fireworks started, there is no general prohibition but most major cities have ordinances against them and their use is declining.

Little or no fireworks are used in New Orleans or Baton Rouge on either July 4 or Christmas.

Most Tennessee cities and many counties have local ordinances banning fireworks. A bill to completely outlaw all kinds was introduced in the 1957 legislature but was watered down to ban Roman candles, sky rockets and similar, except small "softshell" variety. The state law doesn't interfere with local laws, many of which are more strict.

Most larger cities in Mississippi enacted ordinances against fireworks under a local option plan approved by the legislature in 1956. But there has been little decrease in their use since dealers set up shop outside city limits and do a good business.

In Arkansas, Little Rock, Fort Smith, Jonesboro, Pine Bluff and Hot Springs ban fireworks by ordinance. Fort Smith permits supervised displays and police there report a marked decrease in their use.

Texas law limits retail sales of fireworks to periods between June 24 and July 4 and between Dec. 15 and Jan. 1. The measure, passed at the last regular session of the legislature, was opposed by the Texas Safety Assn., which wanted the manufacture and sale outlawed completely.

BRIGHTEN YOUR GIFTS

Nothing decorates a Christmas package more prettily than to tie pine cones under the ribbon bow on top of a package.

Christmas Is Great—But It Does Bring Its Problems

Broken Crockery Shows Popularity

In Denmark nobody minds if some glass and china are broken during the Christmas festivities. The Danes have a use for the pieces just a week later.

On Dec. 31 they welcome the New Year by throwing all the broken china and glassware they can find against the front door of their best friend. The person who has most smashed crockery on the front path next morning is the most popular person in town.

THINK OF OTHERS

Do you know some older person who cannot get out to buy greeting cards? If so, why not buy cards and stamps for them and send before Christmas? It is sure to be appreciated.

SAVE FLASH BULBS

Old flash blubs can be painted and used in Christmas decorations very effectively.

Legendary Haven Still Stands In Suburb Of Modern Cairo

By WILTON WYNN

CAIRO (AP) — A gnarled and broken tree in a suburb of Cairo has a special Christmas significance to Egyptian Christians.

The tree is not an ordinary Christmas tree. A million Christians living in Egypt believe this old sycamore sheltered the Holy Family on the day they entered the Nile Valley after their long flight from the wrath of King Herod in Palestine.

In the West little is known about the flight into Egypt. The New Testament refers to it briefly in a few verses. But for nearly 400 miles up the Nile from Cairo, shrines found a millennium tell the story of the flight which spared the life of the newborn child Jesus from the slaughter of the Innocents in Bethlehem.

Commemoration of this flight forms an important part of Christmas festivities for Egypt's Copts, an ancient Christian community founded by St. Mark in the First Century.

Caverns Mark Beginnings

A series of gloomy caverns in Bethlehem mark the beginning of the flight into Egypt. Underneath the ancient church of the Nativity is the cave in which the birth of Christ is said to have occurred.

Adjoining it is a similar cavern where the angel is said to have warned Joseph in a dream to take his family and flee the wrath of Herod. A third in the series of caverns supposedly was the mass grave for baby boys killed by Herod in his efforts to destroy the Child destined to be King.

On a hillside on the edge of Bethlehem is the so-called "milk grotto." Here the Holy Family paused to rest in a cavern. A drop of milk from the Virgin's breast fell on the stone and turned it white. A Franciscan chapel sits on the site today.

If the Holy Family tried to flee from Bethlehem to Egypt today, their way would be barred by the Arab - Israeli military frontier. Bethlehem is in the Arab kingdom of Jordan. The route to Egypt runs across Israel, at war with Jordan since 1948.

The Holy Family would have had to cross the armistice line a second time in leaving Israel to enter the Gaza Strip on the coastal plain of southern Palestine. From Gaza they would journey down the coast to enter Egypt proper in the Sinai Peninsula.

According to Egyptian legends the Holy Family first moved out of the desert into the lush green valley of the Nile at ancient Heliopolis, a famous Egyptian city with a temple dedicated to sun worship.

Rested Under Tree

Exhausted by the ride across the desert, the weary family stopped to rest under the spreading branches of a sycamore tree.

Traditions say the Virgin sat on the roots of the tree holding the child Jesus in her lap. Joseph leaned against the tree while the donkey on which Mary rode grazed nearby.

One legend says Herod's soldiers almost caught up with the family here. They escaped by climbing into the branches of the tree. A huge spider spun a web to hide the family from the soldiers.

The legendary tree still stands in Matarija, the modern suburb built on the site of ancient Heliopolis. The tree is so old its trunk has split in two and both parts of the trunk have been weighted almost to the ground by the continually spreading limbs. Wooden beams serve as props to keep the tree from collapsing completely. One of the trunks still has green leaves at the tips of its limbs, the other looks dead.

The tree is enclosed within a crumbling brick and plaster wall, inside a cornfield. Egyptian men in long cloaks will come to tell the legends of the Holy Family to any curious visitor.

The next stop for the Holy Family was on the bank of the Nile near what is now the residential suburb of Maadi. Here they boarded a sailing vessel for a journey up the river. Remains of the harbor where they boarded the vessel still may be seen.

From Maadi, the Holy Family sailed nearly 400 miles up the Nile to a point deep inside Egypt where they could be secure from Herod's soldiers and spies. Their refuge was near the modern town of Assiut, still a Christian center after 13 centuries of Moslem rule.

On that spot today is the Monastery of the Blessed Virgin, founded in the Fourth Century and reputed to be the richest in Egypt. In that remote site the Holy Family remained till the death of King Herod allowed them to return safe to Palestine.

LEGEND SAYS the Holy Family rested under this ancient sycamore during the flight from Herod's wrath. Only one of its two trunks appears to be alive; the other is barren of leaves.

DISPUTED DAY

Dec. 25 as Christmas day was not among the earliest feasts of the Church. The Early Fathers disputed the date of the birth of Christ until the Fifth Century. Some maintained that other dates, including Jan. 6, March 25, May 20 and April 20, were more correct.

Holiday Songs, Stories, Carols Have Hi-Fi Ring

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

If the sound of sleigh bells echoes clearer and louder over the snow-thatched rooftops this Christmas Eve, it's due no doubt to the fact that Santa and his reindeer will come crashing through the sound barrier via the medium of high fidelity recordings.

Ever since Gene Autry deserted his faithful horse "Champion" and took a lucrative ride on "Rudolph the Red-nosed Reindeer," record companies have come to realize that Christmas songs, stories, carols and gift albums are a multi-million dollar business. This year the industry expects to ring up 150 million dollars in Christmas sales of records alone, and an even larger volume in the sales of hi-fi rigs, components and factory-made medium-fi sets. Christmas is to the record industry what Easter is to the clothing field, a time for introducing the latest styles and models in their fanciest trimmings.

Something For Everybody

In the best tradition of Christmas giving, there's something in Santa's record collection for every taste and age.

Children, of course, come highest on the list. Eugene Ormandy, the Philadelphia Orchestra and narrator Cyril Ritchard give an enchanting performance of Prokofiev's "Peter and the Wolf" (Columbia). Antal Dorati and the Minneapolis Orchestra joyously romp through Tchaikovsky's "The Nutcracker Ballet" on a Mercury label and Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra do likewise in an RCA Victor album. Both are musically superb and technically exciting. To woo children away from television toward the hi-fi set in easy doses, Decca offers "The Music from Disneyland" and Columbia recommends Rosemary Clooney singing favorite children's songs in an album called "Clooney Tunes." Conductor Leopold Stokowski gives a musical dissertation on how a symphony orchestra works ("Capital").

The Christmas carolers this year include such veteran knights of the turntable as Bing Crosby, Perry Como, Mario Lanza, Fred Waring, Mantovani, the Norman Luboff and Robert Wagner Choirs, Father Sydney MacEwan, counter-tenor Alfred Deller and various church and boys choirs from many lands. Even the marching bands, always a hi-fi favorite, have caught the Christmas tempo, as evidenced by the Westminster album of the Deutschmeister band playing carols.

No Christmas would be complete without a trip to New York's Radio City Music Hall. Roulette Records provides the means with an album of Raymond Paige and the Radio City symphony orchestra performing the music for a complete stage show.

Classics Available

In the field of serious Christmas music, Leonard Bernstein and the New York Philharmonic and the Westminster Choir are heard in a new and excellent recording of Handel's "Messiah." Columbia's Angel offers Sir Malcolm Sargent conducting "Messiah Highlights" and the Berlin Philharmonic and St. Hedwig's Cathedral Choir in an album of Mozart sacred music. Epic devotes a full album and an accompanying illustrated book to "The Christmas Story." And two companies have taken their recording equipment behind monastery walls for haunting Gregorian masterpieces sung by the monks of the Abbey of St. Pierre de Solesmes in France (London) and the Trappist monks of Gethsemani, Ky. (Columbia).

This year, happily, the trend is away from gimmicks and oddball instruments in Christmas recordings and back to first class musicians playing and singing first class music.

Choose Gifts That Match Fan's Hobby

Getting a Christmas gift for a camera fan, a hunter—or any other hobbyist—can be a problem. Here are some suggestions:

For gardeners: An automatic gardener for fertilizing, for killing insects and for stopping the growth of crabgrass and weeds. It can be attached to any hose or sprinkler system and makes chemicals with the water spray.

A tropic torch which gives light without attracting insects. It burns kerosene and so operates as a smudge pot also. They're available in aluminum and brass.

For bridge players: An adjustable lamp which stands on the floor and can be raised or lowered to a desirable height.

Card cases, which vary in size and material. They're available in book-deck sizes and in leather, plastic and other materials.

For stamp and coin collectors: Whenever possible find out what the field of specialization is. Otherwise concentrate on informative books, albums and auction records. New gadgets are always on the market, but collectors eventually turn back on standard items—pincers, glass coin cases, etc.

Outdoor cooks: A service lamp for night-time barbecuing that attaches to the rotisserie spit motor.

A chef's fork with a five-tine blade and double hook at the bottom of the bowl, plus long faster cooking with less fuel.

For model makers: Miniature trains which can be assembled, car kits, locomotive kits, and accessories: extra tracks, buildings, tunnels, etc.

Radio unit for remote control of model planes, boats and cars which can be put together at home.

For golfers: A putting board, with electric cord attachment, for home practice.

A portable oasis—a plastic water container inside a leather case that straps on to the golf bag.

For hunters: A duckers muff in camo with goose down lining.

A 3/4 length nylon parka mufflet with zippered front and attached hood.

Present-Happy Man Glad His Birthday's On Xmas

By CARROLL ARIMOND

"Your birthday's on Christmas? What a shame to lose out on presents that way."

There's a remark I've heard altogether too often.

I cannot speak for other Christmas-birthday folks like Clara Barton, Sir Isaac Newton, Gladys Swarthout or Conrad Hilton. But for myself (Dec. 25, 1909) I must say I do as well at unwrapping time as one whose birthday is, say, July 25.

Never has anyone handed me a package and said, "This is your Christmas and birthday present." If it's a year for ties, I get two, one specifically a Christmas gift, the other a birthday present.

Once, as a small boy, I got the only present a neighbor gave at Yuletide. As an Orthodox Jew she did not recognize Christmas. But she stopped in to hand me a package, stressing, "It's for your birthday."

Oversight Impossible

A birthday forgotten is one of the pangs of heart I've never suffered. It is just about impossible for anyone within the gift-giving or card-sending perimeter not to remember a birthday falling on Christmas.

The only real doubling up occurs in greeting cards. In the last few years that industry has catered to a limited market by producing some attractive combination Christmas-Birthday cards. It is gratifying to receive one of these. It shows the sender, while possibly mass-buying cards for his other friends, took special pains in singling out one for me.

Birthday parties are no problem whatever for us on Dec. 25. Christmas always brings families and friends together. At our house the dinner menu always has been roast turkey and trimmings followed by plum pudding. At nightfall the birthday party begins with the same guests digging into cold turkey and birthday cake illuminated, lately, by as many candles as fire regulations allow.

Name Solved

The arrival of a baby on Christmas has a blessing often overlooked. It can solve the painful problem of what to name the child without offending rich Uncle Ebenezer or Grandma Brunhilda. As the saying goes, a Christmas baby brings his name with him.

In my case the choice demanded no coin-flipping. Carroll is the Gaelic form of Charles. My father's middle name was Charles; my mother is a Gael-born Flynn. That settled it.

If this Christmas you're looking for this Christmas Carroll to offer condolences on being cheated out of a birthday, I should be easy to find. Look for me at a stack of packages twice as big as yours.

Two Couples In Minnesota Real Santas

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Two Rochester couples are making reality out of the Santa Claus legend.

Every Christmas eve they don costumes and go from home to home distributing gifts and happiness.

Those whom Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Jameson seek out usually are the poor, the elderly who live alone, and others whose holiday season might be bleak.

Mr. Jameson recalls one visit to a very poor home where the father suggested he not leave anything that year because another nearby family needed presents more than he.

The other Santa Claus couple, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Torgerson, frequently call at the homes of invalid children who are unable to visit Santa at downtown stores and whose parents would like to see them have the fun of such an experience.

"Our reward," say the Torgersons, "is the joy of the children when they see Santa."

Neither the Jamesons, who have been carrying on their work since 1945, nor the Torgersons who started more recently, have children. They operate independently.

Don't Throw Dolls Away; Repair Simple

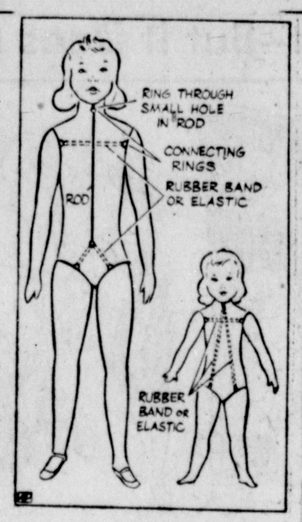
You can make it a merry Christmas for a child by simply doing a little work on old dolls.

A local doll hospital or supplier will have anything you need.

Most parts—wigs, eyes, heads, arms and legs—are not expensive.



Suppose you have a doll that needs a wig . . . Here's how to put it on.

1. Remove old hair completely.
2. Apply any water-proof cement.
3. Hold doll between yourself and table.

This will leave your arms free

4. Slip the wig on from the back, with the thumbs holding the head steady and the forefingers gently guiding the wig.
5. Bring wig well over the forehead, then move back into desired position.
6. Hold the wig in place with two rubber bands, one across the forehead to the back and the other across the top and under the nose.
7. Let dry for a few hours.

Or take eye-setting. Single eyes must be set by machine, but you can install eyes that come in a unit yourself.

1. Set the eyes in the openings and hold temporarily with a little wax from a candle.
2. Hold them permanently by applying pastic wood or plaster of Paris.

Many dolls have elastic bands which hold the limbs and head in place and allow these parts to move properly, as shown in the illustration at right. There must be the exact amount of tension on the rubber or elastic band. Sometimes a rubber band needs to be cut and tied shorter to give more tension. If it's an elastic band, get the right tension by cutting and then looping the two ends together with fine wire.

You can give your old doll a beauty treatment cheaply enough.

1. Wash the wig, using lukewarm water with soap suds.
2. Place the wig back on the doll and brush.
3. Sections of the hair may be placed in curlers. Use hair pins, too.

Lips: use red nail polish. Likewise for fingernails and toenails.

Cheeks: lipstick rubbed with a cloth to make rouge.

Stuffed animals are not at all

Difficult To Repair

1. Take seams out by snipping the thread, being careful not to snip the material.
2. When seam is wide enough, stuff cotton or other material inside.
3. Put enough stuffing inside so that there is tension when the seams are brought together.
4. Sew, using a strong needle and double or triple thread — nylon thread is strongest, but others will do.

Make Furniture For Doll Houses

Want to make some furniture for doll houses at practically no expense?

Take large match boxes, remove the drawers and glue the main sections together, stacking one upon the other. Then give them a coat of paint or enamel. Also enamel the ends of the drawers. When the drawers are dry, make handles for each with string, using a heavy crochet cord and a darning needle. Insert drawers and you have a chest that will please any little miss.

For another chest, use small match boxes in the same way. Make two tiny chests and glue them together for a double chest that has 10 tiny drawers.

For a clothes closet, take a shoe box, put holes on each side about two inches from the top and through these holes run a wooden dowel. Then cut hangers from paste board and hang on the wooden rack. Enamel this to match the chests.

We're heading your way with a sleighful of good wishes for this festive season! May you and all your loved ones enjoy a happy holiday!

MERRY CHRISTMAS!

The mistletoe's above the door,
The mantel's hung with pine,
And every frosted windowpane
Is bright with candleshine . . .

At last the children are in bed
And parents smile to see
The growing pile of dreams-come-true
Beneath the star-tipped tree.

Far off, the church bells bless the night
With wind-blown, silvery chime—
May Joy and Peace be with us all
Until next Christmas-time!

After Long And Tragic Decline Reindeer Population Now Rising

By ROGER GREENE

Rudolf the reindeer and all his kin have found a warm spot in American hearts at Christmastime.

But what about Rudolf during the other 11 months of the year? Where does he live? Would he make a good pet? How many reindeer are there? Where did they originate?

Until late in the 19th Century, reindeer were found only in the arctic regions of Europe and Asia. Then, between 1891 and 1904, the U.S. government brought 1,296 tame reindeer to Alaska to improve the economic condition of the Eskimos. By 1930 the gentle-eyed creatures had multiplied so rapidly that more than 600,000 were roving the Alaskan tundra.

Today, only an estimated 25,000 to 60,000 are left in domestic herds.

Once High Priced

To understand what happened it is necessary to go back to the bitter controversy which erupted in the 1930s when Alaska's Eskimos accused white men of slaughtering their reindeer for meat. Dry and gamey, like moose or elk meat, it once sold as high as $2.25 a pound in New York.

Finally, in 1937, Congress restricted reindeer ownership to Alaskan Eskimos. Some 100,000 reindeer in the hands of non-natives were bought up and turned over to the Eskimos.

It soon became clear, however, that many Eskimos lacked sufficient interest to care for reindeer herds. Left to their own devices, thousands of footloose reindeer strayed and joined migratory herds of caribou. Thousands of others fell prey to wolves. The Eskimos themselves killed great numbers to provide meat for sled dogs.

In spite of all this, the deer are increasing in numbers again.

Not Ideal Pets

Native owners sell them for $50 to $100 apiece for meat in Alaskan cities, where it brings slightly less than the price of beefsteak. Also, the Eskimos do a small business selling reindeer for use in drawing Santa Claus sleighs in Christmas parades. Several state-side promoters have made a profitable business of this.

Evan L. Flory, Indian Affairs Bureau expert, says reindeer are gentle though stubborn and train smartly for their role in Christmas parades, but the youngster clamoring for one as a pet should be induced to settle for a rabbit. They can't stand heat, for one thing.

Reindeer cows give rich milk —so rich that it is best diluted with three parts of water. Chilled, it makes a kind of ice cream.

The bulls, weighing up to 400 pounds, grunt bellow and cough, and their ankle tendons click like castanets. They use hoofs rather than antlers in fighting. The antlers are mostly sex-appeal decoration.

In harness, reindeer can pull faster and harder than horses. One deer pulled two men in a sleigh for 16 hours at an average speed of 18 m.p.h. And centuries ago, according to legend, a reindeer cow carried a messenger 400 miles in two days to warn the king of Norway of a plot against his life.

GIFTS FOR SHUT-INS

If you like to grow potted plants, plan to have several on hand to give at Christmas time. A bright plant is an especially welcome gift for a shut-in.

Entire Family Can MakeGood Ornaments

Here are some ideas for decorations that the whole family can join in making:

Painted Pine Cones: Paint cones with thick poster paints and shake glitter on while paint is wet. Spray with lacquer.

Mural or Backdrop: Paint a Christmas scene on a big piece of brown paper. Or it can be done with crayons or pieces of colored paper, pasted and cut.

Mobiles: For age 6 upwards, youngsters can tie all sorts of Christmas objects on strings and balance them on a coat hanger or other stiff wire.

Legend Says Saint Francis FoundedCarol

One legend attributes the first Christmas carol to St. Francis of Assisi. The story is that St. Francis built the first creche and started the custom of singing carols around it in the 13th Century to combat a heresy of that time which denied that Christ was Divine.

Although this explanation of carols has an engaging logic, they actually pre-date St. Francis by many hundreds of years. Carols originated almost as early as Christmas became a regular feast in the Christian calendar.

Dancing accompanied those early carols — the word carol comes from the Italian "carolare" meaning a "dance ring." But dancing was frowned upon by the early church as irreligious and that part gradually died out.

Most Tested by Time

Most of our traditional carols are drawn from British and continental hymns written between 1200 and 1500. Many of the most popular ones, however, date from much more recent times when carol-singing underwent a great revival.

One of these is "Silent Night". Its history reads like a fairy tale.

It was Christmas Eve in 1818 that Joseph Mohr, minister of the tiny Bavarian village of Oberndorf, sat down and wrote the verses of the world-famous carol. The same day he sent them to his friend, Franz Gruber, organist and schoolmaster, who, within a few hours wrote the melody. Hours later it was sung for the first time — in the church at Oberndorf before the midnight service.

Just before Christmas the church organ broke down. As the organ mender worked in the church, he heard the carol sung many times, and it so appealed to him that he learned it.

Returning to his home in Zillerthal, he sang it to the four Strasser sisters, who toured Germany and Austria singing folksongs. They included "Silent Night" in their repertoire as a "folksong," and it became popular all over Europe. It was not until after Mohr was dead, and Gruber was an old man, that the true author and composer were given recognition.

HOW DO YOU RATE?

Do you get fewer than 13½ greeting cards at Christmas time? In that case, says one of the greeting card manufacturers, you are below par. It estimates that Americans exchange more than two billion cards during the Christmas season.

Christmas Book Buyers Go For Best Sellers

By W. R. ROGERS
Associated Press Arts Editor

The books that sell the best at Christmas time sell the best at all other times, too.

Of course, there are the per- "Christmas Carol" and the Holy Bible, which are especially popular right now.

But if you watch best-seller lists you'll find they don't change much with the calendar. More books sell in December, but they are more of the same; by and large the general buyer makes his choice rather on popularity than on timeliness.

Out of Tune

That may mean for instance that some un-Christmassy works sell specially well at Christmas. All last December, for instance, fiction best-seller lists were headed by Grace Metalious' "Peyton Place."

But books that do not violate the spirit of this particular holiday sell, too. A year ago Kathryn Hulme's "The Nun' Story" topped the non-fiction selections, and other numbers in demand were "This Hallowed Ground," by Bruce Catton and "Profiles in Courage," by John F. Kennedy.

Over the years the same pattern has been followed: Popular at one season, popular at all.

The most popular book in the 20th century, according to Alice Payne Hackett's "Sixty Years of Best Sellers," would have made a suitable number at any Christmas: Charles Monroe Sheldon's "In His Steps." Published just 60 years ago, it has sold perhaps eight million copies.

All-time Leaders

The moralizing Elbert Hubbard's "A Message to Garcia" sold four million copies since publication in 1898. Fulton Oursler's "The Greatest Story Ever Told" and "The Greatest Book Ever Written" have together sold more than five million copies, though they are less than a decade old. A comparable success was scored by Jesse Lyman Hurlbut's "The Story of the Bible," published in 1904.

But there have been extraordinary successes which did not partake of the seasonal religious mood. Mickey Spillane and Erle Stanley Gardner are among the top best sellers of all time and all seasons. Erskine Caldwell is invariably popular.

For young people before, during and after the holiday, there have been "Heidi," "Black Beauty," "The Wonderful Wizard of Oz" and the "Little Colonel" series that seem destined to endure in the nursery and playroom for decades to come.

Give Live Tree Plenty Of Water

If you get a living Christmas tree this year, do remember that like any house plant it requires plenty of water. Otherwise you might as well, or better, have a cut tree.

A secret of making a living tree worthwhile is to plant it as soon after Christmas as possible. Common among the living trees are Norway spruce, Scotch pine and balsam firs. They grow large and should not be used as foundation plantings.

In setting them out, select a well drained site, dig a pit considerably larger than the earth ball, and tamp in plenty of good top soil mixed with peat moss or compost.

After Long And Tragic Decline Reindeer Population Now Rising

By ROGER GREENE

Rudolf the reindeer and all his kin have found a warm spot in American hearts at Christmas-time.

But what about Rudolf during the other 11 months of the year? Where does he live? Would he make a good pet? How many reindeer are there? Where did they originate?

Until late in the 19th Century, reindeer were found only in the arctic regions of Europe and Asia. Then, between 1891 and 1904, the U.S. government brought 1,296 tame reindeer to Alaska to improve the economic condition of the Eskimos. # Present-Happy Man Glad His Birthday's On Xmas

"Your birthday's on Christmas? What a shame to lose out on presents that way!"

There's a remark I've heard altogether too often.

I cannot speak for other Christmas-birthday folks like Clara Barton, Sir Isaac Newton, Gladys Swarthout or Conrad Hilton. But for myself (Dec. 25, 1909) I must say I do as well at unwrapping time, as one whose birthday is, say, July 25.

Never has anyone handed me a package and said, "This is your Christmas and birthday present." If it's a year for two, I get two, one specifically a Christmas gift, the other a birthday present.

Once, as a small boy, I got the only present a neighbor gave at Yuletide. As an Orthodox Jew she did not recognize Christmas. But she stopped in to hand me a package, saying, "It's for your birthday."

Oversight Impossible

A birthday blunder is one of the pangs of heart I've never suffered. It is just about impossible for anyone within the gift-giving or card-sending perimeter not to remember a birthday falling on Christmas.

The only real doubling up occurs in greeting cards. In the last few years that industry has catered to a limited market by producing some attractive combination Christmas-Birthday cards. It is gratifying to receive one of these. It shows the sender, while possibly mass-buying cards for his other friends, took special pains in singling out one for me.

Birthday parties are no problem whatever for us on Dec. 25. Christmas always brings families and friends together. At our house the dinner menu always has been roast turkey and trimmings followed by plum pudding. At nightfall the birthday party begins with the same guests digging into cold turkey and birthday cake illuminated, lately, by as many candles as fire regulations allow.

Name Solved

The arrival of a baby on Christmas has a blessing often overlooked. It can solve the painful problem of what to name the child without offending rich Uncle Ebenezer or Grandma Brunhilda. As the saying goes, a Christmas baby brings his name with him.

In my case the choice demanded no coin-flipping. Carroll is the Gaelic form of Charles. My father's middle name was Charles; my mother is a Gael-born Flynn. That settled it.

If this Christmas you're looking for this Christmas Carroll to offer condolences on being cheated out of a birthday, I should be easy to find. Look for me at a stack of packages twice as big as yours.

Two Couples In Minnesota Real Santas

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Two Rochester couples are making reality out of the Santa Claus legend.

Every Christmas eve they don costumes and go from home to home distributing gifts and happiness.

Those whom Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Jameson seek out usually are the poor, the elderly who live alone, and others whose holiday season might be bleak.

Mr. Jameson recalls one visit to a very poor home where the father suggested he not leave anything that year because another nearby family needed presents more than he.

The other Santa Claus couple, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Torgerson, frequently call at the homes of invalid children who are unable to visit Santa at downtown stores and whose parents would like to see them have the fun of such an experience.

"Our reward," say the Torgersons, "is the joy of the children when they see Santa."

Neither the Jamesons, who have been carrying on their work since 1945, nor the Torgersons who started more recently, have children. They operate independently.

Don't Throw Dolls Away; Repair Simple

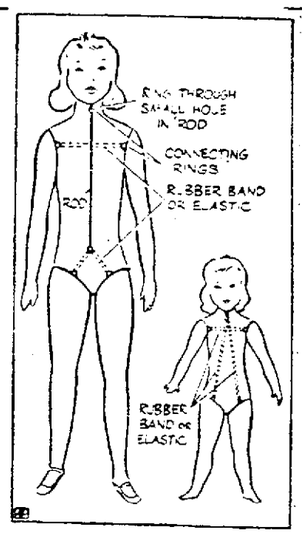
You can make it a merry Christmas for a child by simply doing a little work on old dolls.

A local doll hospital or supplier will have anything you need.

Most parts—wigs, eyes, heads, arms and legs—are not expensive.



Suppose you have a doll that needs a wig . . . Here's how to put it on.

1. Remove old hair completely.
2. Apply any water-proof cement.
3. Hold doll between yourself and table.

This will leave your arms free

4. Slip the wig on from the back, with the thumbs holding the head steady and the forefingers gently guiding the wig.
5. Bring wig well over the forehead, then move back into desired position.
6. Hold the wig in place with two rubber bands, one across the forehead to the back and the other across the top and under the nose.
7. Let dry for a few hours.

Or take eye-setting. Single eyes must be set by machine, but you can install eyes that come in a unit yourself.

1. Set the eyes in the openings and hold temporarily with a little wax from a candle.
2. Hold them permanently by applying pastic wood or plaster of Paris.

Many dolls have elastic bands which hold the limbs and head in place and allow these parts to move properly, as shown in the illustration at right. There must be the exact amount of tension on the rubber or elastic band. Sometimes a rubber band needs to be cut and tied shorter to give more tension. If it's an elastic band, get the right tension by cutting and then looping the two ends together with fine wire.

You can give your old doll a beauty treatment cheaply enough.

1. Wash the wig, using lukewarm water with soap suds.
2. Place the wig back on the doll and brush.
3. Sections of the hair may be placed in curlers. Use hair pins, too.

Lips: use red nail polish. Likewise for fingernails and toenails.

Cheeks: lipstick rubbed with a cloth to make rouge.

Stuffed animals are not at all

Difficult To Repair

1. Take seams out by snipping the thread, being careful not to snip the material.
2. When seam is wide enough, stuff cotton or other material inside.
3. Put enough stuffing inside so that there is tension when the seams are brought together.
4. Sew, using a strong needle and double or triple thread — nylon thread is strongest, but others will do.

Make Furniture For Doll Houses

Want to make some furniture for doll houses at practically no expense?

Take large match boxes, remove the drawers and glue the main sections together, stacking one upon the other. Then give them a coat of paint or enamel. Also enamel the ends of the drawers. When the drawers are dry, make handles for each with string, using a heavy crochet cord and a darning needle. Insert drawers and you have a chest that will please any little miss.

For another chest, use small match boxes in the same way. Make two tiny chests and glue them together for a double chest that has 10 tiny drawers.

For a clothes closet, take a shoe box, put holes on each side about two inches from the top and through these holes run a wooden dowel. Then cut hangers from paste board and hang on the wooden rack. Enamel this to match the chests.

We're heading your way with a sleighful of good wishes for this festive season! May you and all your loved ones enjoy a happy holiday!

Far off, the church bells bless the night
With wind-blown, silvery chime—
May Joy and Peace be with us all

Photographers Like East Corinth, Vt.; Good Setting

EAST CORINTH, Vt. (AP) — Take a bowl-shaped valley in the rolling hills of Vermont. Set a simple, white church in it and top the church with a shining steeple. Nestle a cluster of houses nearby. Then roll out a carpet of snow.

Now take this living Christmas card and put it two miles from a main highway and only some 25 miles from the state capital at Montpelier.

The photographers won't be long in coming. Just ask the 225 folks who live in this Vermont hamlet.

East Corinth is the "most photographed village in New England," according to Walter Hard Jr., editor of the Vermont Life magazine.

Professional's Favorite

A native is less reserved. Mrs. Willard Martin, who lives here, contends no town in the United States is more popular with photographers. The great majority of the camera-carrying visitors are professionals.

The reason is East Corinth's picturesque church, homes and forested hills. Ask a photographer to get you a picture of the "typical New England village" and he probably will head for East Corinth.

"MOST PHOTOGRAPHED VILLAGE" in New England is the distinction of East Corinth, Vt., shown here at its wintertime best. The picturesque church was built in 1840.

An unknown photographer catapulted East Corinth to fame some 20 years ago. Editor Hard says state historians have never been able to find out who he was. The photographer took a shot of the village from the hills nearby late in the 1930s and sold it to A. Devany, New York photographic agency.

Photographer started coming in droves after the first picture began circulating.

Modern Problem

The Johnny-come-latelies face a problem that didn't bother the early arrivals. It seems folks in a "typical New England village" like to watch television just like everybody else, so TV antennae are springing up on rooftops and atop the hills. Cameramen are having more and more difficulty getting a shot that doesn't include them.

The town doesn't have much tourist trade. It is possible to rent a room, but East Corinth doesn't have any hotels or inns.

Many villagers are Congregationalists, and East Corinthians call their white church the "Congo church." It was built in 1840, for $1,840, according to village lore, and once was called the Union Meeting House.

Although New Englanders are not renowned for hearty guffaws, pictures of their tidy village in advertisements have furnished villagers more than one chuckle.

The New York Central Railroad once published a view of a passenger car loaded with homebound Christmas travelers. The train window revealed a view of East Corinth—which actually is 200 miles from the nearest New York Central tracks.

The "typical New England village" also is popular with liquor advertisers, despite the fact that Corinth has voted dry at every election in town history.

Mother Saves Xmas Tree For GI Dead 6 Yrs.

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP)— For seven long years a Christmas tree has been standing at the Salvador Lopez home here, waiting for a soldier boy who never will see it.

Its needles, brown and brittle, still cling to the branches. Its gay, colorful ornaments are dusty. Its limbs are shrouded with cobwebs. But Mrs. Lopez has no plans to take it down.

"Richard told me to save it," she tells visitors.

Richard was a corporal in Korea in 1950 when Gen MacArthur thought the war would be over by Christmas.

"Save my Christmas for me, Mom," he wrote. "I don't want presents, just a Christmas tree."

Homecoming Delayed

The Chinese Reds spoiled prospects that Christmas for celebrations at home by U.N. troops, but Mrs. Lopez saved the tree.

Prospects for Richard became darker when word arrived that he had been trapped with the Marines in the Chosen Reservoir area, but brightened with the news that he had escaped uninjured.

"Mom, I'm coming home," he wrote joyously in the early summer of 1951.

The tree was then still sturdy and green, although not planted in dirt or water. It was waiting for Richard.

Then that July Richard drowned off Kobe, Japan, while on the way home. It was on the day that Mrs. Lopez received word of his death that she first noticed the leaves turning brown. But he had asked her to save the tree and save it she would.

Special Shelter

Now the tree is sheltered in its own home, the Christmas Tree House, erected by the Lopez family in 1953. To Mrs. Lopez it is as much a part of her son as are the Bronze Star, the National Defense Medal, the Korean Service Medal, the divisional citation, the letters and the pictures showing a dark-haired, bright-eyed youth.

This year, for the seventh straight year, the lights of the tree will glow again on Christmas Eve and Christmas day.

Christmas Village Always On Display

MARDELA, Md. (AP) — It's Christmas all year 'round in the home of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Hochmuth in this community on Maryland's Eastern Shore.

A Christmas village, built by their two sons, 25-year-old William and 26-year-old Joseph, is on permanent display in an entire room set aside for that purpose.

The village grew over a 12-year period from a few little buildings and a train to its present size—big enough to fill a room 16 x 16 feet. There are now three trains and a painted background.

The Hochmuths live on a 300-acre dairy farm near here. There are three other sons and a daughter away from home.

Children in the neighborhood drop in occasionally to start the trains running and watch the houses light up.

MAKE OWN WREATH

There is no better foundation for an evergreen wreath than a wire coat hanger. Just straighten it out into a round ring leaving the holder at the top. Then with heavy thread and large needle fasten the greens around this wire ring and hang up by the hook.

Balls from sycamore trees make lovely ornaments for the Christmas tree. They are especially pretty if painted with either silver or gold paint but are nice in natural form.

In these festive days we extend to you greetings for a Merry Christmas

How to produce a Christmas PUPPET SHOW

Children love Christmas and they love puppets—so why not combine the two attractions?

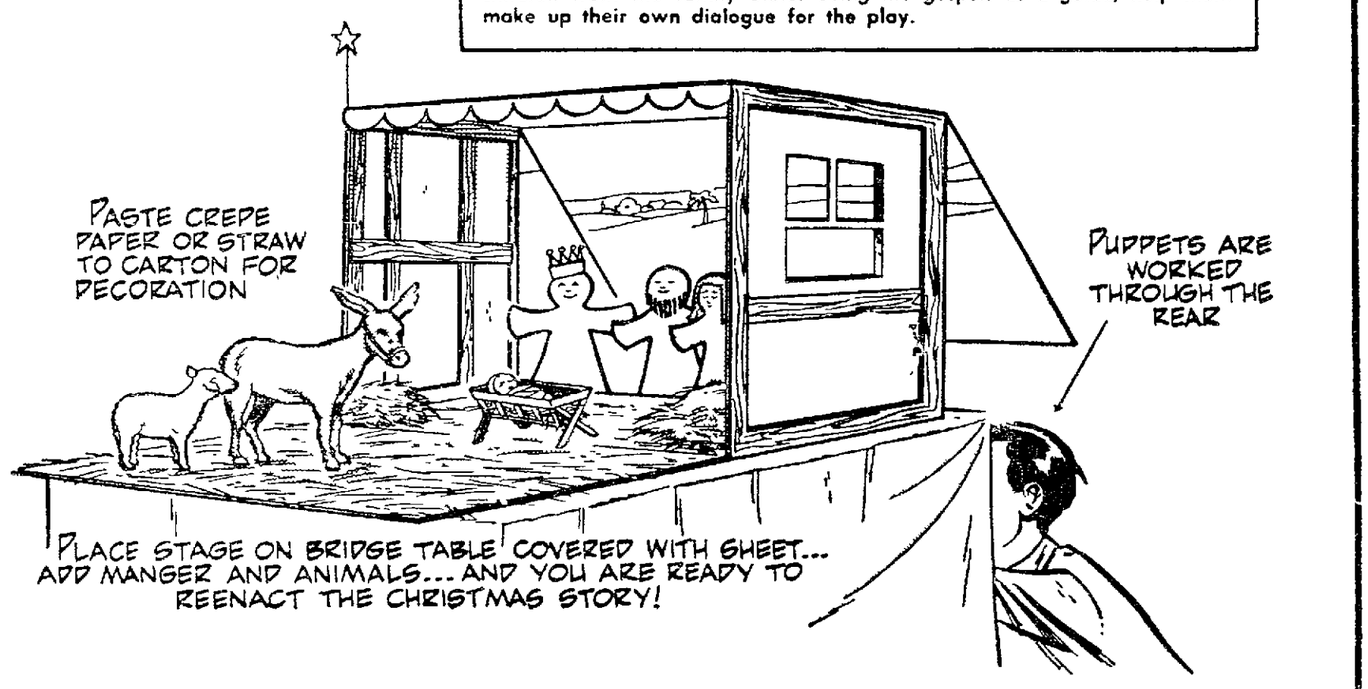
By following the directions on this page and adding your own ingenuity you and your children can enact the eternal story of the Nativity on Christmas Eve. Puppet-making will not only keep the children busy during the last-minute rush but will give a deeper meaning to this joyous season.

You will need puppets of Mary, Joseph, at least one of the Three Kings, a shepherd and perhaps some angels. The size of the cast will depend on the number of your children, but remember that one child may be able to handle more than one part.

Following the directions above, trace and then cut the puppets from felt or cloth pieces in your scrap bag. After sewing front and back together, faces may be embroidered on or made with buttons, sequins or tiny bits of felt. Pictures of the Nativity are a fine source of ideas on puppet colors and appearance.

For the stage and scenery, all you need are a large cardboard carton and a card table you can cover with a sheet. Cut and decorate the carton as illustrated.

When puppets and stage are ready, read the Christmas story to the children from the family Bible. Using the gospels as a guide, help them make up their own dialogue for the play.



To each and every one of you...may the Yuletide season bring goodwill and lasting joy to your hearts!

Photographers Like East Corinth, Vt.; Good Setting

EAST CORINTH, Vt. (AP) — Take a bowl-shaped valley in the rolling hills of Vermont. Set a simple, white church in it and top the church with a shining steeple. Nestle a cluster of houses nearby. Then roll out a carpet of snow.

Now take this living Christmas card and put it two miles from a main highway and only some 25 miles from the state capital at Montpelier.

The photographers won't be long in coming. Just ask the 225 folks who live in this Vermont hamlet.

East Corinth is the "most photographed village in New England," according to Walter Hard Jr., editor of the Vermont Life magazine.

Professional's Favorite

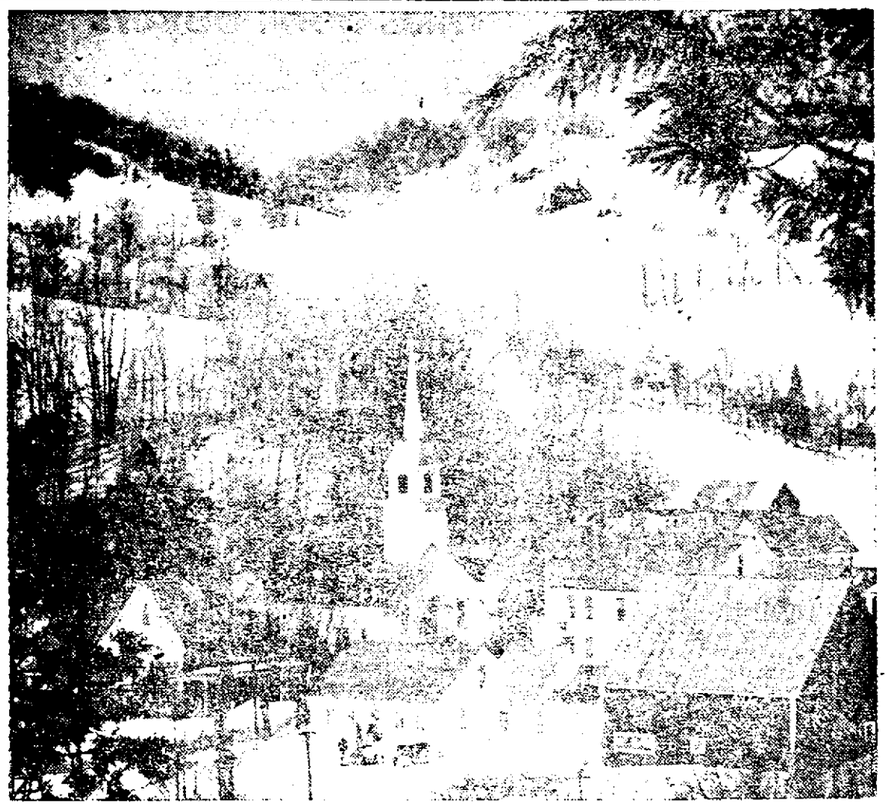
A native is less reserved. Mrs. Willard Martin, who lives here, contends no town in the United States is more popular with photographers. The great majority of the camera-carrying visitors are professionals.

The reason is East Corinth's picturesque church, homes and forested hills. Ask a photographer to get you a picture of the "typical New England village" and he probably will head for East Corinth.



"MOST PHOTOGRAPHED VILLAGE" in New England is the distinction of East Corinth, Vt., shown here at its wintertime best. The picturesque church was built in 1840.

An unknown photographer catapulted East Corinth to fame some 20 years ago. Editor Hard says state historians have never been able to find out who he was. The photographer took a shot of the village from the hills nearby, late in the 1930s and sold it to A. Devany, New York photographic agency.

Photographer started coming in droves after the first picture began circulating.

Modern Problem

The Johnny-come-lately set's a problem that didn't bother the early arrivals. It seems folks in a "typical New England village" like to watch television just like everybody else, so TV antennae are springing up on rooftops and atop the hills. Cameramen are having more and more difficulty getting a shot that doesn't include them.

The town doesn't have much tourist trade. It is possible to rent a room, but East Corinth doesn't have any hotels or inns.

Many villagers are Congregationalists, and East Corinthians call their white church the "Congo church." It was built in 1840, for $1,840, according to village lore, and once was called the Union Meeting House.

Although New Englanders are not renowned for hearty guffaws, pictures of their tidy village in advertisements have furnished villagers more than one chuckle.

The New York Central Railroad once published a view of a passenger car loaded with homebound Christmas travelers. The train window revealed a view of East Corinth—which actually is 200 miles from the nearest New York Central tracks.

The "typical New England village" also is popular with liquor advertisers, despite the fact that Corinth has voted dry at every election in town history.

Mother Saves Xmas Tree For GI Dead 6 Yrs.

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP)— For seven long years a Christmas tree has been standing at the Salvador Lopez home here, waiting for a soldier boy who never will see it.

Its needles, brown and brittle, still cling to the branches. Its gay, colorful ornaments are dusty. Its limbs are shrouded with cobwebs. But Mrs. Lopez has no plans to take it down.

"Richard told me to save it," she tells visitors.

Richard was a corporal in Korea in 1950 when Gen MacArthur thought the war would be over by Christmas.

"Save my Christmas for me, Mom," he wrote. "I don't want presents, just a Christmas tree."

Homecoming Delayed

The Chinese Reds spoiled prospects that Christmas for celebrations at home by U.N. troops, but Mrs. Lopez saved the tree.

Prospects for Richard became darker when word arrived that he had been trapped with the Marines in the Chosen Reservoir area, but brightened with the news that he had escaped uninjured.

"Mom, I'm coming home," he wrote joyously in the early summer of 1951.

The tree was then still sturdy and green, although not planted in dirt or water. It was waiting for Richard.

Then that July Richard drowned off Kobe, Japan, while on the way home. It was on the day that Mrs. Lopez received word of his death that she first noticed the leaves turning brown. But he had asked her to save the tree and save it she would.

Special Shelter

Now the tree is sheltered in its own home, the Christmas Tree House, erected by the Lopez family in 1953. To Mrs. Lopez it is as much a part of her son as are the Bronze Star, the National Defense Medal, the Korean Service Medal, the divisional citation, the letters and the pictures showing a dark-haired, bright-eyed youth.

This year, for the seventh straight year, the lights of the tree will glow again on Christmas Eve and Christmas day.

Magic Of Candle-Lit Tree Stirs Comparison Old, New

By WILLIAM J. CONWAY

For a moment the small boy stood at the head of the stairs and shivered from cold and excitement. His glance flitted down the carpeted stairs to the high-ceiled entrance hall and darted past the stately grandfather's clock. And there it was—the tall Christmas tree, aglow with the soft, shining light of two dozen candles.

I was the small boy and that Christmas of long ago was the first one I can remember in much detail.

We had been burned out of our home and we were staying with Aunt Kate, a plumpish, pinkish woman who never quite lost her youthful chuckle. In her home, the so-called hot air furnace never routed the winter's cold from the corners of the big house on the windy uplands a few miles from the frozen Mississippi River.

I recall slipping from bed in the early morning on that Christmas Day and making my way, a bit unsteadily, to the tree. It was trimmed with strands of tinsel and strings of gaily colored baubles. But, clearest of all, I remember the nimbus of candle light.

Round eyes eventually perceived that the holders were attached to tree branches with snap-jaw clamps. Each candle had been lighted minutes earlier—by Santa Claus, of course. The little tongues of flames swayed and writhed and waved, and faint reflections waved back from the polished floor and woodwork an the shiny face of the grandfather's clock.

There were gifts to be opened and long, black, schoolboy stockings to be emptied of hard candy, nuts and oranges.

Then we set out for church. The house was on the fringe of town. To the north, where open fields lay, you could see only "a universe of sky and snow." We headed south along a path that wound through drifts as high as a small boy's chest.

(This year we probably will be up early and off to church. That custom is changeless. Then we'll come back to the big city apartment to watch the youngsters explore the stockings and inspect their presents.)

After church, there was a happy walk back through the snow to home and dinner—cooked on a ponderous, black kitchen range. Then a once-a-year treat: Christmas carols played on a talking machine.

(After dinner, we'll have peace in our household this year. Or what would be peace if "God Rest Ye, Merry Gentlemen" wouldn't come booming over the airwaves for the 29th time since Thanksgiving.)

When the Gramophone was put away, we sat back in peace; a pervading peace broken only by the crackle of shells bursting under the pressure of a silver nutcracker.

(If last year is a fair indication, Helen and Spence—our closest neighbors—will take the four strides across the apartment back porch this year for another exchange of white elephant gifts. A copy of "The Early Days of Rock Island and Davenport", to a man who wouldn't read it, for a riding boot hook, to a man who never has been on a horse. This will call for a drink of our whisky, and that for a drink of theirs. The spirit of the season and reciprocity soon will rule the sizable building and a revolving party will move merrily from apartment to apartment.)

The do-it-yourself idea wasn't known, as such, in the old days. Folks just up and did what had to be done. Women cleaned the turkeys and baked fruit cakes and dozens of cookies. They indulged little girls who liked to fashion chains of colored pape rto hang on the Christmas tree. And everybody fussed — and fumed — over the package wrapping. ("Takes 20 minutes to do, and 20 seconds to undo.")

Now the Christmas pastries come in tin boxes from the supermarket and the parcels are delivered gift-wrapped from department stores.

The silent, spartan toy soldiers have gone with the small boys who handled them with firm but loving hands. They have been supplanted by whirring, flashing, smoking, whistling miniature railroads. The soft, cuddly cloth-bodied doll has been replaced by the scale-model doll house with four rooms an proportionate furniture.

We live in an era of tremendous technological progress, of course. But those stubby, multi-hued bulbs never will catch and hold the eye like the symmetrical flames of candles.

DUCK IS GOOD SELECTION FOR FAMILY OF FOUR

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

If there are to be no more than four around your Christmas table, a roast duck is a perfectly good choice for your main course; for eight you will need two ducks.

As a stuffing for the duck, we recommend this one prepared from packaged herb-seasoned stuffing, butter or margarine, orange and raisins. Then for a garnish festive enough for the holiday, serve the duck with preserved kumquats and pineapple chunks alternated on short skewers.

ROAST DUCK WITH
ORANGE-RAISIN STUFFING

Ingredients: 4 to 5 pound (ready-to-cook weight) Long Island duckling, 1 cup water, ¼ pound (½ cup) butter or margarine, 1 tablespoon grated orange rind, 2 tablespoons orange juice, ½ cup seedless raisins (rinsed in hot water and drained), 1 package (8 ounces herb-seasoned stuffing).

Method: If duck is frozen, thaw according to package directions and remove giblets. Wash and dry duck. Fold back wing tips. Put water and butter in a 3-quart kettle; heat slowly until buttter melts. Add orange rind, orange juice, raisins and stuffing; stir with a fork until all of the stuffing is moistened. Stand duck in a large mixing bowl; lightly fill body cavity with dressing; close cavity by sewing up or lacing string around small skewers inserted from side to side of vent. Lightly fill neck cavity with stuffing, fasten neck skin down with small skewers. Place duck on rack in shallow roasting pan. Roast in moderate (350 to 375 degrees) oven until skin is crisp and well browned and drumstick joint moves easily or twists out—about 2½ hours. Remove skewers and cord or thread before serving.

Note: If you prefer, you may roast the duck in a slow (325 degrees) oven until tender—about 2½ hours for a medium well done bird. In this case, about half an hour before the duck is done, brush with kitchen bouquet to achieve a rich brown skin.

Over one-half of the world's supply of carbon black is manufactured in the vicinity of Borger, Texas. (Pop. 10,018).

MIDDLETOWN, Ohio (AP) — It was clear and dry, certainly not a good day for ducks. But that's what was holding up traffic when patrolmen Clarence Bailey and Lloyd Brewer arrived — a duck.

Then the owner, Mrs. Ralph DeJarnette, arrived to say the duck's name was Mort and that she wanted to give Mort away. Patrolman Bailey ended his report: "All parties concerned are happy, even Mort."

Bailey took him home. . . as a pet.

RAF WILL PLAY SANTATOTROOPS

By A. L. MCINTYRE

KUALA LUMPUR (AP) — RAF Valetta transports will wing out over Malaya's green jungles on Christmas Eve dropping canisters filled with Christmas fare to British Commonwealth troops forced by the Communist rebellion to spend the festive season in jungle forts, isolated outposts or on patrol.

It will be the 10th Christmas in succession that Commonwealth forces have had no break from the gruelling jungle warfare.

"I must stress that there will be no question of a letup," a senior army spokesman said.

"It is impossible to say how many men will be out in the jungle on Christmas Eve or Christmas itself. There are always several hundred troops at one time out on patrol but if we were to receive a hot tip on Christmas Eve we would immediately mount an operation," he added.

The Christmas "hampers" dropped by parachute will include cold turkey, pudding, nuts, whisky, brandy, beer and Christmas delicacies.

Carols Will Be Played

On Christmas day, voice aircraft, usually used to call on the Red guerillas to surrender, will broadcast carols to troops in the jungle.

This has become a highlight of Christmas day in Malaya since two years ago. Even the civilian population in the towns look forward to it.

More than 1,000 Australian soldiers and 750 New Zealanders have just arrived to join 15,000 Britons in the jungle war.

To many of the Australians and New Zealanders, it will be their first Christmas away from home.

Get Into Holiday Spirit By Sewing Cheerful Stockings

Here's a smart idea for pepping up the living room mantle, a way to make sure it has plenty o color even before Santa arrives to fill the stockings.

To make the "Choo-Choo and Tree" cleft in the picture, you need ⅛ yard green felt, white felt scraps, and a variety of bright thread.

Cut two stocking-shaped pieces from bright colored felt, following pattern given below.

Transfer the candy cane designs to one felt stocking. Using the decorative stitch attachment on the machine, stitch the candy canes.

Transfer the "choo-choo" train design to a piece of white felt. Decorate the train as desired. Place the train on the stocking and applique around its outside tracing. After applique is completed, cut away extra felt.

Next, transfer the tree design to a piece of white felt, and position this between the top and center rows of candy canes. Applique around the tree and around the outside edge of the block design. Cut white felt entirely out of the inside of the tree, and cut away extra material all around outside edge of the appliqued block.

Place the wrong sides of the two stocking pieces together, and stitch around the outside edge of the stocking.

Sporty Fox

To make the fox (center in the picture) you need ¼ yard black or bright felt, a scrap of tan or light brown heavy cotton fabric (for the "fox design"), braided brown yard or soutache braid, a blue bead and a scrap of wire for "eye" and "eyeglasses."

Cut two pieces from the felt, following the pattern given below.

Place the fox fabric over a piece of the felt, with right sides up. Place the paper pattern for the fox over both, and stitch through all three pieces, following the pattern outline. When finished, tear away the paper.

Apply the braid or yarn around entire edge and in loop design around tail using either the underbraider or the topbraider on your sewing machine. Then trim away the excess cotton fabric.

Make the "ear" with a few outline stitches by hand. Sew the bead in place for the eye. Bend wire to form glasses and tack into place.

Put together front and back as with the "Choo-Choo."

Golden Doodles

To make the golden doodles, (right in the picture) you need ¼ yard felt in green or other bright color, and some gold soutache braids. After cutting stocking-shapes from felt, sketch a "doodle" on one piece and—setting your machine for a medium stitch — stitch the braid into place using either underbraider or topbraider. Then put front and back together as with the other two stockings.

To make stockings easy to hang, a brass curtain ring should be sewn to their top left corners. A bit of ribbon will give them additional charm.

When Buying For Children Remember Ages

Buying a useful Christmas toy for a young child is not as easy as it looks.

Children have capabilities dependent to a large extent upon their age. Unless you give some thought to your gift, and choose one which requires no more of the child than the child can give, it can easily become a complete waste of time and money.

Six-year-old Susie will hardly give her fluffy dog a second look, and 2-year-old Peter will smash his complicated wind-up clown during the first five minutes.

"It's vitally important both from a safety and educational standpoint to select toys that are suitable for each child's use at the time he receives them," according to Dr. Emma Sheehy, professor of Child Development at Columbia Teachers College and chairman o the Toy Guidance Council advisory committee.

To help those without small children to observe all during the year, here are some of the basic play favorites, classified according to age appeal:

INFANCY

Soft dolls and animals, exercisers for crib and carriage, rattles, bathtub toys, music boxes and phonographs.

1 TO 2 YEARS

Soft animals and dolls, blocks for piling and nesting, picture books, doll carts, wheelbarrows, simple take apart toys, musical toys, balls, push and pull toys.

2 TO 4 YEARS

4 TO 6 YEARS

Simple crafts, simple games for group play, manipulative pre-school toys, sidewalk bike, wagon, scooter, action pull toys, costumes; gun and holster sets, storybooks, dolls with washable hair, doll furniture, sports equipment.

6 TO 8 YEARS

Cash registers, banks, intermediate construction sets, intermediate crafts, action and board games, science toys, wheel toys, animal and doll collections, sewing, jewelry making equipment (boys) electric trains, gym equipment, scale model vehicles.

8 TO 10 YEARS

Advanced construction sets, all the instruments in the band, science toys, typewriters, wheel toys, games of skill.

Get Into Holiday Spirit By Sewing Cheerful Stockings

Here's a smart idea for pepping up the living room mantle, a way to make sure it has plenty of color even before Santa arrives to fill the stockings.

To make the "Choo-Choo and Tree" (left in the picture) you need ⅛ yard green felt, white felt scraps, and a variety of bright thread.

Cut two stocking-shaped pieces from bright colored felt, following pattern given below.

Transfer the candy cane designs to one felt stocking. Using the decorative stitch attachment on the machine, stitch the candy canes.

Transfer the "choo-choo" train design to a piece of white felt. Decorate the train as desired. Place the train on the stocking and applique around its outside tracing. After applique is completed, cut away extra felt.

Next, transfer the tree design to a piece of white felt, and position this between the top and center rows of candy canes. Applique around the tree and around the outside edge of the block design. Cut white felt entirely out of the inside of the tree; and cut away extra material all around outside edge of the appliqued block.

Place the wrong sides of the two stocking pieces together, and stitch around the outside edge of the stocking.

Sporty Fox

To make the fox (center in the picture), you need ¼ yard black or bright felt, a scrap of tan or light brown heavy cotton fabric (for the fox design), braided brown yard or soutache braid, a blue bead and a scrap of wire for "eye" and "eyeglasses."

Cut two pieces from the felt, following the pattern given below.

Place the fox fabric over a piece of the felt, with right sides up. Place the paper pattern for the fox over both, and stitch through all three pieces, following the pattern outline. When finished, tear away the paper.

Apply the braid or yarn around entire edge and in loop design around tail using either the underbraider or the topbraider on your sewing machine. Then trim away the excess cotton fabric.

Make the "ear" with a few outline stitches by hand. Sew the bead in place for the eye. Bend wire to form glasses and tack into place.

Put together front and back as with the "Choo-Choo."

Golden Doodles

To make the golden doodles, (right in the picture) you need ⅛ yard felt in green or other bright color, and some gold soutache braids. After cutting stocking-shapes from felt, sketch a "doodle" on one piece and—setting your machine for a medium stitch — stitch the braid into place using either underbraider or topbraider. Then put front and back together as with the other two stockings.

To make stockings easy to hang, a brass curtain ring should be sewn to their top left corners. A bit of ribbon will give them additional charm.

When Buying For Children Remember Ages

Buying a useful Christmas toy for a young child is not as easy as it looks.

Children have capabilities dependent to a large extent upon their age. Unless you give some thought to your gift, and choose one which requires no more of the child than the child can give, it can easily become a complete waste of time and money.

Six-year-old Susie will hardly give her fluffy dog a second look, and 2-year-old Peter will smash his complicated wind-up clown during the first five minutes.

"It's vitally important both from a safety and educational standpoint to select toys that are suitable for each child's use at the time he receives them," according to Dr. Emma Sheehy, professor of Child Development at Columbia Teachers College and chairman of the Toy Guidance Council advisory committee.

To help those without small children to observe all during the year, here are some of the basic play favorites, classified according to age appeal:

INFANCY

Soft dolls and animals, exercisers for crib and carriage, rattles, bathtub toys, music boxes and phonographs.

1 TO 2 YEARS

Soft animals and dolls, blocks for piling and nesting, picture books, doll carts, wheelbarrows, simple take apart toys, musical toys, balls, push and pull toys.

2 TO 4 YEARS

4 TO 6 YEARS

Simple crafts, simple games for group play, manipulative pre-school toys, sidewalk bike, wagon, scooter, action pull toys, costumes: gun and holster sets, storybooks, dolls with washable hair, doll furniture, sports equipment.

6 TO 8 YEARS

Cash registers, banks, intermediate construction sets, intermediate crafts, action and board games, science toys, wheel toys, animal and doll collections, sewing, jewelry making equipment (boys) electric trains, gym equipment, scale model vehicles.

8 TO 10 YEARS

Advanced construction sets, all the instruments in the band, science toys, typewriters, wheel toys, games of skill.

Magic Of Candle-Lit Tree Stirs Comparison Old, New

By WILLIAM J. CONWAY

For a moment the small boy stood at the head of the stairs and shivered from cold and excitement. His glance flitted down the carpeted stairs to the high-ceiled entrance hall and darted past the stately grandfather's clock. And there it was—the tall Christmas tree, aglow with the soft, shining light of two dozen candles.

I was the small boy and that Christmas of long ago was the first one I can remember in much detail.

We had been burned out of our home and we were staying with Aunt Kate, a plumpish, pinkish woman who never quite lost her youthful chuckle. In her home, the so-called hot air furnace never routed the winter's cold from the corners of the big house on the windy uplands a few miles from the frozen Mississippi River.

I recall slipping from bed in the early morning on that Christmas Day and making my way, a bit unsteadily, to the tree. It was trimmed with strands of tinsel and strings of gaily colored baubles. But, clearest of all, I remember the nimbus of candle light.

Round eyes eventually perceived that the holders were attached to tree branches with snap-jaw clamps. Each candle had been lighted minutes earlier—by Santa Claus, of course. The little tongues of flames swayed and writhed and waved, and faint reflections waved back from the polished floor and woodwork an the shiny face of the grandfather's clock.

There were gifts to be opened and long, black, schoolboy stockings to be emptied of hard candy, nuts and oranges.

Then we set out for church. The house was on the fringe of town. To the north, where open fields lay, you could see only "a universe of sky and snow." We headed south along a path that wound through drifts as high as a small boy's chest.

(This year we probably will be up early and off to church. That custom is changeless. Then we'll come back to the big city apartment to watch the youngsters explore the stockings and inspect their presents.)

After church, there was a happy walk back through the snow to home and dinner—cooked on a ponderous, black kitchen range. Then a once-a-year treat: Christmas carols played on a talking machine.

(After dinner, we'll have peace in our household this year. Or what would be peace if "God Rest Ye, Merry Gentlemen" wouldn't come booming over the airwaves for the 29th time since Thanksgiving.)

When the Gramophone was put away, we sat back in peace: a pervading peace broken only by the crackle of shells bursting under the pressure of a silver nutcracker.

(If last year is a fair indication, Helen and Spence—our closest neighbors—will take the four strides across the apartment back porch this year for another exchange of white elephant gifts. A copy of "The Early Days of Rock Island and Davenport", to a man who wouldn't read it, for a riding boot hook, to a man who never has been on a horse. This will call for a drink of our whisky, and that for a drink of theirs. The spirit of the season and reciprocity soon will rule the sizable building and a revolving party will move merrily from apartment to apartment.)

The do-it-yourself idea wasn't known, as such, in the old days. Folks just up and did what had to be done. Women cleaned the turkeys and baked fruit cakes and dozens of cookies. They indulged little girls who liked to fashion chains of colored pape rto hang on the Christmas tree. And everybody fussed — and fumed — over the package wrapping. ("Takes 20 minutes to do, and 20 seconds to undo.")

Now the Christmas pastries come in tin boxes from the supermarket and the parcels are delivered gift-wrapped from department stores.

The silent, spartan toy soldiers have gone with the small boys who handled them with firm but loving hands. They have been supplanted by whirring, flashing, smoking, whistling miniature railroads. The soft, cuddly cloth-bodied doll has been replaced by the scale-model doll house with four rooms an proportionate furniture.

We live in an era of tremendous technological progress, of course But those stubby, multi-hued bulbs never will catch and hold the eye like the symmetrical flames of candles.

DUCK IS GOOD SELECTION FOR FAMILY OF FOUR

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

If there are to be no more than four around your Christmas table, a roast duck is a perfectly good choice for your main course; for eight you will need two ducks.

As a stuffing for the duck, we recommend this one prepared from packaged herb-seasoned stuffing, butter or margarine, orange and raisins. Then for a garnish festive enough for the holiday, serve the duck with preserved kumquats and pineapple chunks alternated on short skewers.

ROAST DUCK WITH
ORANGE-RAISIN STUFFING

Ingredients: 4 to 5 pound (ready-to-cook weight) Long Island duckling, 1 cup water, ¼ pound (½ cup) butter or margarine, 1 tablespoon grated orange rind, 2 tablespoons orange juice, ½ cup seedless raisins (rinsed in hot water and drained), 1 package (6 ounces herb-seasoned stuffing).

Method: If duck is frozen, thaw according to package directions and remove giblets. Wash and dry duck. Fold back wing tips. Put water and butter in a 3-quart kettle; heat slowly until buttter melts. Add orange rind, orange juice, raisins and stuffing; stir with a fork until all of the stuffing is moistened. Stand duck in a large mixing bowl; lightly fill body cavity with dressing; close cavity by sewing up or lacing string around small skewers inserted from side to side of vent. Lightly fill neck cavity with stuffing, fasten neck skin down with small skewers. Place duck on rack in shallow roasting pan. Roast in moderate (350 to 375 degrees) oven until skin is crisp and well browned and drumstick joint moves easily or twists out—about 2½ hours. Remove skewers and cord or thread before serving.

Note: If you prefer, you may roast the duck in a slow (325 degrees) oven until tender—about 2½ hours for a medium well done bird. In this case, about half an hour before the duck is done, brush with kitchen bouquet to achieve a rich brown skin.

Over one-half of the world's supply of carbon black is manufactured in the vicinity of Borger, Texas. (Pop. 10,018).

MIDDLETOWN, Ohio (AP) — It was clear and dry, certainly not a good day for ducks. But that's what was holding up traffic when patrolmen Clarence Bailey and Lloyd Brewer arrived — a duck.

Then the owner, Mrs. Ralph DeJarnette, arrived to say the duck's name was Mort and that she wanted to give Mort away. Patrolman Bailey ended his report: "All parties concerned are happy, even Mort."

Bailey took him home. . . as a pet.

RAF WILL PLAY SANTATOTROOPS

By A. L. MCINTYRE

KUALA LUMPUR (AP) — RAF Valetta transports will wing out over Malaya's green jungles on Christmas Eve dropping canisters filled with Christmas fare to British Commonwealth troops forced by the Communist rebellion to spend the festive season in jungle forts, isolated outposts or on patrol.

It will be the 10th Christmas in succession that Commonwealth forces have had no break from the gruelling jungle warfare.

"I must stress that there will be no question of a letup," a senior army spokesman said.

"It is impossible to say how many men will be out in the jungle on Christmas Eve or Christmas itself. There are always several hundred troops at one time out on patrol but if we were to receive a hot tip on Christmas Eve we would immediately mount an operation," he added.

The Christmas "hampers" dropped by parachute will include cold turkey, pudding, nuts, whisky, brandy, beer and Christmas delicacies.

Carols Will Be Played

On Christmas day, voice aircraft, usually used to call on the Red guerillas to surrender, will broadcast carols to troops in the jungle.

This has become a highlight of Christmas day in Malaya since two years ago. Even the civilian population in the towns look forward to it.

More than 1,000 Australian soldiers and 750 New Zealanders have just arrived to join 15,000 Britons in the jungle war.

To many of the Australians and New Zealanders, it will be their first Christmas away from home.

There's No Scarcity Of Helpers When Cookie Tree Comes Down

PIERRE, S.D. (AP) — There isn't a light on her Christmas tree, yet Mrs. Ray J. Rummel has so many admiring visitors she has them register.

It takes this Pierre housewife, working alone, several day to decorate it. But she always has scores of volunteers to help take it down.

Mrs. Rummel's attraction is a "Mother Goose" Christmas tree—decorated with more than 200 brightly colored cookies.

Lots Of Work

Every character out of childhood fairyland adorns the tree. Each year it takes three or more days of baking and icing artistry to make the ornaments.

There's Red Riding Hood, Little Bo Peep (complete with crook), Goldilocks and the three bears, the Cat and the Fiddle and the Cow jumping over the moon. Jack Be Nimble is jumping over a candlestick.

There is ample reason why there are so many helpers to take down the tree. All of the ornaments can be eaten and Mrs. Rummel invites the children in for the occasion. They draw slips of paper to determine who gets what character. Mother Hubbard's cupboard may be bare but that doesn't matter. It's edible itself.

Mrs. —Rummel started the Mother Goose Christmas tree in 1938 when she lived in Neligh, Neb., and her children were small. The number of storybook subjects she had to design and decorate grew as the number of children her offspring invited in for the dismantling enlarged.

Although her own children are now grown, she's never had the heart to stop.

PIGEONS BANISHED

WINDSOR, Ont. (AP) — Walter Smith, who keeps racing pigeons, told city council his birds are well-behaved, popular, and don't hang around rooftops. Neighbors supported him. Council, however, ruled that the birds must go, in accordance with a city bylaw.

MRS. RAY RUMMEL puts final figure on her "cookie" tree.

NEW FUDGE FOR CHRISTMAS IS VERY POPULAR

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

The sweetest and trickiest idea we've come upon this year is Animal Cracker Fudge. Small fry will be enchanted with it and grownups won't mind eating it either.

The fudge is a light milk-chocolate color with good flavor and small animal cracker atop each square tastes delicious with the sweet rich candy underneath.

If you try this recipe we think you'll agree with us that it's a great one for youngsters' parties at holiday time and the whole year through. You can vary the garnish by choosing crackers or cookies to suit your party theme — at Christmas time star-shaped cookies are perfect. For a Cowboy and Indian party, use cookies that picture these themes.

Animal Cracker Fudge

Ingredients: 4 squares (1 ounce each) unsweetened chocolate, 1 1-3 cups evaporated milk (undiluted), ¼ cup butter or margarine, 2 teaspoons vanilla, 12 medium-mallows (diced), 16 small animal crackers.

Method: Put chocolate and undiluted evaporated milk in a medium-sized saucepan. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until chocolate melts; beat with rotary beater to blend chocolate. Add sugar and salt. Cook, stirring often, until sugar is dissolved and mixture reaches boiling point. Cook, without stirring, to 238 degrees on a candy thermometer (soft ball stage). Remove from heat. Add butter and vanilla. Cool without stirring to 110 degrees on a candy thermometer (lukewarm). Beat until mixture is creamy and loses gloss. Spread half of fudge into buttered pan (8 by 8 by 2 inches). Sprinkle with marshmallows. Spread with remaining fudge. Space animal crackers evenly over fudge, pressing down. Makes 16-two-inch pieces.

CHRISTMAS LIST MADE FOR OVER 300 CHILDREN

have a tough job with your Christmas list?

Then consider the case of tall, dark-haired Lee Matties who makes a year-around career of meeting Christmas list problems, and others, for more than 300 orphaned, underprivileged and handicapped children.

She is chief clerk of the Colorado House of Representatives. The 300 youngsters are only a portion of those she would like to invite to her annual Christmas party held each year in the House chamber.

Selection of the guests for the annual Christmas party is a major problem for the sprightly Miss Matties, who has been helping unfortunate youngsters—in season and out—for 17 years.

"I hate the thought that everybody who yearns to attend can't—but we do what we're able."

Grows Since 1952

The party has been growing spectacularly since 1952. That was the year the Colorado lawmakers first took an interest in Miss Matties' "kids" after hearing her rave about them for years. Now, their contributions get just a little larger each year. Lobbyists contribute to the party and gift fund. Other statehouse employes add their bit.

How does she know what each of her "kids" want?

"I know every one of them," is her answer. "Why, I take 100 children from the state home to church every Sunday, for one thing."

The Colorado governor has been a regular attendant at the gay festivities and picks a child for a personal gift.

But the greatest gifts of all have been permanent homes with real parents for some of Miss Matties' kids. Several members of the legislature and others who have seen the festivities on TV have adopted some of the party guests.

RARE VISITORS

NOKOMIS, Sask. (AP) — A hunter doesn't have to go outside to find a duck dinner in this town. A prairie chicken flew into the front porch of the home of Archie Pirie. And when Bill Dodsworth opened his back door, in walked a mudhen with a broken wing.

Children On HatterasHave Double Xmas

By CHARLES L. WEST

RODANTHE, N. C. (AP) — Christmas means two things to the children of Hatteras Island—Santa Claus and Old Buck, a kind of bovine anti-Santa.

That's because the kids, and old folks, too, celebrate two Christmases, old and new.

Old Christmas here is unique, falling on Jan. 5. Some other parts of the world celebrate on Jan. 6 — the Epiphany or Twelfth Day of Christmas.

Clouded History

History clouds the origin of the local festivities, although two theories seem to predominate. One relates the celebration to the arrival of the Three Wise Men at the manger of Christ. The other stems from the loss of 11 days when Great Britain and the American colonies shifted from the Julian to the Gregorian calendar in 1752.

Islanders let the "mainlanders" wonder about the origin. They, themselves, dismiss it as of no consequence. "We celebrate Old Christmas on Jan. 5 because that was the date our fathers and their fathers celebrated," one said.

Old Buck can't point with too much certainty to his ancestry, either.

Danish legend boasts a similar character — a bull who hides most of the year but appears at a holiday time.

Old Buck In Replica

The modern day celebration of Old Christmas here features a big oyster roast, a square dance and entertainment at the community house. A canvas and barrel stave replica of Old Buck the bull appears during the evening. Adults distribute gifts for the children and the children vie for a chance to ride Old Buck.

As misty as the origin of the celebration is the origin of habitation on Hatteras island itself. It is believed that its first inhabitants were crews of 16th Century sailing vessels lost in the "Graveyard of the Atlantic," as this treacherous coastline is known. The island's written records date from the middle of the 1700s.

CHANGING TIMES

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Milkmen here are a little more sure of their footing, and maybe a little less quiet, these days.

The city's major dairies have agreed to make their morning deliveries after sun-up.

They say they want their employes to lead more normal lives, and that modern refrigeration has all but eliminated the need for pre-dawn deliveries.

Three Causes For Dazzling Star At Xmas

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press
Science Reporter

In the mysteries of the heavens lie three possible explanations from modern astronomers for the dazzling Star of Bethlehem.

The Bible says the Star appeared suddenly and led the Magi to the manger in Bethlehem.

If the Star was not supernatural, it might be explained by any one of three natural stellar events. The three are all possible explanations produced in years of study by astronomers considering the Christmas story.

Three Natural Possibilities

One, it might have been a supernova. Suddenly a faint or even invisible star explodes in force equal to billions of atom bombs. The exploding star glows brilliantly for a time, then slowly dies down to its former insignificance or less.

Two, it might have been a comet, a speeding visitor from outer space.

Three, it could have been an unusual conjunction or apparent nearness of two or even three planets, which shone brilliantly for a time, and which seemingly moved across the skies.

Historically, astronomers have produced arguments for and against each of these possibilities.

New-born stars and supernovae are not uncommon among the billions upon billions of stars in the universe. They appear suddenly to our vision, when the light from the cosmic explosion reaches earth, and could be interpreted as a new and entirely strange and meaningful star. But a supernova would be relatively fixed in the background of stars, not move as readily or rapidly as the Star of Bethlehem moved.

A new and brilliant comet, brighter than the Arend-Roland comet of last spring, could have been the Bethlehem Star. But such comets are generally seen widely over the world, not merely in one quarter or area. The arrival of a new comet probably would have been recorded by astronomers of the day somewhere in the world. Too, comets generally are popularly thought to be omens of disaster rather than of joyous events.

Triple Display?

Perhaps, say the astronomers, the Star could have been a conjunction of the planets Jupiter and Saturn as they passed one another in our skies. Even Mars, the red planet, could have joined them at the time of the birth of Christ in a close configuration for a brilliant triple display and seemingly new phenomenom.

Knowledge and concepts of astronomy in times long past, and some beliefs then in astrology, all complicate efforts fully to explain the Star of Bethlehem as natural or supernatural.

Little Girls Never Too Young For Frills, Finery

THIS CHRISTMAS BELLE knows it's smart to look angelic around holiday time. So she wears a snow-white dress with red trimming made of estron acetate that stays crisp.

Little girls, like their mothers, need pretty party dresses for the holidays. And nowadays it's easy for the rankest amateur shopper to find just the thing to turn a small Cinderella into a Christmas princess.

Children's dress manufacturers are producing small wonders these days in the form of dainty dresses that look too pretty to be practical, but are made of new miracle fibers that wear like iron, can be dunked out in a washbowl and dry in a jiffy with every pleat, ruffle and lace trimming crisp and smooth.

Durable Glamor

There are nylon organdy party frocks that look like cobwebs and are more durable than a cotton apron. There are new blends of orlon, dacron and other synthetics in dresses that look like wool or silk, but can be tossed in the washing machine and worn without ironing. There are new snow-white acetate dresses that never turn yellow with laundering, shed soil and wrinkles, stay crisp and fresh and require little care.

Styling of the children's dresses this season is as up-to-the-minute as that of grown-up clothes, and small glamor guns insist on the latest thing. Top choices for the holidays are jewel-colored velvets, fragile white organdies with lots of lace and frills or crisp taffeta-textured dresses in gay Christmas colors, such as red and white. You'll find all of them made in new easy-care fabrics that save wear and fear on Mom.

FATHER-SON ACT

CONWAY, S. C. (AP) — This South Carolina city is the site of one half of a father-son mayoral act.

James H. Long is mayor here. His son, James H. Long Jr., is mayor of Daytona Beach, Fla.

Both are serving first terms, each took the oath of office the same night last January.

KITCHENER, Ont. (AP) — Hale and hearty as he celebrated his 96th birthday, Allan Snider said the recipe for longevity is hard work, living moderately, and eating and drinking "sensibly."

SANTA CLAUS IS STILL A SUBTLE, SLY CHARACTER

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
The Associated Press

Paunchy, bearded, fluid - face Santa Claus, the benevolent bagman who makes a business out of dropping down people's chimneys on one night of every year, has remained one of history's most mysterious, elusive characters.

Thousands upon thousands of words have been written about him, but he has never submitted to an interview.

Artists, sculptors, cartoonists and window dressers by the hundreds have attempted to capture his likeness for posterity, but no recognizable photograph is known to exist of him.

Children by the million have witnessed his incredible sleight of hand feats on Christmas morning, but he has never been apprehended in the act of breaking and entering to distribute the wares of his workshop.

His Location Never Found

The exact location of this workshop, a massive underground toy factory operating night and day on year-round basis somewhere in the frozen wastes of the arctic, has never been discovered, despite repeated polar expeditions by Peary, Amundsen, Ellsworth and Byrd.

Where does Santa recruit his help? Are they union or non-union? Who supplies the raw materials for his immense foundries and assembly lines? Has this top-of-the-world Christmas cartel long ago mastered the secrets of the atom? Or does it run on solar energy in a land where half the year there is no sun?

What right does he have to monopolize the minds and hearts of people for one whole day every year, depriving them of their long treasured hates and prejudices? Who gives him safe conduct down the chimneys of the world?

These are questions that never have been answered but will crop up again as he sets out on his nocturnal mission once more this Christmas Eve.

Travels Under Aliases

Travelling under aliases like Kris Kringle, Jolly Old Elf, Good St. Nick and just plain Santa, this shy, retiring virtually unknown undercover man has tested the patience and credulity of millions since time immemorial.

Does he really exist? Will he come again this year?

The known facts about this most wanted and most sought after character are slim and sketchy.

He has been described as being short (perhaps a midget), fat (some liken his abdomen to a gelatinous substance), rosy cheeked; is given to fits of prolonged and immoderate laughter, drives his eight reindeer sled in a reckless fashion, and has been occasionally observed smoking a long Dutch pipe.

Latest Description Of Santa

The latest reports are that he wears gaudy red trousers, jacket and mittens, trimmed in white fur, a black leather belt with gold buckle, and black patent leather boots. His most distinguishing characteristics are a long flowing white beard and a ruddy, bulbous nose. He is said to be about middle aged, and has been for several centuries.

He is known to be armed with a bottomless bag of presents and dangerous on his insistence on spreading good cheer in every direction even where none is wanted.

Radar To Trace Him

An all points bulletin has been broadcast for his speedy apprehension, and this year steps are being taken to trace his movements as he crosses the radar network of the Distant Early Warning system in Canada.

Object: to wish him a Merry Christmas.

Persons having information as to his whereabouts are urged to hang their stockings by the mantel, try not to panic, get a good night's sleep and await further developments.

Three Causes For Dazzling Star At Xmas

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press
Science Reporter

In the mysteries of the heavens lie three possible explanations from modern astronomers for the dazzling Star of Bethlehem.

The Bible says the Star appeared suddenly and led the Magi to the manger in Bethlehem.

If the Star was not supernatural, it might be explained by any one of three natural stellar events. The three are all possible explanations produced in years of study by astronomers considering the Christmas story.

Three Natural Possibilities

One, it might have been a supernova. Suddenly a faint or even invisible star explodes in force equal to billions of atom bombs. The exploding star glows brilliantly for a time, then slowly dies down to its former insignificance or less.

Two, it might have been a comet, a speeding visitor from outer space.

Three, it could have been an unusual conjunction or apparent nearness of two or even three planets, which shone brilliantly for a time, and which seemingly moved across the skies.

Historically, astronomers have produced arguments for and against each of these possibilities.

New-born stars and supernovae are not uncommon among the billions upon billions of stars in the universe. They appear suddenly to our vision, when the light from the cosmic explosion reaches earth, and could be interpreted as a new and entirely strange and meaningful star. But a supernova would be relatively fixed in the background of stars, not move as readily or rapidly as the Star of Bethlehem moved.

A new and brilliant comet, brighter than the Arend-Roland comet of last spring, could have been the Bethlehem Star. But such comets are generally seen widely over the world, not merely in one quarter or area. The arrival of a new comet probably would have been recorded by astronomers of the day somewhere in the world. Too, comets generally are popularly thought to be omens of disaster rather than of joyous events.

Triple Display?

Perhaps, say the astronomers, the Star could have been a conjunction of the planets Jupiter and Saturn as they passed one another in our skies. Even Mars, the red planet, could have joined them at the time of the birth of Christ in a close configuration for a brilliant triple display and seemingly new phenomenom.

Knowledge and concepts of astronomy in times long past, and some beliefs then in astrology, all complicate efforts fully to explain the Star of Bethlehem as natural or supernatural.

Little Girls Never Too Young For Frills, Finery

THIS CHRISTMAS BELLE knows it's smart to look angelic around holiday time. So she wears a snow-white dress with red trimming made of estron acetate that stays crisp.

Little girls, like their mothers, need pretty party dresses for the holidays. And nowadays it's easy for the rankest amateur shopper to find just the thing to turn a small Cinderella into a Christmas princess.

Children's dress manufacturers are producing small wonders these days in the form of dainty dresses that look too pretty to be practical, but are made of new miracle fibers that wear like iron, can be dunked out in a washbowl and dry in a jiffy with every pleat, ruffle and lace trimming crisp and smooth.

Durable Glamor

There are nylon organdy party frocks that look like cobwebs and are more durable than a cotton apron. There are new blends of orlon, dacron and other synthetics in dresses that look like wool or silk, but can be tossed in the washing machine and worn without ironing. There are new snow-white acetate dresses that never turn yellow with laundering, shed soil and wrinkles, stay crisp and fresh and require little care.

Styling of the children's dresses this season is as up-to-the-minute as that of grown-up clothes, and small glamor girls insist on the latest thing. Top choices for the holidays are jewel-colored velvets, fragile white organdies with lots of lace and frills or crisp taffeta-textured dresses in gay Christmas colors, such as red and white. You'll find all of them made in new easy-care fabrics that save wear and fear on Mom.

FATHER-SON ACT

CONWAY, S. C. (AP) — This South Carolina city is the site of one half of a father-son mayoral act.

James H. Long is mayor here. His son, James H. Long Jr., is mayor of Daytona Beach, Fla. Both are serving first terms, each took the oath of office the same night last January.

KITCHENER, Ont. (AP) — Hale and hearty as he celebrated his 96th birthday, Allan Snider said the recipe for longevity is hard work, living moderately, and eating and drinking "sensibly."

SANTA CLAUS IS STILL A SUBTLE, SLY CHARACTER

By HUGH A MULLIGAN
The Associated Press

Paunchy, bearded, fluid - face Santa Claus, the benevolent bagman who makes a business out of dropping down people's chimneys on one night of every year, has remained one of history's most mysterious, elusive characters.

Thousands upon thousands of words have been written about him, but he has never submitted to an interview.

Artists, sculptors, cartoonists and window dressers by the hundreds have attempted to capture his likeness for posterity, but no recognizable photograph is known to exist of him.

Children by the million have witnessed his incredible sleight of hand feats on Christmas morning, but he has never been apprehended in the act of breaking and entering to distribute the wares of his workshop.

His Location Never Found

The exact location of this workshop, a massive underground toy factory operating night and day on year-round basis somewhere in the frozen wastes of the arctic, has never been discovered, despite repeated polar expeditions by Peary, Amundsen, Ellsworth and Byrd.

Where does Santa recruit his help? Are they union or non-union? Who supplies the raw materials for his immense foundries and assembly lines? Has this top-of-the-world Christmas cartel long ago mastered the secrets of the atom? Or does it run on solar energy in a land where half the year there is no sun?

What right does he have to monopolize the minds and hearts of people for one whole day every year, depriving them of their long treasured hates and prejudices? Who gives him safe conduct down the chimneys of the world?

These are questions that never have been answered but will crop up again as he sets out on his nocturnal mission once more this Christmas Eve.

Travels Under Aliases

Travelling under aliases like Kris Kringle, Jolly Old Elf, Good St. Nick and just plain Santa, this shy, retiring virtually unknown undercover man has tested the patience and credulity of millions since time immemorial.

Does he really exist? Will he come again this year?

The known facts about this most wanted and most sought after character are slim and sketchy.

He has been described as being short (perhaps a midget,) fat (some liken his abdomen to a gelatinous substance,) rosy cheeked; is given to fits of prolonged and immoderate laughter, drives his eight reindeer sled in a reckless fashion, and has been occasionally observed smoking a long Dutch pipe.

Latest Description Of Santa

The latest reports are that he wears gaudy red trousers, jacket and mittens, trimmed in white fur, a black leather belt with gold buckle, and black patent leather boots. His most distinguishing characteristics are a long flowing white beard and a ruddy, bulbous nose. He is said to be about middle aged, and has been for several centuries.

He is known to be armed (with a bottomless bag of presents) and dangerous (in his insistence on spreading good cheer in every direction even where none is wanted).

There's No Scarcity Of Helpers When Cookie Tree Comes Down

PIERRE, S D (AP) — There isn't a light on her Christmas tree, yet Mrs Ray J Rummel has so many admiring visitors she has them register

It takes this Pierre housewife, working alone, several day to decorate it But she always has scores of volunteers to help take it down

Mrs Rummel's attraction is a "Mother Goose" Christmas tree—decorated with more than 200 brightly colored cookies

Lots Of Work

Every character out of childhood fairyland adorns the tree Each year it takes three or more days of baking and icing artistry to make the ornaments

There's Red Riding Hood, Little Bo Peep (complete with crook), Goldilocks and the three bears, the Cat and the Fiddle and the Cow jumping over the moon Jack Be Nimble is jumping over a candlestick

There is ample reason why there are so many helpers to take down the tree All of the ornaments can be eaten and Mrs Rummel invites the children in for the occasion They draw slips of paper to determine who gets what character Mother Hubbards cupboard may be bare but that doesn't matter It's edible itself

Mrs —Rummel started the Mother Goose Christmas tree in 1938 when she lived in Neligh, Neb and her children were small The number of storybook subjects she had to design and decorate grew as the number of children her offspring invited in for the dismantling enlarged

PIGEONS BANISHED

WINDSOR, Ont (AP) — Walter Smith, who keeps racing pigeons told city council his birds are well-behaved, popular, and don't hang around rooftops. Neighbors supported him Council, however ruled that the birds must go, in accordance with a city bylaw

MRS RAY RUMMEL puts final figure on her "cookie" tree

NEW FUDGE FOR CHRISTMAS IS VERY POPULAR

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

The sweetest and trickiest idea we've come upon this year is Animal Cracker Fudge Small fry will be enchanted with it and grownups won't mind eating it either

The fudge is a light milk-chocolate color with good flavor and small animal cracker atop each square tastes delicious with the sweet rich candy underneath

If you try this recipe we think you'll agree with us that it's a great one for youngsters' parties at holiday time and the whole year through You can vary the garnish by choosing crackers or cookies to suit your party theme — at Christmas time star-shaped cookies are perfect For a Cowboy and Indian party, use cookies that picture these themes

Animal Cracker Fudge

Ingredients: 4 squares (1 ounce each) unsweetened chocolate 1 1-3 cups evaporated milk (undiluted) 1/4 cup butter or margarine, 2 teaspoons vanilla 12 marshmallows (diced), 16 small animal crackers

Method: Put chocolate and undiluted evaporated milk in a medium-sized saucepan Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until chocolate melts Beat with rotary beater to blend chocolate Add sugar and salt Cook stirring often, until sugar is dissolved and mixture reaches boiling point Cook, without stirring, to 238 degrees on a candy thermometer (soft ball stage). Remove from heat Add butter and vanilla Cool without stirring to 110 degrees on a candy thermometer (lukewarm) Beat until mixture is creamy and loses gloss Spread half of fudge into buttered pan (8 by 8 by 2 inches). Sprinkle with marshmallows Spread with remaining fudge Space animal crackers evenly over fudge, pressing down Makes 16-two-inch pieces have a tough job with your Christmas list?

Then consider the case of tall dark-haired Lee Mattes who makes a year-around career of meeting Christmas list problems and others for more than 300 orphaned underprivileged and handicapped children

She is chief clerk of the Colorado House of Representatives The 300 youngsters are only a portion of those she would like to invite to her annual Christmas party held each year in the House chamber

Selection of the guests for the annual Christmas party is a major problem for the sprightly Miss Mattes who has been helping unfortunate youngsters—in season and out—for 17 years

"I hate the thought that everybody who yearns to attend can't—but we do what we're able"

Grows Since 1952

The party has been growing spectacularly since 1952 That was the year the Colorado lawmakers first took an interest in Miss Mattes' kids after hearing her rave about them for years Now their contributions get just a little larger each year Lobbyists contribute to the party and gift fund Other statehouse employes add their bit

How does she know what each of her 'kids' want?

"I know every one of them" is her answer "Why I take 100 children from the state home to church every Sunday for one thing"

The Colorado governor has been a regular attendant at the gay festivities and picks a child for a personal gift

But the greatest gifts of all have been permanent homes with real parents for some of Miss Mattes kids Several members of the legislature and others who have seen the festivities on TV have adopted some of the party guests

RARE VISITORS

NOKOMIS Sask (AP) — A hunter doesn't have to go outside to find a duck dinner in this town A prairie chicken flew into the front porch of the home of Archie Pirie And when Bill Dodsworth opened his back door, in walked a mudhen with a broken wing

Children On HatterasHave Double Xmas

By CHARLES L WEST

RODANTHE, N C (AP) — Christmas means two things to the children of Hatteras Island—Santa Claus and Old Buck, a kind of bovine anti-Santa

That's because the kids, and old folks, too, celebrate two Christmases, old and new

Old Christmas here is unique, falling on Jan 5 Some other parts of the world celebrate on Jan 6 — the Epiphany or Twelfth Day of Christmas

Clouded History

History clouds the origin of the local festivities, although two theories seem to predominate One relates the celebration to the arrival of the Three Wise Men at the manger of Christ The other stems from the loss of 11 days when Great Britain and the American colonies shifted from the Julian to the Gregorian calendar in 1752

Islanders let the 'mainlanders" wonder about the origin They themselves, dismiss it as of no consequence. "We celebrate Old Christmas on Jan 5 because that was the date our fathers and their fathers celebrated," one said

Old Buck can't point with too much certainty to his ancestry either

Danish legend boasts a similar character — a bull who hides most of the year but appears at holiday time

Old Buck In Replica

The modern day celebration of Old Christmas here features a big oyster roast, a square dance and entertainment at the community house A canvas and barrel stave replica of Old Buck the bull appears during the evening Adults distribute gifts for the children and the children vie for a chance to ride Old Buck

As many as the origin of the celebration is the origin of habitation on Hatteras Island itself. It is believed that its first inhabitants were crews of 18th Century sailing vessels lost in the "Graveyard of the Atlantic," as this treacherous coastline is known The islands written records date from the middle of the 1700s

CHANGING TIMES

CHARLOTTE, N C (AP) — Milkmen here are a little more sure of their footing, and maybe a little less quiet, these days

The city's major dairies have agreed to make their morning deliveries after sun-up

They say they want their employes to lead more normal lives, and that modern refrigeration has all but eliminated the need for pre-dawn deliveries

Navajos Lured Out Of Desert By Xmas Fetes

By ROBERT A BARNES

GANADO, Ariz. (AP) — The drab wastelands of the huge Navajo Reservation come alive at Christmas. Indian men, women and children converge, like spokes on wheels, on several locations.

What brings these people—most of them non-Christians—swarming by the thousands through the cold to remote gathering places at the time of the Savior's birthday?

The attractions are annual Christmas parties staged by the Ganado Mission of the Presbyterian Church.

Strong Medicine

few years ago the parties drew only a few score Navajos. This year some 4,000 can be expected at the celebrations at the mission and at six other locations in a 35-mile radius.

Pickup trucks will bring many of the Navajos. Others will bump across the mesa country they love, in their John Deere wagons or will ride horseback. Some will walk.

A sign in front of the mission proclaims it "a lesson in practical Christianity." No white person who visits this oasis in desolate country, and who looks on at one of the Christmas parties, will question this description.

The Navajos watch patiently and listen intently as youngsters attending school here reenact the Holy Birth in a land of shepherds like themselves. But a birth in a manger would not appear humble to the hogan - dwelling Navajo.

PRESENTS FOR ALL is the attraction most Navajos find in the Ganado Christmas parties. But missionaries are happy to reach them at least once a year with the Christian message.

Luke In Navajo

They pay close attention as a member of their own race tells in simple language (with the gestures which are a must in the Navajo tongue) the story of the Christchild. They listen closely to "Silent Night" and "O Little Town of Bethlehem" sung in Navajo.

Most of the adults do not understand English. For some this annual party is the only contact with Christianity, despite the efforts not only of the Ganado people but of many other missionaries of various faiths throughout the sprawling reservation.

The 75,000 or more Navajos here do not live in towns. They are scattered by small family groups throughout an area larger than many eastern states.

It is not the message in their own tongue which draws these people here, nor is it the Christmas hymns nor the sweet rolls and coffee. It is the gifts which they know are coming.

Christianity's Bait

The presents, representing many hours of labor by church women in far sections of the country, are contained in a colorful cotton print bag. Typical gifts are shirts, pencils, crayons, writing tablets, towels. Children get dolls, picture books and other toy items.

"We cannot hope to turn them all into Christians in one day," former Ganado Supt. Dr. C. G. Salsbury once said, "but here at the mission we feel an obligation to crack the ignorance what little we can while we have them with us."

SWEET TOOTH THIEF

BROCKTON, Mass. (AP) — Calling all cars. Look for a thief with a sweet tooth.

Truck Driver Paul K. Morris of the 20th Century Canteen Co. of Boston told police that while his truck was parked on this city's main street someone stole a tray of pastries and a tray of doughnuts.

Ex-Newsboy Makes Certain Of Merry Xmas

By JIM GREENWOOD
Corpus Christi Caller-Times

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex. (AP)—For 31 years, the biggest and best Christmas parties in South Texas have been the ones that Joe Simon gives for newsboys.

Since 1925, Joe has played Santa to more than 6,000 kids.

His Christmas party this year will be the best one of all, he says. He's been working on it for months.

Joe is a furniture dealer and roots. It dates back to the winter of 1906 in St. Joseph, Mo., where Joe was a hustling, 6-year-old newsboy.

Rugged Start

"You had to be husky to stand the gaff," Simon recalls. "Fighting other newsies to keep your corner wasn't kindergarten stuff. And mine was a pretty good corner."

Occasionally, Joe could make as much as 40 cents before trudging home through the dark. But some days he would lower his head doggedly against the snow and set out for home with only 10 or 15 pennies clutched in his fist.

In December, 1906, Joe heard about a Christmas dinner a local restaurateur was giving for newsboys. He showed up, and as he sat in the warm, delightfully fragrant cafe, stuffing himself with a traditional Christmas feast, Joe made a vow.

"If I ever have the chance, I'm going to give such a party for kids," thought he. That pledge stuck with him—through the next six years as he held his downtown corner, through high school and two years of college, through two years in the Navy (where he won a welterweight belt in boxing competition) and right on up to 1925 when he came to Corpus Christi to open a furniture store

Made Good Promise

The chance to make good on his old vow came on Christmas Day, 1925, when Joe gave his first Christmas party for newsboys. Eighteen showed up. In 31 years since then, he's played host to some 6,000 boys. Each time, Joe's hired the city's best banquet hall, served up the best turkey dinner possible and feted his guests with gifts and entertainers and a movie.

He's going to make his 32nd annual newsboys' dinner one to remember. Since early spring, he's been passing out invitations to those ex-newsies, now grown and still here, who came to some of his first parties.

JOE SIMON, Corpus Christi, Tex., furniture dealer, hands out presents at one of the annual parties he stages for newsboys.

Tells How To Make Old Rose Jar For Gift

Here is a do-it-yourself Christmas gift suggestion to save until next summer—the making of an old-fashioned rose jar.

While not a new idea, such a jar is a real treasure and one that gives pleasure for years.

Here is how to create it:

Gather rose petals, and spread them on some flat surface to dry. (Gather plenty of them because they shrink when dried.) The drying takes a few days.

You will need two ordinary quart jars, and these spices: One ounce of cinnamon, one ounce of ground allspice, one-fourth pound of dried lavender leaves, one-half ounce of mace, two ounces of powdered orris root, one-half ounce grated nutmeg, one-half ounce of ground cinnamon, one half ounce anise seed, and table salt.

When the petals have dried, place them in one-inch layers in the first jar. Between each layer spread the ground cloves, the allspice, the shredded cinnamon, and some table salt. Press down firmly until the petals are packed in the jar. Keep covered for one week.

At the end of the first week transfer the contents of the first jar—once more in one inch layers—to the second jar.

Between these layers, spread the grated nutmeg, the orris root, the anise seed, and the lavender leaves. Then keep the second jar tightly covered for two weeks.

At the end of this time, pour the contents into jars in which you want to keep them permanently. You may also add a few drops of any flower essence.

The lids of the permanent jars should fit tightly. If these are removed only five or ten minutes daily, the rose jars will last for years.

Such jars will lend a delicate fragrance to your home and make a welcome gift at any time—one that ordinarily cannot be purchased in stores.

THE NAME FITS

BELLEFONTAINE, Ohio (AP) — A family of five who recently moved here from Long Island, N. Y., told the Chamber of Commerce they think Bellefontaine is the "dream" place to live.

They may be slightly prejudiced, though. Their last name is Bellefontaine.

Aspiring St. Nicks Drilled In 27 Different Subjects

ALBION, N.Y. (AP) — Santa Claus is getting smarter all the time.

Here at Christmas Park, for 20 years now, he and his helpers have been going in for higher education at the country's only Santa Claus school.

During that period the number of students, sent by stores and other organizations, has increased gradually until the enrollment for the one week course in October is in the 40s.

How on earth can Santa Claus spend a whole week brushing up on his business?

That, says Charles Howard, is not the problem. The real rub is cramming into one week all the subjects that Santa should know.

There are lectures and demonstrations on 27 subjects, such as the history and evolution of Santa, makeup and costume, child psychology, toys for different ages, stories and mannerisms. And there is actual casework with some of the children who visit Christmas Park in droves as winter comes on each year.

A successful student earns a silver pin and the "degree" of bachelor of Santa Claus. There are refresher courses and followup work too, and the students go back and teach others in their own organizations so that their influence is multiplied.

What does it take to be a successful Santa Claus?

Children Hard to Fool

The basic requirement, says Howard, is genuineness. Watch the details of appearance, because the youngsters will trip you up if you get careless. Play the hearty, friendly role of Santa to the hilt, whenever you are in costume. Without trying to deceive, turn aside a child's inquiry about your identity, but if he insists concede that you merely are one of Santa's helpers.

"If you aren't going to do a good job, whether it be in a store or in your home, don't do it at all," Howard says. "Parents sometimes fail miserably because they don't work at the project But if you can impress your own children, you are a good Santa. Children are smart and hard to fool."

Howard's successful business enterprise stemmed from his own interest in the work.

Originally a farmer, he runs his school and the collateral enterprise of Christmas Park on a typical upstate New York farm.

After early farming experience in which he suffered serious injuries, he tried toy manufacturing, without any great success. Then, peddling some of his toys to a storekeeper one day, he was irritated at the sight of a slovenly Santa Claus.

"I could do better myself," he exploded.

Why don't you, he was asked. So he did.

Grew Fast

That led, in 1937, to the establishment of the Santa Claus school.

At first, Howard continued to farm and play Santa personally as well as to teach others. But soon the enterprise was spread ing out and requiring his full time.

Since proper appearance is a fundamental for a professional Santa, Howard helped out by supplying costumes—at a price. He sells about 200 a year at $260 apiece and sends them as far away as Hawaii. Renovating and storing such equipment is another major part of his business.

To assure his students necessary practice, he imported school children. Providing a proper setting, including a huge red sleigh and a toy exhibit, he found he had an attraction on his hands. Soon he was incorporating to raise mosey, tearing out the pig pen an cowbarn ao provide space, and building a "Santa Claus castle" that now attracts paying visitors by the tens of thousands. Reindeer are among the exhibits.

All this provides plenty of opportunity, of course, for the student Santas to ply their sincere art on wide-eyed youngsters. Moreover the reindeer double in brass because they feature a float that Howard rents out to communities and organizations all over the country.

All in all, Howard feels well satisfied, and well paid, by his life as a Santa emeritus. Sixty-one now, but with considerably less hair than you might expect of the jolly old elf, he has no expectation of slowing up.

Nativity Now Celebrated In Exceptional Art Books

NEW YORK, (AP) — The unique sensuous pleasures that art offers, and the immortal lessons it teaches —and teaches so painlessly — are available during all four seasons, but we are never so aware of them as right now.

There are two reasons:

We are about to celebrate the anniversary of the Nativity, and paintings of it have been shown to us constantly in these last weeks; it was the favorite subject of many great masters.

And secondly, though museums are always with us, this is the particular month when art books flood from the publishers. The gift habit makes it possible to print and also sell thousands and thousands of expensive volumes which at other times might be priced right off the bookstore shelves.

Timely Subjects

These two volumes, for instance. "Flemish Painting: The Century of Van Eyck," by Jacques Lassaigne ($25) and "Early Medieval Painting, from the Fourth to the 11th Century," by Andre Grabar and Carl Norenfalk ($22.50), both published by Skira, contain mostly reproductions of pictures whose meanings are intensified for the devout of all faiths at this time of year.

Though it is not a religious work, one of the loveliest paintings in our western heritage was chosen to decorate beautifully the jacket of "Flemish Painting"; van der Weyden's "Portrait of a Lady," with the flaring gauzy cap, the placid features with lowered eyes, the fine aristocratic clasped fingers.

Lassaigne's text, a model of inspired scholarship, has to do with art, attributions and indentifications: Jan van Eyck may have had no brother Hubert at all. Petrus Christus' learning may be traceable to an unidentifed peer of Jan's. Robert Campin and the Master of Flemalle seem to have been the same person.

Belonged To 15th Century

"Hieronymus Bosch," by Jacques Combe (Pierre Tisne-Universe Books, $17.50) is a reminder that Bosch belonged like van Eyck to the 15th Century. We know less about him, even, than about the others, though he has in some ways a more distinctly modern flavor; surrealists have not-earliest member of their febrile band, and Combe speculates interestingly on his fantastic imagination.

For examples of "Early Medieval," authors Grabar and Nordenfalk traveled, with photographers, north to Scotland and Ireland and south to Rome and Monte Cassino. This is a new collection in a neglected field, and is no less important in scholarship than in its handsome appearance.

Historic Works

There is a more mundane air about the most important of the new Abrams publications: "Art Treasures of the Pinakothek," by Ernst Buchner ($20). The different tone is signalized on the jacket; constrasted with van der Weyden's "Lady," this bears Rubens's "Helena Fourment in Her Wedding Dress," in rich colors, a burst of jewels and a lavish expanse of satins and silks. The book concerns Munich's reopened Pinakothek, containing works of historic significance from all over Germany, and from the Netherlands, France, Spain and Italy. The test is largely a catalog, and an invaluable one, by the director of the Bavarian State Collections.

Geoffrey Grigson's pairing volume, "Art Treasures of the British Museum," also published by Abrams ($12.50), is both catalog and sympathetic history of the far-ranging collections.

Other aspects of art are handsomely represented in library selections this fall, and they too come with illustrations in color or black and white, and with excellent texts:

300 Years Of Painting

"Three Hundred Years of American Painting," by Alexander Eliot, art editor of Time magazine, introduction by John Walker, with 250 illustrations (Random House); Eliot is a generous editor with as warm a welcome for Grandma Moses as for Jackson Pollock, for Sargent and Whistler from London as Remington and Russell in the West; he also provides constantly lively comment.

"Indian Art of Mexico and Central America," by Miguel Covarrubias, both author and illustrator of this superb posthumous work (Knopf).

Three books that somewhat overlap: "German Expressionism and Abstract Art: The Harvard Collections," by Charles L. Kuhn (Harvard); "Modern German Painting," by Hans Konrad Roethel (Reynal); and "German Art of the 20th Century," by Werner Haftmann, Alfred Hentzen and William S. Lieberman, edited by Andrew Carnduff Ritchie (Museum of Modern Art-Simon & Schuster).

"Degas Sculpture," photos by Leonard von Matt, text by John Rewald, and "Paul Gauguin," by Robert Goldwater, both Abrams books.

Aspiring St. Nicks Drilled In 27 Different Subjects

ALBION, N.Y. (AP) — Santa Claus is getting smarter all the time.

Here at Christmas Park, for 20 years now, he and his helpers have been going in for higher education at the country's only Santa Claus school.

During that period the number of students, sent by stores and other organizations, has increased gradually until the enrollment for the one week course in October is in the 40s.

How on earth can Santa Claus spend a whole week brushing up on his business?.

That, says Charles Howard, is not the problem. The real rub is cramming into one week all the subjects that Santa should know.

There are lectures and demonstrations on 27 subjects, such as the history and evolution of Santa, makeup and costume, child psychology, toys for different ages, stories and mannerisms. And there is actual casework with some of the children who visit Christmas Park in droves as winter comes on each year.

A successful student earns a silver pin and the "degree" of bachelor of Santa Claus. There are refresher courses and followup work too, and the students go back and teach others in their own organizations so that their influence is multiplied.

What does it take to be a successful Santa Claus?

Navajos Lured Out Of Desert By Xmas Fetes

By ROBERT A BARNES

GANADO Ariz (AP) — The drab wastelands of the huge Navajo Reservation come alive at Christmas. Indian men, women and children converge like spokes on wheels, on several locations.

What brings these people—most of them non-Christians—swarming by the thousands through the cold to remote gathering places at the time of the Savior's birthday?

The attractions are annual Christmas parties staged by the Ganado Mission of the Presbyterian Church.

Strong Medicine

A few years ago the parties drew only a few score Navajos. This year some 4 000 can be expected at the celebrations at the mission and at six other locations in a 35-mile radius.

Pickup trucks will bring many of the Navajos. Others will jounce across the mesa country they love, in their John Deere wagons or will ride horseback. Some will walk.

A sign in front of the mission proclaims it "a lesson in practical Christianity." No white person who visits this oasis in desolate country, and who looks on at one of the Christmas parties, will question this description.

The Navajos watch patiently and listen intently as youngsters attending school here reenact the with Christianity, despite the efforts not only of the Ganado people but of many other missionaries of various faiths throughout the sprawling reservation.

PRESENTS FOR ALL is the attraction most Navajos find in the Ganado Christmas parties. But missionaries are happy to reach them at least once a year with the Christian message.

herds like themselves. But a birth in a manger would not appear remote to the hogan - dwelling Navajo.

Luke In Navajo

They pay close attention as a member of their own race tells in simple language (with the gestures which are a must in the Navajo tongue) the story of the Christ-child. They listen closely to "Silent Night" and "O Little Town of Bethlehem" sung in Navajo.

Most of the adults do not understand English. For some this annual party is the only contact with Christianity, despite the efforts not only of the Ganado people but of many other missionaries of various faiths throughout the sprawling reservation.

The 75 000 or more Navajos here do not live in towns. They are scattered by small family groups throughout an area larger than many eastern states.

It is not the message in their own tongue which draws these people here, nor is it the Christmas hymns nor the sweet rolls and coffee. It is the gifts which they know are coming.

Christianity's Bait

The presents, representing many hours of labor by church women in far sections of the country, are contained in a colorful cotton print bag. Typical gifts are shirts, pencils, crayons, writing tablets, towels. Children get dolls, picture books and other toy items.

"We cannot hope to turn them all into Christians in one day," former Ganado Supt. Dr. C. G. Salsbury once said. "but here at the mission we feel an obligation to crack the ignorance what little we can while we have them with us."

SWEET TOOTH THIEF

BROCKTON, Mass. (AP) — Calling all cars. Look for a thief with a sweet tooth.

Truck Driver Paul K. Morris of the 20th Century Canteen Co. of Boston told police that while his truck was parked on this city's main street someone stole a tray of pastries and a tray of doughnuts.

Ex-Newsboy Makes Certain Of Merry Xmas

By JIM GREENWOOD
Corpus Christi Caller-Times

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex. (AP)— For 31 years, the biggest and best Christmas parties in South Texas have been the ones that Joe Simon gives for newsboys.

Since 1925 Joe has played Santa to more than 6 000 kids.

His Christmas party this year will be the best one of all, he says. He's been working on it for months.

Joe is a furniture dealer and boots. It dates back to the winter of 1906 in St. Joseph, Mo., where Joe was a hustling 6-year-old newsboy.

Rugged Start

"You had to be husky to stand the gaff," Simon recalls. "Fighting other newsies to keep your corner wasn't kindergarten stuff. And mine was a pretty good corner."

Occasionally Joe could make as much as 40 cents before trudging home through the dark. But some days he would lower his head doggedly against the snow and set out for home with only 10 or 15 pennies clutched in his fist.

In December, 1906, Joe heard about a Christmas dinner a local restaurateur was giving for newsboys. He showed up and as he sat in the warm delightfully fragrant cafe, stuffing himself with a traditional Christmas feast, Joe made a vow.

"If I ever have the chance I'm going to give such a party for kids," thought he. That pledge stuck with him—through the next six years as he held his downtown corner, through high school and two years of college, through two years in the Navy (where he won a welterweight belt in boxing competition) and right on up to 1925 when he came to Corpus Christi to open a furniture store.

Made Good Promise

The chance to make good on his old vow came on Christmas Day, 1925, when Joe gave his first Christmas party for newsboys. Eighteen showed up. In 31 years since then he's played host to some 6 000 boys. Each time Joe's hired the city's best banquet hall, served up the best turkey dinner possible and feted his guests with gifts and entertainers and a movie.

He's going to make his 32nd annual newsboys' dinner one to remember. Since early spring he's been passing out invitations to those ex-newsies, now grown and still here, who came to some of his first parties.

JOE SIMON, Corpus Christi, Tex., furniture dealer, hands out presents at one of the annual parties he stages for newsboys.

Tells How To Make Old Rose Jar For Gift

Here is a do-it-yourself Christmas gift suggestion to save until next summer—the making of an old-fashioned rose jar.

While not a new idea, such a jar is a real treasure and one that gives pleasure for years.

Here is how to create it:

Gather rose petals and spread them on some flat surface to dry. Gather plenty of them because they shrink when dried. The drying takes a few days.

You will need two ordinary quart jars and these spices. One ounce of cinnamon, one ounce of ground allspice, one-fourth pound of dried lavender leaves, one-half ounce of mace, two ounces of powdered orris root, one-half ounce grated nutmeg, one-half ounce of ground cinnamon, one half ounce anise seed, and table salt.

When the petals have dried, place them in one-inch layers in the first jar. Between each layer spread the ground cloves, the allspice, the shredded cinnamon, and some table salt. Press down firmly until the petals are packed in the jar. Keep covered for one week.

At the end of the first week transfer the contents of the first jar—once more in one inch layers—to the second jar.

Between these layers, spread the grated nutmeg, the orris root, the anise seed, and the lavender leaves. Then keep the second jar tightly covered for two weeks.

At the end of this time, pour the contents into jars in which you want to keep them permanently. You may also add a few drops of any flower essence.

The lids of the permanent jars should fit tightly. If these are removed only five or ten minutes daily, the rose jars will last for years.

Such jars will lend a delicate fragrance to your home and make a welcome gift at any time—one that ordinarily cannot be purchased in stores.

THE NAME FITS

BELLEFONTAINE, Ohio (AP) — A family of five who recently moved here from Long Island, N. Y., told the Chamber of Commerce they think Bellefontaine is the "dream" place to live.

They may be slightly prejudiced, though. Their last name is Bellefontaine.

He's Not A Big Operator But He Gets The Job Done

EAST ORANGE, N.J. (AP) — In some parts of the world they call him Kris Kringle or St. Nicholas, but to children here he's "Santa Claus Joe."

And it's Joe Raymond's little fix-it shop where all the toys come from . . . not the North Pole.

For two months out of the year, Raymond hunts up old toys and repairs them for underprivileged youngsters. Then at the holiday season he gives them out at two Christmas parties he holds, and also delivers them from his sack as he goes from house to house.

At 72, Raymond looks the part So much so, in fact, that a television station has offered him a lucrative fee to play Santa on the air. The assignment would bring him more money than he is making now from his shop and his Navy pension.

"But who needs the money?" says Raymond. "I have enough to buy my food and pay the rent. What else does a man need? Besides, I just couldn't leave my young friends."

Many years ago, when Raymond was 5, his father took him to see a grocer-friend who was playing Santa Claus.

"He was having such a good time I decided I would like to do the same thing some day," says Raymond. Finally, after a 25-year hitch in the Navy, Raymond made his wish come true.

Many children have grown up since they last heard "Santa Claus Joe" chuckle as he handed them a new toy but he'd still seem familiar.

Russians Are Laying Claim To Santa Claus

By ROY ESSOYAN

MOSCOW (AP) — The Russains didn't invent Christmas but they do insist that Grandfather Frost — Santa Claus to you — is a dyed-in-the-wool Russian invention.

Grandfather Frost, known as "Ded Maroz" here, looks and acts like Santa Claus. He has the same ruddy cheeks, flowing beard and overflowing bag of gifts.

But the tSSIANS SAY HIS

But the Russians say his origin is pure Russian folklore without any religious overtones, imported or domestic.

The Russians also say Grandfather Frost has nothing to do with St. Nicholas, the prototype of Santa Claus for the rest of the world. This despite the fact that St. Nicholas is and long has been probably the most revered saint in Russia. More Russian churches are named after him than after anybody else.

St. Nicholas reputedly Christianized the Slavs in the Fourth Century but at that time there was no Russia as such. Christianity came to Russia more than six centuries later, from Byzantium.

The Russians started celebrating Christmas soon after that, and incorporated much of their old pagan folklore into the Christian ritual.

Grandfather Frost was one of the pagan institutions incorporated into the ritual. Other equally pagan institutions were Snegurechka, the legendary Snowmaid, and Vesna Krasna or the Beauty of Spring, a female personification of spring.

Fortune-telling, hardly a Christian rite, was another institution incorporated into the Russian celebration of Christmas.

Survived Revolution

Much of this ritual has lasted the thousand years since then and survived the Russian revolution 40 years ago.

And today, in atheist Soviet Russia, almost everybody celebrates Christmas. To avoid the "stigma" of religious connotation, however, they call it New Year's. Even Christmas trees are called "New Year trees" in Russia today.

Current Christmas (or New Year) celebrations in Russia smack of the pagan days. They lack of carefree flavor of prerevolutionary times and are much more highly organized, in keeping with the spirit of the times here.

Even the Kremlin, that once forbidding fortress of Stalin's day, and the House of Unions scene of the purge trials of the 1930s, have got into the act.

Mammoth Christmas (or New Year) parties are staged in them and tens of thousands of Moscow children stream through, singing and dancing, for the two-week run of the holidays.

Open Doors

During Stalin's day the ordinary Russian citizen stepped into the Kremlin only with trepidation. Today both the Kremlin and the House of Unions are open to visitors the year round, and during the New Year holidays the children take over completely.

A giant, 75-foot "New Year tree" —brightly lighted and revolving— brushes the golden chandeliers of St. George's Hall in the Grand Kremlin Palace as the kiddies dance around in awe.

Clowns, acrobats and magicians hold the children enthralled with practically continuous performances, and red-kerchiefed Young Communist League cheerleaders guide them in song and applause.

Other Christmas trees, proportionately smaller, are the center of attraction in practically every home in Russia over the holidays.

Christmas here is a season of gift-giving as it is everywhere else. The department stores are packed for weeks ahead with crowds jostling for gifts and decorations.

This year's observance has been given an added lift for the younger generation with completion of a giant new department store catering exclusively to children. It's called Detsky Mir, or Children's World, and took four years to build.

Detsky Mir stands on a corner opposite Lubyanka Prison and is a token of the consumer goods the post-Stalin leadership has promised the Russian people.

The sack that Grandfather Frost slings across his shoulder this Christmas bulging with gifts from Detsky Mir, gifts that will be spread under Christmas trees high and humble in Moscow and for miles around.

Grandfather Frost delivers his gifts in person too, just as Santa does in the West, but with one difference. He does not deliver them via the chimney chute.

"Grandfather Frost is too dignified to come down the chimney," one Russian explained.

GRANDFATHER FROST, who Russians say has a pedigree longer than St. Nicholas or Santa Claus, poses with admirers in Moscow's House of Unions. He has no connection with religion.

NEW CAMERA FOR MISSILES

NORWALK, Conn. (AP)—A Norwalk-manufactured camera designed to track and time missiles in the early stages of their flight has been installed at Melbourne Beach, Fla., about 15 miles south of the U. S. Air Force's Cape Canaveral missile launching site.

Called a Mark II Recording Optical Tracking Instrument, it enables the Air Force to record the track of a missile moving into space and time it with greater acuracy than has heretofore been possible.

Manufactured by the Perkin-Elmer Corp. of Norwalk, ROTI consists of a 24-inch aperture primary objective telescope, sighting telescopes, camera controls and assorted equipment. Mounted on a Navy 5-inch gun mount especially adapted for the purpose, the whole assembly weighs more than eight tons. The largest, most complex system of its type ever built, ROTI can photograph details of missiles several hundred miles away.

The Melbourne ROTO is one of four being built by Perkin-Elmer for the Air Force Missile Test Center. A second data-collection station is nearing completion at Vero Beach, Fla.

ROTI, says Dr. Roderic M. Scott, vice president of Perkin-Elmer, provides tracking information, unobtainable from other sources. The ROTI system provides actual photographs of missiles in flight.

NEW YORK (AP) — Tony Rizzuto got his Thanksgiving Day turkey with a gun but without shooting the bird. He topped 14 others in a small bore rifle match at the Manhattan School of Firearms by scoring 88 out of a 100. The match was sponsored by the Madison Rod and Gun Club. Ken Lieberman finished second with 85.

"Not to be ministered unto- but to minister"

The Christmas Season is with us again, the season of joy and gladness, when even the Shopping centers of our cities resound with "Joy to the World", "Silent Night", "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing", and other beautiful carols inspired by the advent of the "meek and lowly Jesus".

What were the outstanding events of the first Christmas?—What is the secret of this most happy season of the whole year? . . . A babe lying in a manger in a stable; the Angel Chorus singing "Glory to God in the Highest, and on Earth Peace, Goodwill among Men"; the lowly shepherds bringing adoration; the wise men from afar bringing rich gifts—they all came "Not to be ministered unto—but to minister." There's the secret.

The outstanding lesson The Man of Galilee sought to teach was that happiness comes from service to others. He who seeks his own happiness selfishly misses the mark, but he who would help others to be happy will find his cup of joy full to overflowing.

The tenets of Jesus have always been far ahead of ours. It was He who said, "The Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister"—"Whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister"—"Whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant."

The thought of "Service" did not originate in hospitals or business. No, it came from the Master nearly two thousand years ago.

Although a good beginning has been made, we can hardly say that the world is at peace. True peace will come only when all men and nations put into practice the precept "Not to be ministered unto, but to minister."

Our own glorious country will become just so much more blessed as we all exemplify the thought "Not to be ministered unto, but to minister."

God grant that when the Christmas bells shall ring again we may be able to say that we tried.

Glory To God In The Highest

By MOLLIE SMART

If religious celebration is a vital part of your Christmas, you'll want your children to share in it.

If your children are too young to stay through the whole of a church Christmas service, it is still worth the effort to take them to a small part of it. You can give glory to God at home, too, at this season in particular. One way is to sing carols as a family. Christmas can be featured in mealtime grace and bedtime prayers. You can let the Christmas story inspire at least a fair share of the decorations — stars and camels, for instance, rather than holly and reindeer.

The story of Christ's birth can be told in part while a child is still too young to understand a word-story. You can speak to a baby through Christmas music, part of it sung by his family, some of it from bells which he'll like to ring for himself. Pictures take on meaning between 1 and 2 years. A year-old child will recognize the baby, mother and father in a creche and he will enjoy the animals and angels. You can tell a 2-year-old the story in very simple terms. You can begin reading it from the Bible while the children are of preschool age.

Stage A Christmas Play

The Johnson family gives glory to God each Christmas through dramatics. It began with the two elder children, Jim and Jane, acting out the Christmas story by moving figures in their creche and saying lines ad lib for them. The next year, Mr. Johnson read the story from Luke while Jim, Jane and Jill made the creche figures act it out.

The following year, they used both Luke and Matthew. Next came an attempt to act out Christmas scenes themselves, using costumes from the attic and whatever else they could find. Last Christmas all five children worked for weeks to make puppets and scenery for putting on mas Eve. This venture took some effort on the parents' part, too.

There were quarrels to mediate and practices to supervise. Jerry's shepherd and wise man had eyes right on top of their heads, and no chins at all, but they looked fine to Jerry. They looked fine to the other Johnsons, too, because as Jane put it, Jerry's only 4 and he did his best." Jane had made a puppet to represent Mary and it was quite lovely from an adult standpoint. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson never doubted but that Jerry's puppets were just as pleasing to God as Jane's.

There are many ways in which families can share in the glory of Christmas. The Reynoldses, like many others, made Christmas cards together. Their 2-year-old licked stars and stuck them on. The 6-year-old cut out shapes from colored paper and stuck them. The 8-year-old addressed envelopes and signed cards. There came a time, though, when all the children lost interest and Mrs. Reynolds finished the job by herself. Each child did a job that he could handle. All had the unifying feeling of working together as a family. The children were not called upon to stick at the job longer than they could without strain.

Family Project

The O'Neills are like many families in the way they decorate for Christmas. They make a family occasion of going out to get the tree and greens. (Although trees and greens are of pagan origin, nobody would deny that they add to the glory of Christmas.)

Mrs. O'Neill takes the box of decorations out of the attic and everyone hangs them on the tree and sets up the creche on the coffee table. They reminisce over who gave them this and that and over what they did with them on other Christmases. In the days that follow, Polly and Jack make perishable decorations — paper chains, strings of popcorn and cranberries, popcorn balls and cookies. The tree soon takes on an overloaded, stuffed appearance, but Polly and Jack admire their creations.

Mr. and Mrs. O'Neill accept the children's products without trying to make them over. "Our tree may not look very artistic," Mr. O'Neill has said, "but Jack and Polly have a wonderful time decorating it."

The sketches of these three families illustrate the following truths:

1. It can be joyful and rewarding when a family shares in the glory of a festival.
2. A family project succeeds when each member can work on his own level.
3. Younger children feel happy and satisfied when adults and older children accept the things they make and do.

WILL SEEK HIS DIPLOMA AT 39

GALESBURG, Ill. (AP) — Action speaks for John Lowery, who figures it isn't too late to learn.

At 39, the farm implement dealer enrolled this fall as a freshman at Knox College with an eye on a college diploma.

The fact that his oldest son is the same age as his fellow freshman class members doesn't discourage him. Nor does the fact that he must drive 20 miles from his hometown of Woodhull to attend classes each day.

Before he resumed his education after a 21-year lapse, Lowery operated a farm tool dealership. He has four children, the youngest less than 2 and the oldest in the Navy.

After high school he went to work for a steel plant in Gary, Ind. After 13 years he left that work and acquired the dealership.

After eight years in business, he made his decision to return to school.

Studies Harder Than Expected

Although his studies are harder than he expected, he finds the instructors "aren't like what I thought they'd be. They're friendly, more interested, than I'd expected."

"I especially enjoy the friendliness and courtesy of the younger people," he said.

Lowery would like to teach business education. But whatever he does, he will have attained the goal it was not too late to reach for—higher education.

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Mrs. Fred Hooper paid $7,000 for a yearling filly which has shown speed in workouts. The filly, scheduled to race this winter at Hialeah, is by Discovery — Bridal Toast. She was named by a priest and is called Sweet Revelation.

He's Not A Big Operator But He Gets The Job Done

EAST ORANGE, NJ (AP) — In some parts of the world they call him Kris Kringle or St. Nicholas, but to children here he's "Santa Claus Joe."

And it's Joe Raymond's little fix-it shop where all the toys come from — not the North Pole.

For two months out of the year, Raymond hands up old toys and repairs them for underprivileged youngsters. Then at the holiday season he gives them out at two Christmas parties he holds, and also delivers them from his sack as he goes from house to house.

At 72, Raymond looks the part. So much so, in fact, that a television station has offered him a lucrative fee to play Santa on the air. The assignment would bring him more money than he is making now from his shop and his Navy pension.

"But who needs the money?" says Raymond. "I have enough to buy my food and pay the rent. What else does a man need? Besides, I just couldn't leave my young friends."

Many years ago, when Raymond was 5, his father took him to see a grocer-friend who was playing Santa Claus.

"He was having such a good time I decided I would like to do the same thing some day," says Raymond. Finally, after a 25-year hitch in the Navy, Raymond made his wish come true.

Many children have grown up since they last heard "Santa Claus Joe" chuckle as he handed them a new toy but he'd still seem familiar.

Russians Are Laying Claim To Santa Claus

By ROY ESSOYAN

MOSCOW (AP) — The Russians didn't invent Christmas but they do insist that Grandfather Frost — Santa Claus to you — is a dyed-in-the-wool Russian invention.

Grandfather Frost, known as "Ded Maroz" here, looks and acts like Santa Claus. He has the same ruddy cheeks, flowing beard and overflowing bag of gifts.

But the RUSSIANS SAY HIS

But the Russians say his origin is pure Russian folklore without any religious overtones, imported or domestic.

The Russians also say Grandfather Frost has nothing to do with St. Nicholas, the prototype of Santa Claus for the rest of the world. This despite the fact that St. Nicholas is and long has been probably the most revered saint in Russia. More Russian churches are named after him than after anybody else.

St. Nicholas reputedly Christianized the Slavs in the Fourth Century but at that time there was no Russia as such. Christianity came to Russia more than six centuries later, from Byzantium.

The Russians started celebrating Christmas soon after that, and incorporated much of their old pagan folklore into the Christian ritual.

Grandfather Frost was one of the pagan institutions incorporated into the ritual. Other equally pagan institutions were Snegurechka, the legendary Snowmaid, and Vesna Krasna or the Beauty of Spring, a female personification of spring.

"Not to be ministered unto— but to minister"

The Christmas Season is with us again, the season of joy and gladness, when even the Shopping centers of our cities resound with "Joy to the World", "Silent Night", "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing", and other beautiful carols inspired by the advent of the "meek and lowly Jesus".

What were the outstanding events of the first Christmas?—What is the secret of this most happy season of the whole year? . . . A babe lying in a manger in a stable; the Angel Chorus singing "Glory to God in the Highest, and on Earth Peace, Goodwill among Men"; the lowly shepherds bringing adoration; the wise men from afar bringing rich gifts—they all came "Not to be ministered unto—but to minister." There's the secret.

The outstanding lesson The Man of Galilee sought to teach was that happiness comes from service to others. He who seeks his own happiness selfishly misses the mark, but he who would help others to be happy will find his cup of joy full to overflowing.

The tenets of Jesus have always been far ahead of ours. It was He who said, "The Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister"—"Whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister"—"Whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant."

The thought of "Service" did not originate in hospitals or business. No, it came from the Master nearly two thousand years ago.

Although a good beginning has been made, we can hardly say that the world is at peace. True peace will come only when all men and nations put into practice the precept "Not to be ministered unto, but to minister."

Our own glorious country will become just so much more blessed as we all exemplify the thought "Not to be ministered unto, but to minister."

God grant that when the Christmas bells shall ring again we may be able to say that we tried.

And On Earth, Peace,

If peace on earth belongs to Christmastide, why is Christmas the frantic season, the mad rush, the time of confusion, fatigue, frustration? Perhaps the trouble lies in not choosing the most important things to put first.

American Christmas comes from many sources, both pagan and Christian. The English colonists brought conflicting ideas. The Puritans disapproved of celebrating in either a religious or secular way and they opposed it for two centuries. The Roman Catholic, Episcopalian and German churches celebrated Christmas as a religious feast. With the exception of the Puritans, colonists from England, Holland and Germany celebrated the Christmas season by eating, drinking and making merry.

The English brought the customs of burning the Yule log, wassailing, eating mince pie and plum pudding, decorating with mistletoe and holly. The Dutch colonists brought Santa Claus. The Germans gave Americans the Christmas tree. In colonial days, Christmas presents were for children and for the poor and they were only a small part of Christmas. The commercial exploitation of Christmas began in the middle of the 19th Century but did not grow to its present large proportions until the 1920s. Thus today's parents cannot remember the time when Christmas was less complicated and more peaceful than it is at this time.

It is up to each new family to choose its own pattern of keeping Christmas. No family can do all of the things that mean Christmas in the United States. Yet in the attempt to carry out so many of the American Christmas customs, many families do not know the peace of Christmas. The younger the children, the more difficult it is for them to enjoy a situation where other people are tense disorganized and confused.

Because Christmas involves so many traditions, it is wise to decide which ones are most important to your family, especially in the way of food. If Christmas dinner threatens the peace of your Christmas Day, try cutting out some of its least important features. Perhaps salad and rolls could be eliminated. Would ice cream do instead of plum pudding?

How can everybody help? Grandparents and other guests are happier helping than watching a mother overwork, but you do have to figure out jobs that they can do in their own way and then leave them free to work.

When traditions include many parties and entertaining, some careful thinking is in order. If your family's peace on earth is really important, it may call for turning down an invitation or two. A late party on Christmas Eve does not prepare parents very well for a happy Christmas Day. Nor does it make for peace if they do more entertaining than they can handle comfortably during the Christmas season.

Peace reigns in the home where:

1. Parents think through what is most important in Christmas.
2. Non-essentials are cut down or eliminated.
3. The mother plans the Christmas food carefully and prepares ahead of time for it.
4. Family members are willing to help and the mother's planning and managing make it possible for each person to hlep effectively.

ENGLISH SHARED WITH ENGLAND; BUT NOT BOOKS

By W. G. ROGERS
Associated Press Arts Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — We share the English language with the English, but we don't always share books.

Lots of time we wouldn't dream of reading theirs, and they wouldn't read some of ours, either.

A recent British visitor here, head of the English-speaking world's oldest publishing house, had these and other novel comments about the tastes of the English and the Americans, their total unpredictability and, often enough, the impossibility of interchanging them.

He had nothing against our taste, nor any particular defense of the English, but he noted several difficulties:

"Certain subjects do not cross the Atlantic.

"For instance, we do not like your symposiums. Probably we don't like them because the quality of the writing varies so much, there is no unity.

"Furthermore, we write shorter things. American books are often too long for us."

Not Concerned With History

Are they interested in our Civil War, the subject of a flood of recent publications? "Not really," he admitted. "What's more, there is no topic or event in our past which concerns us anywhere near so much as this conflict does you. But there is an increased interest in history, and I wonder whether that is not bad: It may mean we are unsure of our present and future."

All the girls at the office of his firm's American branch kept wrispering excitedly: "He looks like Rex Harrison!" He does, too, but he is not. He is plain John Brown, publisher and manager of Oxford University Press, England. He came to call on Oxford in New York and made the rounds of Eastern universities whose professors write books for Oxford. Among his other remarks on the transatlantic book situation were these:

"How-to books are getting more popular now in England, but we cannot use yours because of the different trade names.

"In the past we were not much interested in the history of science, but now that interest awakens.

"Technical books are not so popular with us, we believe a man learns techniques at the bench.

"We have very little interest in inspirational books.

"Though I know about fiction only as a reader, it is true that your best-sellers are not predictably sure-fire in England."

The English publisher does not concentrate on best-sellers as we do, he said. The quantities he sells are apt to be, not quantities of one book, but of a lot—break-even point is about 1,700 copies, and twice that sale would hardly get an American publisher out of the red.

Religious Books Most Consistent

On the other hand, moving in this direction, New York Oxford finds some London Oxford religious books are its most consistent sellers—but they are not insipirational. Henry Z. Walck, president of New York Oxford, says London Oxford's most usual contribution is in the area of scholarship — and he notes, thankfully, that the higher up the scale the scholarly tone lies, the less difference there is in English and American spelling and English and American phraseology. Some books are brought over all ready for sale, some are photographed, some printed here, some reset, some re-edited. The paperbound book here is apt to cost as much over there, exported, as a hardbound volume.

"Your standards of production are much higher than ours," said Brown, who in particular praised the "magnificent bindings." But he noted books are more expensive here.

Brown, here for the first time in nine years, said a man doesn't need to be Oxford University to join Oxford University Press. But was he Oxford? In fact he was, he said. He served in the war in the Pacific, was captured at Singapore and held in Japanese prison camp 3½ years.

EGYPT'S FIRST COED RECALLS GLORIOUS PAST

By ANGELO NATALE
The Associated Press

CAIRO (AP) — The young Egyptian girl hesitated at the gates of the American University in Cairo. Then, overcoming her fears, she ran up the stairs and became Egypt's first coed.

Today, almost 30 years later, Eva El Masri recalls with a touch of pride how she blazed a trail which thousands of other young Egyptian girls have since followed.

In the Egypt of 30 years ago, it was almost unthinkable for a girl to venture far into the halls of knowledge. Her place was in the home, her purpose to prepare for marriage and children. Women were heavily veiled. Polygamy was commonplace. Seclusion of women in harems was more or less the rule.

But Eva — now Mrs. Yousef Sidhom — came from a family with an almost unquenchable thirst for knowledge. She cracked a barrier of prejudice against women and found a surprisingly small amount of hostility. She says: "I was very reserved. As the only girl, I had to be. As a rule I brought my lunch with me. Only on rare occasions would I go to the lunchroom to eat with the rest of the students. I did join the orchestra and glee club, however."

Her grades were good enough to warrant a scholarship to Smith College in Massachusetts after her graduation from the university here. In one year at Smith, Eva obtained a master's degree in sociology.

When she returned from America, Eva worked for several years as editor of the magazine, "The Egyptian Woman." She represented Egypt at various women's conferences in foreign countries. Then came marriage in 1948 to Yousef Sidhom, a lawyer in Alexandria where they made their home.

Good Will Toward Men

Presents are the form in which good will is generally expressed Sometimes the form is empty — the present going forth, but no good feelings with it Children get their feelings about presents by learning from the way you teach them

How do you feel about presents? Are they a burden, an expense, a bore? Are they bearers of love and affection, a symbol of the Christchild's birthday? Do you start preparations early enough that you can buy, make and wrap gifts without pressure? Do you spend more than you can afford or do you feel content to give a thoughtful suitable gift?

Teach Giving

Of course you give generously to your children but do you receive generously? And do you make it possible for them to feel satisfied with their giving? The feeling of good will that can come through giving is more wonderful to a child than is his pleasure in receiving presents It is truly more blessed to give than to receive The younger the child, the more he has to depend on adults to help him give And the more good will he experiences in his giving, the better able he is to give of himself as the years go on

Let young children make at least some of their presents A 2-year-old can stuff a sachet bag for his grandmother, put raisins or silver balls on a cookie for his friend and stick a candle into a ball of clay to make a candle holder for his father At 2, a little bit of gift-making goes a long way, so don't urge him to make a present for everybody.

When he grows up enough to want to give to everybody, he won't want to make things for everyone Adults don't either You can give a youngster a real part in buying gifts, even if he is only 2 A shopping trip should be short and simple A dime store, or better yet, a supermarket, affords plenty of opportunities

Take the child to a suitable counter and give him a limited choice, like "Shall we buy the crayons or the chalk for Barbara?" or "Let's buy a can of powder for Grandpa Shall we give him this green one or the one with the flowers?" Let the youngster wrap his presents too with plenty of stickers to lick All this takes a mother's time Good will doesn't flourish when children are hurried

Don't Overwork

As skill increases, children can make more complicated gifts, but they never want to be pushed into making too many There really are not very many useful objects that young children can make, and yet the old standbys, like clay ash trays, felt bookmarks and penwipers potholders and calendars, are new to a preschool child if not to you

You can't always count on adults to receive children's gifts in the true spirit of Christmas There's no denying the fact that what children make is crude and often useless And while some adults love the gift of the message it brings, grown-ups laugh, pass over the present with just a glance

If you possibly can do so, guide your children to make gifts for only those adults who will treat them with respect.

A traditional part of Christmas giving, which goes back further than exchanging presents, is that of giving to poor people It's the idea of giving to someone who has less than you and from whom you expect nothing in return Young children can enjoy this kind of giving and from it feel a special kind of good will.

Perhaps your church gives all its children a chance to wrap and bring a present for children who have little Or you may have to hunt such an opportunity if you want your children to have it Let his gift be something that looks good to him, even if it is a toy that he has outgrown He'll have no feeling of good will from getting rid of a toy he does not like, or depositing something that you bought and wrapped.

To all our friends and neighbors we wish all the good things that this glorious time of year can bring.

May we extend to you and yours our very best wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Away with open flour bins and unwrapped bread! Away with unpasteurized milk delivered in unsanitary cans! No longer shall meat be sold without government inspection and grading

Those were the words of clubwomen 50 years ago Today the 11 million members of the General Federation of Women's Clubs still are crying out for all that is good in their material and spiritual lives.

Women the world over are emerging from their shells to take an active part in community life Wherever I have gone on my numerous trips abroad, I have found that women are eager to do their part

The General Federation, the largest group of organized women in the world, has clubs in 58 other countries Just recently we have welcomed into membership the Deutsche Hausfrauen Bund with a membership of 150 000 in clubs all over Germany

Another new club is the League for the Civic Formation of Women at Mendoza, Argentina That makes four clubs in the Argentine Next February the General Federation will hold a "Hemispheric Solidarity Seminar in Buenos Aires The seminar will bring together women from all over South America to exchange ideas and discuss various problems

The only completely effective way of knowing world problems is by travel and association with people in other parts of the world The "person to person" exchange of ideas is the infallible method

The members of the more than 15,000 clubs in the General Federation in the United States are keenly interested in the preservation of our American heritage, but they also know that today world problems come to the breakfast table through the press radio and television While working for all that is good in American life, they also believe in helping women the world over in order to establish and maintain a lasting peace.

By BARBARA CATTON

Not long ago, a young co-ed said to her fiance 'John, I hope you will let me work after we are married"

Replied John promptly "Let you! I'm counting on it'

It sounds like just another funny story but behind it lie some profound changes in our society We now have an economy in which manpower alone is not enough — there must be womanpower too if we are to maintain the standard of living few of us would be willing to give up At the same time people are marrying earlier than before and having more children

John's wife undoubtedly will work, at least until the children are born More than likely she will return to the labor force after her children are school age or older

Expecting such a life pattern, the girl in school or college is faced with important questions If she has a strong vocational bent, it may be in a field requiring advanced training Will this conflict with early marriage? Can she shift jobs according to her husband's location? After her children are grown, will it be hard to find a position again? Most important of all, can she do justice to both her home and her job?

She must also realize that some day she may be widowed or divorced, or that she may not marry at all

The casual visitor to a campus may get the impression that the co-ed is a happy-go-lucky creature with not a serious thought in her pretty head Since most young people like to mix, she of course enjoys herself and learns much in the process But she is also idealistic and eager to make her life count, and she is searching for answers to questions that have always faced women but are especially urgent now.

Nobody has pat answers for her, but her dean and her counselor as many of her teachers have been studying her special needs and stand ready to help her Fortunately, say the deans, the typical woman student can tackle her problems with courage and intelligence

STATE TAKES LONG HOLIDAY

HARRISBURG (AP)—It's home for Christmas for officials of Pennsylvania's state government

They will scatter to their homes across the state to spend the holidays with their families around their own Christmas tree.

The Capitol will be open only two days next week, Monday and Tuesday. Then it will close for a five-day holiday period, reopening, Monday, Dec. 30

Gov Leader, Mrs Leader and their three children, Mike, Fred and Janie, plan to spend Christmas Day at the Executive Mansion That will be the first of two holiday gatherings for the Leader family

On Monday, the governor's office will be the scene of a staff party. Then, the following Sunday, Leader relations—perhaps 30 of them—will gather at the Executive mansion for a typical York County feast.

Mrs Leader says she'll have roast pork since everyone is expected to be "fed up" with turkey.

And On Earth, Peace,

If peace on earth belongs to Christmas,de why is Christmas the frantic season, the mad rush the time of confusion fatigue, frustration? Perhaps the trouble lies in not choosing the most important things to put first

American Christmas comes from many sources both pagan and Christian The English colonists brought conflicting ideas The Puritans disapproved of celebrating in either a religious or secular way and they opposed it for two centuries The Roman Catholic, Episcopalian and German churches celebrated Christmas as a religious feast With the exception of the Puritans colonists from England, Holland and Germany celebrated the Christmas season by eating, drinking and making merry

The English brought the customs of burning the Yule log wassailing, eating mince pie and plum pudding decorating with mistletoe and holly The Dutch colonists brought Santa Claus The Germans gave Americans the Christmas tree In colonial days, Christmas presents were for children and for the poor and they were only a small part of Christmas The commercial exploitation of Christmas began in the middle of the 19th Century but did not grow to its present large proportions until the 1920s Thus today's parents cannot remember the time when Christmas was less complicated and more peaceful than it is at this time

It is up to each new family to choose its own pattern of keeping Christmas No family can do all of the things that mean Christmas in the United States Yet in the attempt to carry out so many of the American Christmas customs many families do not know the peace of Christmas The younger the children, the more difficult it is for them to enjoy a situation where other people are tense disorganized and confused

Because Christmas involves so many traditions it is wise to decide which ones are most important to your family especially in the way of food If Christmas dinner threatens the peace of your Christmas Day, try cutting out some of its least important features Perhaps salad and rolls could be eliminated Would ice cream do instead of plum pudding?

How can everybody help? Grandparents and other guests are happier helping than watching a mother overwork but you do have to figure out jobs that they can do in their own way and then leave them free to work

When traditions include many parties and entertaining, some careful thinking is in order If your family's peace on earth is really important, it may call for turning down an invitation or two A late party on Christmas Eve does not prepare parents very well for a happy Christmas Day Nor does it make for peace if they do more entertaining than they can handle comfortably during the Christmas season.

Peace reigns in the home where

1. Parents think through what is most important in Christmas
2. Non-essentials are cut down or eliminated
3. The mother plans the Christmas food carefully and prepares ahead of time for it
4. Family members are willing to help and the mother's planning and managing make it possible for each person to help effectively.

ENGLISH SHARED WITH ENGLAND; BUT NOT BOOKS

By W. G. ROGERS
Associated Press Arts Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — We share the English language with the English but we don't always share books

Lots of time we wouldn't dream of reading theirs and they wouldn't read some of ours either

A recent British visitor here head of the English-speaking world's oldest publishing house had these and other novel comments about the tastes of the English and the Americans, their total unpredictability and, often enough, the impossibility of international. Henry Z Walck president of New York Oxford, says London Oxford's most usual contribution in the area of scholarship — and it notes, thankfully, that the high up the scale the scholarly tone the less difference there is in English and American spelling or English and American phraseology. Some books are brought over ready for sale, some are photographed, some printed here some reset, some re-edited The price of a pound book here is apt to cost as much over there, exported as hardbound volume.

"Your standards of production are much higher than ours" says Brown, who in particular praises the "magnificent bindings" But he noted books are more expensive here.

Brown, here for the first trip in nine years, said a man doesn't need to be Oxford University Press to join Oxford University Press But was he Oxford? In fact he was, he said. He served in the war in the Pacific, was captured at Singapore and held in Japanese prison camps 3½ years

Not Concerned With History

Are they interested in our Civil War, the subject of a flood of recent publications? "Not really," he admitted. "What's more, there is no topic or event in our past which concerns us anywhere near so much as this conflict does you. But there is an increased interest in history, and I wonder whether that is not bad: It may mean we are unsure of our present and future"

All the girls at the office of his firm's American branch kept whispering excitedly: "He looks like Rex Harrison!" He does, too, but he is not. He is plain John Brown, publisher and manager of Oxford University Press, England He came to call on Oxford in New York and made the rounds of Eastern universities whose professors write books for Oxford. Among his other remarks on the transatlantic book situation were these.

"How-to books are getting more popular now in England, but we cannot use yours because of the different trade names.

"In the past we were not much interested in the history of science, but now that interest awakens.

"Technical books are not so popular with us, we believe a man learns techniques at the bench.

"We have very little interest in inspirational books

"Though I know about fiction only as a reader, it is true that your best-sellers are not predictably sure-fire in England."

The English publisher does not concentrate on best-sellers as we do, he said The quantities he sells are apt to be, not quantities of one book, but of a lot—break-even point is about 1 700 copies, and twice that sale would hardly get an American publisher out of the red

Religious Books Most Consistent

On the other hand, moving in this direction, New York Oxford finds some London Oxford religious books are its most consistent sellers—but they are not inspirational

EGYPT'S FIRST COED RECALLS GLORIOUS PAST

By ANGELO NATALE
The Associated Press

CAIRO (AP) — The young Egyptian girl hesitated at the gates of the American University in Cairo Then, overcoming her fears she ran up the steps and became Egypt's first coed

Today almost 30 years later Eva El Mosh recalls with a touch of pride how she blazed a trail which thousands of other young Egyptian girls have since followed

In Egypt of 30 years ago it was almost unthinkable for a girl to venture far into the halls of knowledge Her place was in the home her purpose to prepare for marriage and children Women were secluded Polygamy was common Seclusion of women in harems was more or less the rule

But Eva — now Mrs Yousef Sidhom — came from a family with an almost unquenchable thirst for knowledge She cracked a barrier of prejudice against women and found a surprisingly small amount of hostility. She says: "I was very reserved As the only girl, I had to be As a rule I brought my lunch with me Only on rare occasions would I go to the lunchroom to eat with the rest of the students I did join the orchestra and glee club however

Her grades were good enough to warrant a scholarship to Smith College in Massachusetts after her graduation from the university here In one year at Smith Eva obtained a master's degree in sociology

When she returned from America, Eva worked for several years as editor of the magazine, "The Egyptian Woman" She represented Egypt at various women's conferences in foreign countries. Then came marriage in 1948 to Yousef Sidhom, a lawyer in Alexandria where they made their home.

Value Of Toy Pack Is More Than Billion

St. Nicholas will travel in a jet-propelled sleigh this Christmas to deliver more than a billion dollars' worth of toys to American children.

The 1957 record toy pack will include a play version of every headlined marvel of our atomic age, right alongside the old favorites, from blocks to xylophones, newly streamlined.

Creative play activity gets the spotlight, whether toys reproduce the latest electronic techniques of radar and sky parol or the basic skills on farming, building and housekeeping, say spokesmen for the Toy Guidance Council and the Toy Manufacturers of the U.S.A. Melvin Freud, president of the former group, specialists in helping grownups to choose the right toys for the right age, says:

"The high incidence of the sports car, the split-level home, sectional furniture and color-matched kitchen appliances are typical of 1957 toyland's realistic reproduction of American life."

While new playthings put heavy emphasis on career training, electronic equipment, the guided missile program and atomic research, familiar toys also have acquired new talents. Electric trains now come in pastel colors, designed especially for little girls. And the do-it-yourself electric train kit shares honors with the "atomic" train, planned for hobbyists and scientific-minded youngsters.

About one-quarter of the bil- Claus. Miniature dolls, from 8 to 10 inches tall, are the favorites, since they arrive along with complete wardrobes, luggage, furniture and beauty accessories. Of course it goes without saying that the new dolls are almost human, and have been described by some enthusiasts as smarter than people, since they walk, talk, roll their eyes, drink, wet and have rooted hair that can be shampooed, combed, brushed and given a permanent wave.

Boys will be ready for the space travel age after practicing with this year's rocket launchers, space satellite stations, flying platforms, guided missiles and all kinds of remote-controlled vehicles. Even the toddler may now climb into his own space ship, which on closer inspection turns out to b the modern version of the hobby horse.

All the latest kitchen and housekeeping appliances of the push-button era are reproduced in miniature for small housekeepers, who also will use electric utensils and vacuum cleaners and have at their disposal toy-size packages of everything, from chuck-wagon fare and pizza pies to cakes like Mother makes.

DO-IT-YOURSELF is taking over. Here's the first O-gauge electric train, which 6-year-olds and up can build from kits.

STRUCTURAL STEEL buildings will go up quickly this Christmas. Junior has just about finished a new office building.

Xmas Trees Big Boon To Yank Farmers

CHICAGO (AP) — Santa Claus has long been recognized as the greatest boon to merchandising since the invention of the department store.

Now he is making his presence felt in fields far distant from the merrily ringing cash registers of the cities. He's added a cash crop to the traditional production of American farms.

According to a survey by the U.S. Forest Service, more farmers are raising Christmas trees this year than ever before. Farmers own about 70 per cent of the 225,000 acres in the United States planted solely to Christmas trees.

U.S. farmers grew a third of the 39 million trees—with a retail value of about 52 million dollars—marketed last year.

The remainder of the crop was cut from Canadian forests and U.S. public lands—federal, state and county.

Ten years ago only 28 million trees were sold.

The states bordering Canada, North Dakota excluded, produce most of our Christmas trees. Montana, the only state to report production figures over a period of years, in one season shipped to 31 states. Even Cuba received a supply of Montana-grown evergreens. Under normal conditions, Montana can maintain an anual output of about three million trees.

HERE'S A SWITCH: Mom and daughter admire newest thing in toy railroading, a pastel-colored electric train made for girls.

More than 12 million trees are imported annually from Canada, Newfoundland and Labrador. Some tree dealers in the United States own or lease forested areas in Canada for cutting Christmas trees.

The northeastern and middle Atlantic states and the Pacific Northwest are the two biggest Christmas-tree producing areas in the country. But trees by the million also are cut in the Great Lakes region and in the South.

The most popular trees are Douglas fir, balsam fir, eastern red cedar, black spruce and Scotch pine, in that order. The Scotch pine is a plantation-grown tree and not native.

Because farmers have shown increasing interest in Christmas trees, 20 states issue bulletins on how to plant and harvest trees. There are 12 state or regional Christmas tree associations who help with such items as marketing, research and grading.

Tree farmer Carl Bretcher of Springfield, Ill., and his wife, Rita, are outstanding members of the Illinois Christmas Tree Growers' Assn. In 1946, the Bretchers bought a 58-acre woodland. Their pine tree farm now is their social security.

"Our retirement income plan is based on rotating crops of red, white, jack and Scotch pine on 18 acres of the plantation," Bretcher said. He planned to cut 4,000 marketable trees this year.

One of the nation's largest producers of Christmas trees is Halvorson Trees, Inc., of Duluth, Minn. Roy Halvorson, head of the company, estimates his cut last year was near 1½ million trees.

Halvorson cuts trees between February and May, and from late them in cold storage until shipping time by freight car or truck.

Understanding Men Give Girl Clothes, Gems

Men who understand women know that the gifts they like best are clothes and jewelry. Give her something to flatter her vanity, something to make her look pampered and expensive, and you'll be her favorite Santa.

Every woman wants gay new wearables and accessories for the festivities of the holiday season, when every girl wants to look her best. If you know her well enough, nothing could top a gift certificate from her favorite shop, with instructions to buy the most gorgeous evening gown in the place, for that big date when you're taking her dancing.

If Mom has been feeling a little underprivileged, because of housework and taking care of the children, a lacy black chiffon nightgown and negligee will restore her morale.

And any woman on your list will welcome beautiful new costume jewelry, fine gloves or perfume in her own favorite scent.

Men who are bashful about shopping for feminine fripperies will find that many department stores and specialty shops have special gift departments for men only these days, where expert gift counselors smooth the way for embarrassed Santas.

SHERLOCK IS NOW HI-FI ON BAKER STREET

By HUGH MULLIGAN
The Associated Press

Mystery fans will be happy to know that Mrs. Baker's cozy rooms on Baker Street have been acoustically refurbished so their most famous tenant, Sherlock Holmes, can exercise his massive deductive powers in the hi-fi medium.

Except for the inoffensive presence of a few pick up microphones, the sound engineers have left the old place pretty much intact. The old violin still rests on the bookcase, the Persian slipper of choice tobacco is in its usual place on the mantle, and sound of a horse carriage approaching down the cobblestone streets announces that once again murder and mayhem are about to be committed and detected in the foggy depths of Victorian London.

Sherlock Holmes, who began as a short story character, successfully moved to the theater, the movies, ridio and then television, has no trouble weaving his old mystery magic from a long playing phonograph record.

Splendid Debut

London Records gives him a splendid debut in the hi-fi field with Sir Gielgud in the role of Holmes, Sir Ralph Richardson as the bumbling Dr. Watson and Orson Welles as the sinister Professor Moriarity.

Even the most diehard William Gilette and Basil Rathbone fans, for whom there can be no other Sherlock Holmes, will be forced to admit that Gielgud gives an exciting, charming performance, bringing just the right combination of saccasm and devilsh arrogance the role.

The only fault, and it is a small one, that could possibly be found is with the selection of stories. The album includes a portion of "The Study in Scarlet," where Watson first meets Holmes, almost all of "The Affair of Charles Augustus Milverton" and all of "The Final Problem," where Holmes and Morlarity presumably go to their doom after a hand-to-hand struggle on the edge of a deep canyon.

Holmes Doesn't Solve Cases

Oddly enough, in not one of these selecteion do we hear Holmes solving a case or exercising his famous deductive powers, except to note that Watson has been to a Turkish bath because his shoes are tied a certain way.

It is to be hoped however that, like Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, London Records and Sir John Gielgud can be persuaded to bring Holmes back to life again after the so-called final problem and set his nimble brain to work on many more cases. Doyle tried killing his detective off and the public wouldn't stand for it. Record fans will no doubt react the same way.

Four-Record Performance

This must be Gielgud month on records. The noted English actor doffs his deerskin cap and steps into Hamlet's black sable robes for a memorable four-record Hamlet performance with the Old vic company. The RCA Victor album ranks as one of the finest dramatic accomplishments in the realm of hi-fi and most of the most complete Hamlets found anywhere.

Those preferring their Shakespeare in smaller doses can listen to Gielgud delivering four Hamlet soliloquies and doing the entire balcony scene from "Romeo and Juliet" in the Decca Parnassus series.

SHE COULD DANCE all night in this white antique satin gown with cascade of coffee. Chantilly lace with inner shaping of pellon. Dinner jacket has same inner construction.

WOMAN BOSSES PROS IN WEEKLY GOLF CONTESTS

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The men do the golfing, but Annie Vote is the boss when Northern California professionals and amateurs play their weekly tournaments.

Angie is a tiny 45-year-old divorcee — a golf addict herself — who runs the weekly pro-ams for the Northern California Professional Golf Assn.

About 125 golfers, usually one-third pros, play in the events. Winners usually take home at least $100 so there's plenty of competition.

Naturally top flight golfers, such as those in the tournaments, know all the rules. But it is up to Angie to see that they obey them.

"If they're playing slow, I have to get them to speed up," she says. "If there is any question on rules, they come to me. My rulings are final. I have to keep pretty good control because we don't want any chiseling."

Tempers Flare

"Players sometimes let their tempers get the best of them. They get mad and rush off. But they cool off. That's human nature.

"On the whole golfers are a pretty good bunch. They listen. They know they have to conform to the rules."

Angie took up golf in 1945 and admits that she worked hard to master the game, sometime spending all day on the practice tees and green.

She was playing regularly at the Pasatiempo course in Santa Cruz, Calif., when the local pro asked her to take over the club tournament. Seems everything was always getting fouled up. She accepted the offer.

Angie ran the pro's other tournaments and, as interest in the pro-ams grew, she became the logical person to run them. Now she handles private tournaments such as the All-Army championship as well.

Her job takes much of her time, but she still manages to play several rounds of golf a week. A four handicapper, she holds the Pasatiempo women's record with a 73. She's only 4-feet-11, but smacks the ball as far as most of the gals.

Angie, a strawberry blonde, has a daughter, 24, who is a New York model. She doesn't look old enough to have a grown daughter. But Angie's the last gal to hide her age.

"I'd rather be old and look young, than look old and be young," she says.

It's Fun To Make Christmas Candle

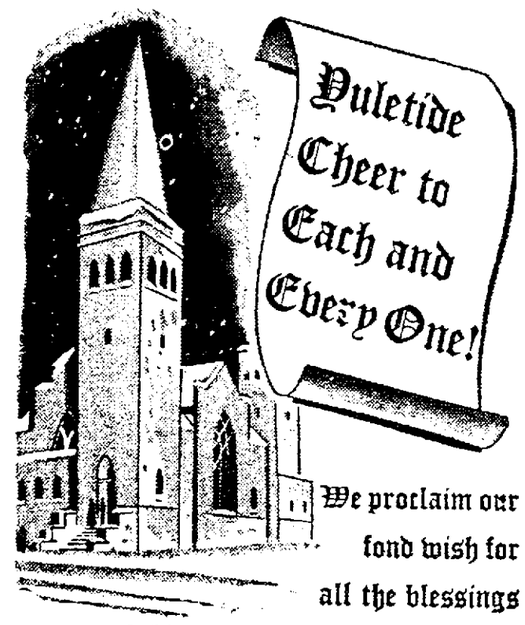
To make a big Christmas candle, melt four cakes of paraffin wax until they are just soft enough to stick together.

Insert a piece of cord for a wick between the second and third. Then melt a fifth cake of paraffin completely, beat it to a froth and spread over the four cakes that you have stuck together. You will have a large snowy white candle. If you want another color, just add a colored wax crayon to the paraffin you are melting for the outside froth.

Place the candle on a saucer and around its base place pine cones, holly or anything suggestive of Christmas.



We proclaim our fond wish for all the blessings of Christmas to our many friends!

Value Of Toy Pack Is More Than Billion

St. Nicholas will travel in a jet-propelled sleigh this Christmas to deliver more than a billion dollars' worth of toys to American children.

The 1957 record toy pack will include a play version of every headlined marvel of our atomic age, right alongside the old favorites, from blocks to xylophones, newly streamlined.

Creative play activity gets the spotlight, whether toys reproduce the latest electronic techniques of radar and sky patrol or the basic skills on farming, building and housekeeping, say spokesmen for the Toy Guidance Council and the Toy Manufacturers of the U.S.A. Melvin Fread president of the former group, specialists in helping grownups to choose the right toys for the right age, says.

"The high incidence of the sports car, the split-level home, sectional furniture and color-matched kitchen appliances are typical of 1957 toyland's realistic reproduction of American life."

While new playthings put heavy emphasis on career training, electronic equipment, the guided missile program and atomic research, familiar toys also have acquired new talents. Electric trains now come in pastel colors, designed especially for little girls. And the do-it-yourself electric train kit shares honors with the "atomic" train, planned for hobbyists and scientific-minded youngsters.

About one-quarter of the bill Claus. Miniature dolls, from 8 to 10 inches tall, are the favorites, since they arrive along with complete wardrobes, luggage, furniture and beauty accessories. Of course it goes without saying that the new dolls are almost human and have been described by some enthusiasts as smarter than people, since they walk, talk, roll their eyes, drink, wet and have rooted hair that can be shampooed, combed, brushed and given a permanent wave.

Boys will be ready for the space travel age after practicing with this year's rocket launchers, space satellite stations, flying platforms, guided missiles and all kinds of remote-controlled vehicles. Even the toddler may now climb into his own space ship, which on closer inspection turns out to be the modern version of the hobby horse.

All the latest kitchen and housekeeping appliances of the push-button era are reproduced in miniature for small housekeepers, who also will use electric utensils and vacuum cleaners and have at their disposal toy-size packages of everything, from chuck-wagon fare and pizza pies to cakes like Mother makes

Xmas Trees Big Boon To Yank Farmers

CHICAGO (AP) — Santa Claus has long been recognized as the greatest boon to merchandising since the invention of the department store.

Now he is making his presence felt in fields far distant from the merrily ringing cash registers of the cities. He's added a cash crop to the traditional production of American farms.

According to a survey by the U.S. Forest Service, more farmers are raising Christmas trees this year than ever before. Farmers own about 70 per cent of the 225,000 acres in the United States planted solely to Christmas trees.

U.S. farmers grew a third of the 39 million trees—with a retail value of about 52 million dollars—marketed last year.

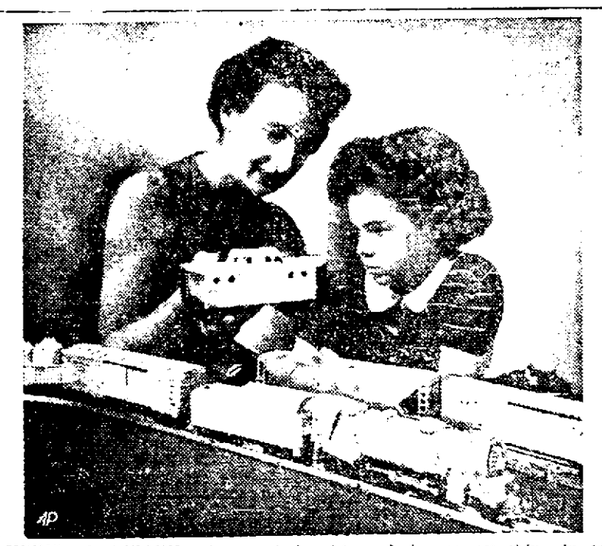
The remainder of the crop was cut from Canadian forests and U.S. public lands—federal, state and county.

Ten years ago only 28 million trees were sold.

The states bordering Canada, North Dakota excluded, produce most of our Christmas trees. Montana, the only state to report production figures over a period of years, in one season shipped to 31 states. Even Cuba received a supply of Montana-grown evergreens. Under normal conditions, Montana can maintain an anual output of about three million trees.

DO-IT-YOURSELF is taking over. Here's the first O-gauge electric train, which 6-year-olds and up can build from kits.

STRUCTURAL STEEL buildings will go up quickly this Christmas. Junior has just about finished a new office building.



HERE'S A SWITCH: Mom and daughter admire newest thing in toy railroading, a pastel-colored electric train made for girls.

More than 12 million trees are imported annually from Canada, Newfoundland and Labrador. Some tree dealers in the United States own or lease forested areas in Canada for cutting Christmas trees.

The northeastern and middle Atlantic states and the Pacific Northwest are the two biggest Christmas-tree producing areas in the country. But trees by the million also are cut in the Great Lakes region and in the South.

The most popular trees are Douglas fir, balsam fir, eastern red cedar, black spruce and Scotch pine, in that order. The Scotch pine is a plantation-grown tree and not native.

Because farmers have shown increasing interest in Christmas trees, 20 states issue bulletins on how to plant and harvest trees. There are 12 state or regional Christmas tree associations who help with such items as marketing, research and grading.

Tree farmer Carl Bretcher of Springfield, Ill., and his wife, Rita, are outstanding members of the Illinois Christmas Tree Growers' Assn. In 1946 the Bretchers bought a 58-acre woodland. Their pine tree farm now is their social security.

"Our retirement income plan is based on rotating crops of red, white, jack and Scotch pine on 18 acres of the plantation," Bretcher said. He planned to cut 4,000 marketable trees this year.

One of the nation's largest producers of Christmas trees is Halvorson Trees, Inc., of Duluth, Minn. Roy Halvorson, head of the company, estimates his cut last year was near 1½ million trees. Halvorson cuts trees between February and May, and from late them in cold storage until shipping time by freight car or truck.

Address Box Easy To Make And Colorful

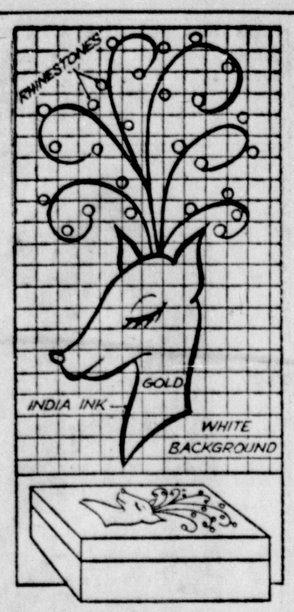
A bejeweled address box to sparkle on the desk adds a festive note amid the holiday rush and excitement. In pure white, rich gold and shimmering iridescent rhinestones the box is a novel but inexpensive and practical Christmas gift.

They're neater and more efficient than an address book. Write addresses on cards and file each in alphabetical order. When friends move you merely take out the old card and replace it with the new address, avoiding the messy erasures necessary in an address book.



Little material is needed:

A recipe file box filled with cards, available at variety stores or stationery shops.

Enamel paint and gold paint.

A few varied paste jewels, obtainable at variety or novelty stores.

First cover the box with white enamel, sanding between each coat. Apply as many coats as needed for a smooth, glossy finish. Enlarge the pattern at right to the necessary size by increasing the space between lines. Trace the reindeer on the top of your box, going over the lines in India ink, and then paint the head gold. Let it dry, and then glue on the rhinestones.

GREAT BRITAIN HAS ENRICHED WORLD CULTURE

By NATHAN POLOWETZKY

LONDON (AP)—With an almost fanatical dedication, the English have devoted their creative genius over the centuries to the production of incomparable literature.

Poetry, novels and plays enriching the world's culture have flowed from isolated country vicarages, from London slum dwellings, from stately aristocratic homes.

But with their obsession for the written work, the English have at least partially ignored some other arts. In such fields as music or painting, they have fallen far short of their proud record in literature.

More than any other major European capital, London's place names have literary associations. Nowhere is there a Montmartre or a Montparnasse to evoke the memory of painters.

Shortage Of Artists

England's shortage of first rate artists—the memory stumbles after Turner, Hogarth, Constable, Blake, Gainsborough and Whistler (after all an American)—has frequently been remarked upon.

Sometimes the blame is placed on England's weather. The bright sunshine which helped make supreme colorists out of French and Italian painters is dismally absent here.

Another reason may have been the conservatism—at least in the graphic arts—of the Victorian aristocratic and upper middle classes which bought pictures.

They wanted paintings to tell a story, to immortalize their own interests, to give evidence of their own worldly success, to illustrate their own virtues.

Many Family Portraits

The result was the abundance of family portraits, hunting scenes and landscapes and the anecdotal paintings ("A Soldier's Farewell," "Derby Day," "The Death of Chatterton") so popular with collectors during the Victorian period.

Then during the 20th Century English painting fell under the complete dominance of the great modern French masters from Gezanne through Matisse and Picasso.

But recently there has been evidence of what some already are calling "a renaissance along the Thames" in English art.

British sculptors—Henry Moore, Jacob Epstein (also American-born) and Lynn Chadwick, who won last year's Venice Biennale — have emerged as world figures.

Achieve Much Fame

And such painters as Graham Sutherland and John Piper have achieved international repute.

World War II may have been responsible for a new growth of interest in paintings. It is difficult to realize the extent of England's isolation as nearly all the rest of Europe lay under German occupation. There was little or no contact with French or continental painters, many of whom fled to the United States (where they made their presence felt in American abstract art).

So younger painters sought roots in the homeland. Instead of looking towards the continent, they turned to such English figures as William Blake and Samuel Palmer, the romantic mystics of the countryside, to whom every tree and bush held the mystery of the universe.

Lyricism Of Turners

They discovered the lyricism of the late Turners.

Others, the town dwellers, began painting scenes in their own homes, sometimes squalid scenes of bawling children, wash hanging on lines, and the bombed out ruins of London, not unlike the "ash can" painter-reporters in the United States at the beginning of the century.

Quickly dubbed the "Kitchen Sink" boys, these young artists, nevertheless, show deep-rooted romantic qualities.

It is still too early to say how far this "renaissance" will develop but already such youngsters as Edward Middleditch, Jack Smith, Philip Sutton, John Bratby, Alistair Grant and Derrick Greaves are beginning to achieve recognition on the continent.

TOKYO'S NEW EXPRESSWAY IS BUILDING

TOKYO (AP)—The longest building in Tokyo is a road—and the city's only expressway is a building.

This Oriental paradox is the result of combining a two-story building with an elevated highway: the road runs on the roof and the building curves as dictated by the course of the road.

Arising from the bed of a drained canal, the building-highway will run for almost a mile through the heart of downtown Tokyo.

Charge Of Profiteering

Begun in 1953, the project now is scheduled for completion next year—one year late. It has been dubbed "the long castle of profits," and made the object of loud criticism and public investigations.

A private firm headed by Minoru Higuchi is building it. When completed, the building—interrupted by six bridges carrying its roof-road over intersections—will provide some 650,000 square feet of rentable space.

Higuchi's firm is collecting eight dollars per square foot as a "loan" from tenants, reimbursable in 15 years at a low interest rate.

It is estimated that the total "loans" will amount to five million dollars. Annual rents charged users will bring in $800,000. Estimated total construction cost is seven million dollars.

Get Small Rent

Despite its location in the heart of the downtown area where land is more precious than gold, the city of Tokyo is paid only a small rent for use of the land, which, as a one-time canal, is public property.

Higuchi's company started with a paid capital of $33,000 and its shares are held by 39 stockholders, including the presidents of two giant Tokyo department stores, the president of a large radio station, and president of two of Japan's largest newspapers.

Takehisa Hayashi, a director of the company, denies charges of high profits.

No Electric Fan

"Look around you," he says, waving a hand at the company's drab and crowded two-room office. "We don't even have an electric fan here. That should prove to you that we are not making money. We only rent the office space in order to be able to provide the elevated highway as a free public service.

"Another proof that we are not trying to make money is that we will turn over the highway to Tokyo city as soon as it pays for itself, at the latest in 35 years."

Last month a section of the road ending at Sukiyabashi Bridge, the real heart of Tokyo, was completed and a 200-yard-long, all air-conditioned smart shopping arcade opened for business.

Swanky Places

The company rented this section to the Ginza Shopping Center Assn. which has leased space to some 80 swanky coffee-bars, tea parlors, dressmakers, restaurants, camera stationery, sporting goods and other specialty shops.

While construction of the new highway has created criticism and some scandal, no one argues that the shopping center and elevated highway are anything but a great asset to this metropolis which claims to be the world's largest city.

This is also the view of the city planners who visualize this short-mile elevated highway as a model and link in a five-road elevated network to be constructed at an expected cost of 200 million dollars in the next 10 years.

GRANDMOTHERS IN DRILL TEAM

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Twenty-eight Dayton grandmothers aren't letting Father Time get the jump on them. They're marching right along with him and enjoying every minute.

The 28 are members of a Grandmother's Club drill team whose marching, 100 steps per minute, has charmed audiences and amazed husbands, children and grandchildren.

Mrs. Ruth Broedling, who groomed the team from its stumbling beginning to its current machine-like efficiency, had one big problem to overcome; how to keep 28 women quiet during practices and performances.

Need Adhesive Tape

"Sometimes I wish had adhesive tape," she observed. "My biggest job is to keep them quiet. In this work feet and mouth just can't be going at the same time."

Apparently this crisis has been selved at least during performances. The marching grandmothers, who range in ages from 42 to 80, can put on quite a show. They form a human wheel, a waving flag, a figure eight or a cross at cues form piano music. All of their marching routines are by memory.

The drill team marched into existence Feb. 19, 1951. After six months of training the marching matrons faced their first audience in Cincinnati.

"The Old Grey Mare," their theme, found them on that opening night shaking in their calico bonnets and skirts. But they were a hit, Mrs. Broedling said. Since that night they have gone on to conquer audiences all over the Miami Valley area and at Grandmothers' conventions from Seattle to St. Petersburg.

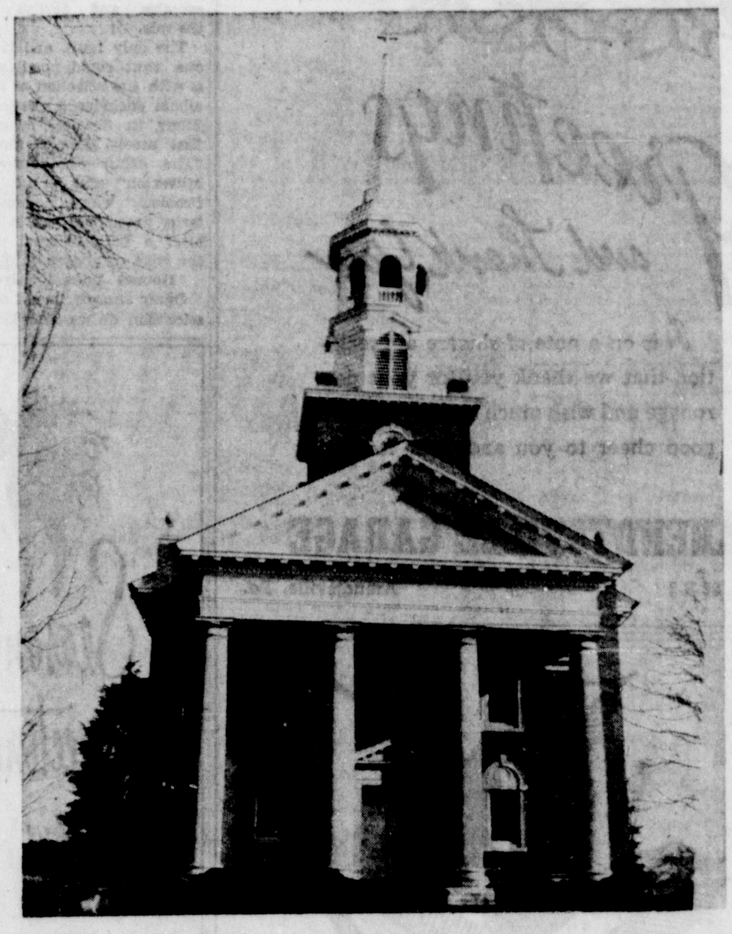
Season's Greetings from

ROGER W. SMITH AND CO.
York Springs, Pa.



Once more Christmas comes to remind us that "God hath chosen the weaklings of the world that He might put to shame the things that are strong." This blessed season returns to reawaken in us the awareness that the things which endure are not the might and pomp, the wealth and splendor of the world, but the spiritual qualities that were incarnate in the Babe who was born in a stable and cradled in a manger. As Gilbert Chesterton has said,

"The crazy stable close at hand,
With shifting timbers and sinking sand,
Grew a mightier thing to endure and stand
Than the square stones of Rome."

At this season when Heaven stoops to earth's need with redeeming grace, the Seminary extends warmest greetings to all.

Easy To Make GayChristmas Card "Mobile"

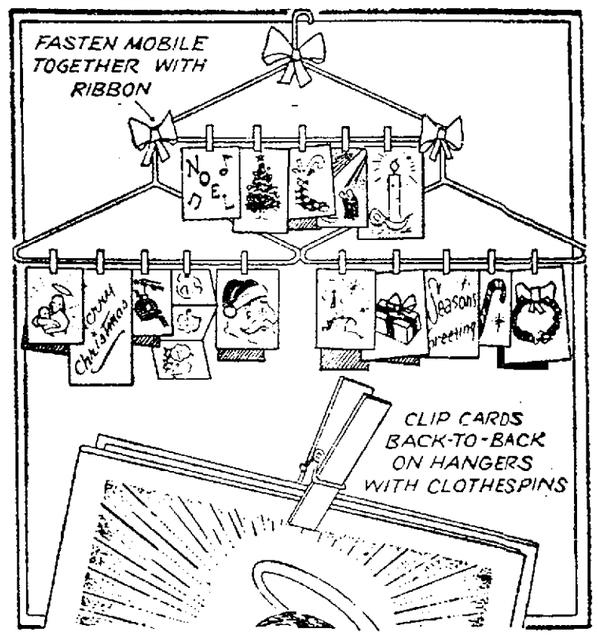
If you toss your Christmas cards into a heap after a quick glance at the sender's name, you're passing up a good chance for a highly personal Christmas decoration.

Here's how you can use them to make an attractive mobile, putting the cards on display and brightening up your room at the same time.

As can be seen in the illustration above, the project is simplicity itself. Just gather up a few wire coat hangers and paint or spray them a glittering gold Paint a few dozen spring-type clothes pins the same color.

Fasten the hangers together as shown on the diagram with colorful ribbon and clip the cards to the horizontal sections as illustrated. Be sure to put two cards, back to back, at each spot so that no matter how the hangers revolve, card faces will always be in view.



You don't have to stop with three hangers. A third tier can be added by suspending three more hangers at either end and center of the second tier.

We greet our friends and neighbors at this happy time and wish them well, now and always.

U. S. INVADES LONDON'S GREAT CONCERT HALLS

By GEOFFREY MILLER

LONDON (AP) — The accent is becoming American in London's concert halls and small recital rooms.

The billboards proclaim the names of Elman, Menuhin, Isaac Stern, Tossy Spivakovsky, Rosalyn Tureck, Marie MacKenzie, and Julius Katchen.

As never before, the London concertgoer is lining up to get seats to hear the Americans. The musical "invasion" is the biggest since the war. The Londoner loves it and the feeling is shared by the performers.

A spokesman for impresario Harold Holt, who handles many of music's biggest names on their London visits, explains:

"Box office finances are dictated largely by the artists which we and other agents bring in from the United States.

"Of course they are not all native Americans. But practically all the musical giants who come to London for concerts nowadays are U. S. citizens. So many of Europe's great artists have settled in America because it is the best place in the world for artists to live."

Young Artists Seek A Name

Many young Americans seeking to make their names come to London to sing, or play the piano or violin, at the Wigmore Hall, an intimate little music-making center tucked away behind the fashionable big stores in downtown Oxford St.

"They take advantage of the low currency exchange rate to come and give recitals at their own risk," one impresario's spokesman said. "Then, if the venture shows a loss, they are less in the red than if they give the recital in New York.

"The large numbers of young American artists who have been doing this since World War II have helped to establish the American dominance of London's musical life," he added.

Spivakovsky, who recently played Beethoven's Violin Concerto to a jampacked Royal Festival Hall, rates London as the musical center of the world.

Spivakovsky Plays Beethoven

Spivakovsky played in the first of eight concerts comprising a Beethoven festival in which German Otto Klemperer conducted London's Philharmonic Orchestra. Chilean pianist Claudio Arrau played all five of Beethoven's piano concertos in the same series.

Rosalyn Tureck, American pianist who has made Bach her specialty, has found such a warm response to Bach among Britons that she spends much of her time here.

"I am proud to say that for the first time in the history of solo Bach playing I have been drawing full houses for my Bach recitals in the larger halls," Miss Tureck said.

"There is a real response to Bach here — greater than in America. If I have helped in any way to build a new public for Bach, that is a very happy thought."

Miss Tureck tours Europe from her London headquarters and presents other music, including some by contemporary American composers.

The invasion from America is not restricted to performers. Massive Royal Albert Hall was given over this fall to a concert of George Gershwin music. The two central figures were both Americans — Conductor George Byrd and pianist Shura Cherkassy.

SEWERS CAN MAKE PRETTY GIFT PACKAGES

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Editor

Women who sew are discovering that automatic decorative stitching has opened up a whole new vista of gay Christmas gifts that may be made at home in a fraction of the time they used to take. All kinds of gay and colorful accessories may be turned out on a modern sewing machine, with personalized decorations to give them special meaning for everyone on your gift list.

A festive pair of Christmas pillows, for instance, would delight anybody who lives in a house — or add a holiday note to your own living room. Local sewing center experts tell you how to make them, using either a slant-needle automatic sewing machine or a standard machine with automatic zigzagger attachment.

To make two pillows you will need one piece of white felt measuring 18 by 72 inches, one piece of red felt measuring 8½ by 18 inches, a piece of yellow felt 1 by 2 inches and a piece of black felt 1½ by 6 inches. Also required is one bag of kapok to stuff both pillows.

Lay Out Design

Lay a strip of white felt flat on floor or long table. Mark two circles side by side, each measuring 16 inches in diameter. Then mark two rectangles measuring 12¾ by 18¾ inches. Use pinking shears to cut out.

Use regular scissors to cut two poinsettias and a candle of the red felt, a candleholder of the black felt and a flame of the yellow felt.

Nostalgic note: Toyland remembers the historic crank model ranch telephone.

To make the round pillow, first mark center of one circle. Then applique red poinsettia to center of circle, using the ball stitch design. Make a cluster of 18 yellow balls for poinsettia center, stitching through the flower and the circles of felt.

Use Red Thread

Place the two circles together. Set your machine for the solid diamond stitch or any other that you prefer. Stitch one inch in from edge of circle with red thread. Leave a 6-inch opening to stuff in the kapok. After stuffing, close circle with solid diamond stitch.

To make the rectangular pillow, applique candle to pillow top in this order: set machine for satin stitch and use red thread to outline the candle, black thread to outline the holder and yellow thread to outline the flame. Add yellow candle rays in decorative stitching.

Pin rectangles together. Select decorative stitch and stitch together, one inch from edge. Leave 6-inch opening for stuffing and close with same stitch after stuffing is completed.

This is just one suggestion from an almost endless number of possibilities for gay and original gifts that the seamstress can turn out at home.

Rosalyn Tureck, American pianist who has made Bach her specialty, has found such a warm response to Bach among Britons that she spends much of her time here.

"I am proud to say that for the first time in the history of solo Bach playing I have been drawing full houses for my Bach recitals in the larger halls," Miss Tureck said.

"There is a real response to Bach here — greater than in America. If I have helped in any way to build a new public for Bach, that is a very happy thought."

Miss Tureck tours Europe from her London headquarters and presents other music, including some by contemporary American composers.

The invasion from America is not restricted to performers. Massive Royal Albert Hall was given over this fall to a concert of George Gershwin music. The two central figures were both Americans — Conductor George Byrd and pianist Shura Cherkassy.

SEWERS CAN MAKE PRETTY GIFT PACKAGES

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Editor

Women who sew are discovering that automatic decorative stitching has opened up a whole new vista of gay Christmas gifts that may be made at home in a fraction of the time they used to take. All kinds of gay and colorful accessories may be turned out on a modern sewing machine, with personalized decorations to give them special meaning for everyone on your gift list.

A festive pair of Christmas pillows, for instance, would delight anybody who lives in a house — or add a holiday note to your own living room. Local sewing center experts tell you how to make them, using either a slant-needle automatic sewing machine or a standard machine with automatic zigzagger attachment.

To make two pillows you will need one piece of white felt measuring 18 by 72 inches, one piece of red felt measuring 8½ by 18 inches, a piece of yellow felt 1 by 2 inches and a piece of black felt 1½ by 6 inches. Also required is one bag of kapok to stuff both pillows.

Lay Out Design

Lay a strip of white felt flat on floor or long table. Mark two circles side by side, each measuring 16 inches in diameter. Then mark two rectangles measuring 12¾ by 18¾ inches. Use pinking shears to cut out.

Use regular scissors to cut two poinsettias and a candle of the red felt, a candleholder of the black felt and a flame of the yellow felt.

To make the round pillow, first mark center of one circle. Then applique red poinsettia to center of circle, using the ball stitch design. Make a cluster of 18 yellow balls for poinsettia center, stitching through the flower and the circles of felt.

Use Red Thread

Place the two circles together. Set your machine for the solid diamond stitch or any other that you prefer. Stitch one inch in from edge of circle with red thread. Leave a 6-inch opening to stuff in the kapok. After stuffing, close circle with solid diamond stitch.

To make the rectangular pillow, applique candle to pillow top in this order: set machine for satin stitch and use red thread to outline the candle, black thread to outline the holder and yellow thread to outline the flame. Add yellow candle rays in decorative stitching.

Pin rectangles together. Select decorative stitch and stitch together, one inch from edge. Leave 6-inch opening for stuffing and close with same stitch after stuffing is completed.

This is just one suggestion from an almost endless number of possibilities for gay and original gifts that the seamstress can turn out at home.

Address Box Easy To Make And Colorful

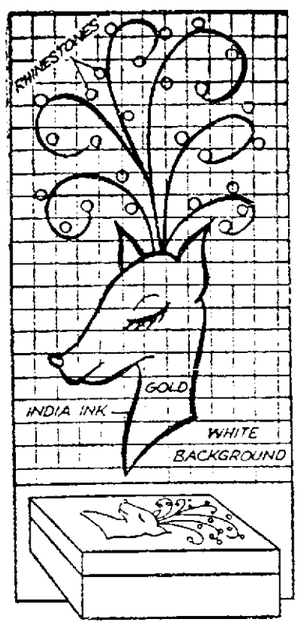
A bejeweled address box to sparkle on the desk adds a festive note amid the holiday rush and excitement. In pure white, rich gold and shimmering iridescent rhinestones the box is a novel but inexpensive and practical Christmas gift.

They're neater and more efficient than an address book. Write addresses on cards and file each in alphabetical order. When friends move you merely take out the old card and replace it with the new address, avoiding the messy erasures necessary in an address book.



Little material is needed:

A recipe file box filled with cards, available at variety stores or stationery shops.

Enamel paint and gold paint.

A few varied paste jewels, obtainable at variety or novelty stores.

First cover the box with white enamel, sanding between each coat. Apply as many coats as needed for a smooth, glossy finish. Enlarge the pattern at right to the necessary size by increasing the space between lines. Trace the reindeer on the top of your box, going over the lines in india ink, and then paint the head gold. Let it dry, and then glue on the rhinestones.

GREAT BRITAIN HAS ENRICHED WORLD CULTURE

By NATHAN POLOWETZKY

LONDON (AP)—With an almost fanatical dedication, the English have devoted their creative genius over the centuries to the production of incomparable literature.

Poetry, novels and plays enriching the world's culture have flowed from isolated country vicarages, from London slum dwellings, from stately aristocratic homes.

But with their obsession for the written work, the English have at least partially ignored some other arts. In such fields as music or painting, they have fallen far short of their proud record in literature.

More than any other major European capital, London's place names have literary associations. Nowhere is there a Montmartre or a Montparnasse to evoke the memory of painters.

Shortage Of Artists

England's shortage of first rate artists—the memory stumbles after Turner, Hogarth, Constable, Blake, Gainsborough and Whistler (after all an American)—has frequently been remarked upon.

Sometimes the blame is placed on England's weather. The bright sunshine which helped make supreme colorists out of French and Italian painters is dismally absent here.

Another reason may have been the conservatism—at least in the graphic arts—of the Victorian aristocratic and upper middle classes which bought pictures.

They wanted paintings to tell a story, to immortalize their own interests, to give evidence of their own worldly success, to illustrate their own virtues.

Many Family Portraits

The result was the abundance of family portraits, hunting scenes and landscapes and the anecdotal paintings ("A Soldier's Farewell," "Derby Day," "The Death of Chatterton") so popular with collectors during the Victorian period.

Then during the 20th Century English painting fell under the complete dominance of the great modern French masters from Gezanne through Matisse and Picasso.

But recently there has been evidence of what some already are calling "a renaissance along the Thames" in English art.

British sculptors—Henry Moore, Jacob Epstein (also American-born) and Lynn Chadwick, who won last year's Venice Biennale — have emerged as world figures.

Achieve Much Fame

And such painters as Graham Sutherland and John Piper have achieved international repute.

World War II may have been responsible for a new growth of interest in paintings. It is difficult to realize the extent of England's isolation as nearly all the rest of Europe lay under German occupation. There was little or no contact with French or continental painters, many of whom fled to the United States (where they made their presence felt in American abstract art).

So younger painters sought roots in the homeland. Instead of looking towards the continent, they turned to such English figures as William Blake and Samuel Palmer, the romantic mystics of the countryside, to whom every tree and bush held the mystery of the universe.

Lyricism Of Turners

They discovered the lyricism of the late Turners.

Others, the town dwellers, began painting scenes in their own homes, sometimes squalid scenes of bawling children, wash hanging on lines, and the bombed out ruins of London, not unlike the "ash can" painter-reporters in the United States at the beginning of the century.

Quickly dubbed the "Kitchen Sink" boys, these young artists, nevertheless, show deep-rooted romantic qualities.

It is still too early to say how far this "renaissance" will develop but already such youngsters as Edward Middleditch, Jack Smith, Philip Sutton, John Bratby, Alistair Grant and Derrick Greaves are beginning to achieve recognition on the continent.

TOKYO'S NEW EXPRESSWAY IS BUILDING

TOKYO (AP)—The longest building in Tokyo is a road—and the city's only expressway is a building.

This Oriental paradox is the result of combining a two-story building with an elevated highway: the road runs on the roof and the building curves as dictated by the course of the road.

Arising from the bed of a drained canal, the building-highway will run for almost a mile through the heart of downtown Tokyo.

Charge Of Profiteering

Begun in 1953, the project now is scheduled for completion next year—one year late. It has been dubbed "the long castle of profits," and made the object of loud criticism and public investigations.

A private firm headed by Minoru Higuchi is building it. When completed, the building—interrupted by six bridges carrying its roof-road over intersections—will provide some 650,000 square feet of rentable space.

Higuchi's firm is collecting eight dollars per square foot as a "loan" from tenants, reimbursable in 15 years at a low interest rate.

It is estimated that the total "loans" will amount to five million dollars. Annual rents charged users will bring in $800,000. Estimated total construction cost is seven million dollars.

Get Small Rent

Despite its location in the heart of the downtown area where land is more precious than gold, the city of Tokyo is paid only a small rent for use of the land, which, as a one-time canal, is public property.

Higuchi's company started with a paid capital of $33,000 and its shares are held by 39 stockholders, including the presidents of two giant Tokyo department stores, the president of a large radio station, and president of two of Japan's largest newspapers.

Takehisa Hayashi, a director of the company, denies charges of high profits.

No Electric Fan

"Look around you," he says, waving a hand at the company's drab and crowded two-room office. "We don't even have an electric fan here. That should prove to you that we are not making money. We only rent the office space in order to be able to provide the elevated highway as a free public service.

"Another proof that we are not trying to make money is that we will turn over the highway to Tokyo city as soon as it pays for itself, at the latest in 35 years."

Last month a section of the road ending at Sukiyabashi Bridge, the real heart of Tokyo, was completed and a 200-yard-long, all air-conditioned smart shopping arcade opened for business.

Swanky Places

The company rented this section to the Ginza Shopping Center Assn. which has leased space to some 80 swanky coffee-bars, tea parlors, dressmakers, restaurants, camera stationery, sporting goods and other specialty shops.

While construction of the new highway has created criticism and some scandal, no one argues that the shopping center and elevated highway are anything but a great asset to this metropolis which claims to be the world's largest city.

This is also the view of the city planners who visualize this short-mile elevated highway as a model and link in a five-road elevated network to be constructed at an expected cost of 200 million dollars in the next 10 years.

GRANDMOTHERS IN DRILL TEAM

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Twenty-eight Dayton grandmothers aren't letting Father Time get the jump on them. They're marching right along with him and enjoying every minute.

The 28 are members of a Grandmother's Club drill team whose marching, 100 steps per minute, has charmed audiences and amazed husbands, children and grandchildren.

Mrs. Ruth Broedling, who groomed the team from its stumbling beginning to its current machine-like efficiency, had one big problem to overcome; how to keep 28 women quiet during practices and performances.

Need Adhesive Tape

"Sometimes I wish had adhesive tape," she observed. "My biggest job is to keep them quiet. In this work feet and mouth just can't be going at the same time."

Apparently this crisis has been selved at least during performances. The marching grandmothers, who range in ages from 42 to 80, can put on quite a show. They form a human wheel, a waving flag, a figure eight or a cross at cues form piano music. All of their marching routines are by memory.

The drill team marched into existence Feb. 19, 1951. After six months of training the marching matrons faced their first audience in Cincinnati.

"The Old Grey Mare," their theme, found them on that opening night shaking in their calico bonnets and skirts. But they were a hit, Mrs. Broedling said. Since that night they have gone on to conquer audiences all over the Miami Valley area and at Grandmothers' conventions from Seattle to St. Petersburg.

Season's Greetings from

ROGER W. SMITH AND CO.

Once more Christmas comes to remind us that "God hath chosen the weaklings of the world that He might put to shame the things that are strong." This blessed season returns to reawaken in us the awareness that the things which endure are not the might and pomp, the wealth and splendor of the world, but the spiritual qualities that were incarnate in the Babe who was born in a stable and cradled in a manger. As Gilbert Chesterton has said,

"The crazy stable close at hand,
With shifting timbers and sinking sand,
Grew a mightier thing to endure and stand
Than the square stones of Rome."

At this season when Heaven stoops to earth's need with redeeming grace, the Seminary extends warmest greetings to all.

Hollywood's Santa Shuns All Publicity

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Hollywood, where everything is supposed to be make-believe has a real, live Santa Claus who has brought Christmas cheer to thousands of persons throughout the country.

He has another name and another identity, but to those startled persons who find checks signed "Santa Claus" in their mail boxes each Christmas, he's the genuine article, right down to the last whisker and the last jolly laugh.

For the 10 years during which he has conducted his one-man gift-giving campaign Hollywood's Santa has zealously guarded the secret of his identity. A few years ago, however, a writer tracked him down and found behind the white beard and the rumpled red suit a trim, youngish radio executive with a big salary and a novel idea of how it should be spent.

Mistaken Identity

He got the idea back in 1947 when he was staying at a hotel and by mistake received a telephone call intended for a famous movie actor in another room. The caller was a woman who said her daughter was dying and had made a last wish for a puppy. She had seen one that cost $25. Would he give her the money?

He did, and the child recovered.

"That really started me thinking," he recalled later. "I saw for the first time how much good you could do with a few well-placed dollars.

In the decade since then, Santa has sent checks ranging from $20 to $500 to nearly 3,000 persons, most of them what he calls "pressure cases."

"They're people with specific needs," he says. "When you take care of these needs, you put them back in operating condition."

And so each year the checks go out, usually accompanied by a note specifying what the money is for — a wheelchair for a cripple, a typewriter for an invalid who wants to be a writer, a train ticket to reunite families.

He has friends in all parts of the country helping him find the most deserving cases. And he has set up a corporation to handle the distribution of funds, with "Santa Claus" as the official check signer.

Spreads the Word

Besides doing good with his dollars, he has another major aim —trying to get others to follow his head. With each check goes a letter telling of the joy of giving which the recipient is asked to copy and send to "a few outstanding men with big hearts in your town."

That's an apt description of Hollywood's Santa — an outstanding man with a big heart.

"People might misunderstand if I used my own name," he said once in explaining his reluctance to disclose his identity. "In this town they'd think it was all a publicity stunt."

The Christmas Story In Modern Dress:

"BEHOLD, AN ANGEL OF THE LORD APPEARED TO HIM. . . ."

"THERE WAS NO PLACE FOR THEM IN THE INN."

"AND THE ANGEL SAID TO THEM, 'BE NOT AFRAID.' . . ."

"When Herod the King heard these things he was troubled and all Jerusalem with him. And when he had gathered all the chief priests and scribes of the people together, he demanded of them where Christ should be born. And they said unto him, in Bethlehem of Judea: for thus it is written of the prophet." —Matthew 2:3-5

The story is ancient, but never old. How Bethlehem became, as Matthew predicted, "not the least among the princes of Judea," because the Christ Child was born there, in a stable, attended only by His parents and a motley gathering of shepherds.

Down through the ages, Bethlehem has lived as a symbol of man's eternal hopes, and Herod has remained one of history's classic villains.

But suppose, for a moment, that the prophets had not chosen Bethlehem. Suppose that the magical star heralding the birth of the Messiah had not appeared in the East for another 2,000 years. What if the ancient sages had not picked the reign of Caesar Augustus for this momentous event, but instead had written here and now into their books of prophecy?

Would a modern Matthew have had a different story to tell? Would today's world have been any more willing to accept the Christ Child and His message of love? Would you be numbered among the shepherds who came to pray or with Herod and his advisors who drove Him out of the land?

Forget, for the time being, the classic story of the Nativity and try to imagine what it would be like if Christ had been born in our own day, if the Angel Gabriel had appeared to a modern Joseph in an electrically equipped carpenter shop.

How Would It Be If It Happened Here?

"WE HAVE SEEN HIS STAR IN THE EAST."

"THE STAR WHICH THEY HAD SEEN . . . WENT BEFORE THEM. . . ."

"AND GOING INTO THE HOUSE THEY SAW THE CHILD WITH MARY, HIS MOTHER."

The night is cold and clear, alive with a million stars, one brighter than all the others. So bright, in fact, that some scientists, bound by their own treatises, refuse to believe what they see in their telescopes.

Through the snowy streets of a nameless city, a man and a woman hurry aimlessly, homeless and helpless. Within her stirs the life that is to become the light of the ages, the hope of the universe, the quintessence of all that is good and holy.

But in the crowded city, steeped in crime and debauchery, diverted by the empty dream of material success, busy at the pleasures that quickly fade, there is no room for these weary wayfarers and the priceless treasure that they bring.

Yet somewhere on the fringes of this fractious civilization, humble men, like the shepherds, are ready and willing to receive the gift from on high. Their number is few, but their zeal is great. Even the forces of despotism and godlessness, abroad on the earth, cannot sway them from their belief in the infinite goodness of the Savior.

They have witnessed the modern miracle of the Nativity and it could be written of them, as Luke wrote of the shepherds, "they returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen."

It didn't happen this way and it never could have. But in the hearts of men Christ is born again each year at Christmas time. Some have anxiously received Him into the domicile of their souls. But many have turned Him out like the innkeeper, "because there was no room at the inn."

Camera News

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

I received a first-hand lesson recently in what to do when a photographer unexpectedly comes across a picture-worthy news event that could appear in your daily newspaper.

A news picture is a perishable commodity whose value decreases rapidly with time, so speed gets top priority. The first thing naturally, is to get the picture even if you have to borrow a camera. In most cases you have to sense and sum up the event in one picture so the choice of camera angle and the instant of shooting is all-important.

Secondly, you must get all pertinent information so that you can identify people and places and know what's happening.

Next you must inform your newspaper or press association, preferably by telephone, about the occurrence and that pictures have been taken. If the editor agrees that the subject matter has possible interest then the final step is to get the pictures to him by messenger or personal delivery.

Smooth Operation

My lesson in how to put this basic chain into smooth operation took place a couple of weekends ago in Philadelphia. I had driven from New York to attend a family gathering. In another car was my younger brother, Max. Suddenly we came across an unusual auto accidents moments after it happened.

One car was on its side and bystanders were lifting the women driver from it as we came up. I had my camera with me but felt a slight reluctance to intrude on the pain of the injured woman as she lay on the grass. This hesitancy undoubtedly assails most amateur photographers when they face an accident or disaster and have to think of it in terms of pictures.

The old pro took over. Max, now supervising editor of Wide World Photos, had not forgotten his experience as an Associated Press news photographer. He took the camera from me, checked the exposure, then intuitively selected his angle. His first shot showed a young lady comforting the victim with wrecked car behind them. He quickly took a couple of otner shots then gave me back my camera.

Sought Eye-Witnesses

Max then sought out eye-witnesses and got an account of the accident and the victim's correct name from a policeman, who had arrived in the meantime. The young lady in the first picture turned out to be the injured woman's daughter.

As she was being removed in an ambulance, Max headed for the nearest home and asked if he could use the phone. He got cordial cooperation. He called the Associated Press, asked for the picture editor and relayed all the information.

The editor saw the picture possibilities and wanted the film as soon as possible. Max scouted around some more and found someone headed in the direction of the office. The roll of film was entrusted to him along with Max's written notes.

Proceed On Way

The excitement over, we proceeded on our way to our original destination. Then Max told me of another routine news photographer's stunt he had used for speedy focusing. When he first sighted through my camera, he found he was unfamiliar with this specific model and couldn't find the rangefinder focusing window. Instead of fumbling or taking time to ask, he set the footage scale and shot a "guess focus' . . . a 15-foot shot, a 6-foot shot, etc.

A little later, he checked the AP photo desk to make sure they had received and developed the film. They had and one picture had been selected. It appeared on the front page of the Philadelphia Bulletin and was being distributed nationally on the AP Wirephoto network.

Not everybody is cut out to be a news photographer, able to shoot pictures, gather facts and battle deadlines in cohesive coordination under stress of an emergency. I understood better, after this experience, why Max won a Pulitzer Prize in 1951 for his coverage of the Korean War.

Best Gifts For Men Usable In Leisure Time

Make it a merry Christmas for the man in your life by devoting a little time and study to his favorite leisure-time pursuits, and the equipment he needs to make them more fun.

If he's a sportsman your gift-shopping job is easy, for no hunting, fishing or golfing enthusiast ever has too much gear. The newest improved rifle, the latest type fishing rod and reel or a special golf club he's been coveting will put him in seventh heaven.

If he's a traveling man, or the sedentary, pipe-and-slippers type, you can't go wrong with gifts of handsome leather. Men vibrate to good leather like women do to furs. A matched set of luggage, soft lounging slippers or good boots will put him in a glowing mood. Add a collector's pipe or a box of fine cigars and you can count on keeping him happily home on winter evenings.

If you must give him clothes, make it a gift certificate, so he can choose his own. Most men really do prefer it that way, whether you think so or not.

If you want your scrambled eggs to be really creamy, cook them over hot water.

SMART WOMEN choose sports or leisure footwear for their men. This wife has both; glove leather chukka boot lined in shearling and a soft moccasin lounge slipper.

WILL TRY PIKE ACTION JAN. 7-9

HARRISBURG (AP)—A suit for 1½ million dollars by the Manu-Mine Research and Development Co., Reading, against the Pennsylvania Turnpike Commission was listed Friday by the Dauphin County Court for hearing Jan. 7-9.

Five separate actions brought by the Reading firm after the Turnpike Commission cancelled two contracts were among 20 scheduled for the three-day court session of state cases.

They involve payments to Manu-Mine for work performed along the Northeast Extension of the Turnpike. Manu-Mine claims the commission refused to pay for nearly 1 million dollars worth of work. The balance represents corporate expenses, penalties and interest.

The commission contends that Manu-Mine won the contracts by fraud early in 1955, and that the work, drilling bore holes to provide surface support for the roadway, was "Almost wholly unnecessary."

FOLKS FORGET "NEGLECTED" MILLIONAIRES

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Pity the poor millionaire. There's almost no place for him to live any more.

That's the authoritative opinion of a fellow who has studied the rich man's housing situation from Beverly Hills to Westchester County.

"The forgotten man of today is the one you would least suspect," says H. B. Layne, 46, head of a big land developing and building firm. "He's the one who desperately needs shelter in the $75,000-and-up home class.

"The truth is that builders are taking care of the low and medium priced home markets but ignoring the luxury market."

Rich Squeezed Out

One of the main reasons for the shortage of fine homes, Layne says, has been the "squeezing out" of the rich from their old dwelling areas.

"New York's Long Island, for instance, has yielded to the pressure of the multitudes, and big old estates have been carved up into medium price developments. It's the same in Evanston, Ill., and Nob Hill, San Francisco.

"Where can the millionaire go if he wants to live with neighbors on his own financial level?

"He can buy other people's houses in the 'good' places like Grosse Point, Mich., or Bedford Village, N. Y. But if he wants to erect his own home, there is practically no land available in established areas for the wealthy."

Plush Home Area

Putting his theory to practice, Layne has taken a sorry looking coastal swamp a few miles north of here and is turning it into one of the plushest home and apartment developments in the nation.

Appropriately, he has named his 550-acre, multi-island community Golden Isles. There's no place here for the guy who wants to pay a thousand bucks down and 60 a month. It costs $12,000 and up just for a lot—with cash on the barrelhead—and nothing worth less than $50,000 can be built on the lot.

Six months after Layne ordered an array of earth-moving and canal-digging machines into the swamp, three seawalled and perfectly manicured islands have been sculptured and 14 more are to be carved out of the morass.

In the center of the first island, Layne built himself a $100,000 home and has moved into it. He also maintains a home in Springfield, Ohio, from where he directs his northern operations. He has built more than 5,000 low-cost dwellings up there.

Quick Response

What has happened so far at Golden Isles indicates that Layne's thinking about super-quality is on the beam. In six months, he has sold three million dollars worth of lots and expects to sell another eight million dollars worth during the winter season.

Charles Schrager, head of the Chicago-based construction company which bears his name, bought half a million dollars worth of land in a single transaction.

"I don't think Golden Isles alone will solve the problem of the homeless wealthy," Layne says. "But it's a step in the right direction."

GROUP THERAPY EFFECTIVE FOR MENTAL CASES

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The Army is sending more and more men with emotional disorders back to duty with a method of treatment only now coming into widespread use: group therapy.

The treatment, as used at Letterman Army Hospital here, involves group discussions of the patients' problems "with most of the therapy done by the other patients."

The method as been developing for perhaps a dozen years.

"In group therapy the patient learns to recognize his debility and assists in determining the method of controlling or offsetting it," explains Lt. Col. W. R. Wilkin, chief of the Clinical Psychology Service at Letterman.

"It is very useful, for it helps a patient to work through his problems, to find himself. It helps to restore him to life as an efficient, stable person; one able to cope with his own problems and those of the world.

Get Emotional Help

"Patients get to know there are others who have problems similar to their own. This gives them emotional support, makes them feel less isolated, less alone."

A group is operated on a "permissive" basis under the tactful guidance of a therapist, with individuals saying or doing anything they want, so long as they don't resort to violence.

This "permissive" approach almost invariably results in some members of the group talking about sex. They belabor the subject excessively, until it is exhausted. This takes time, sometimes several discussion meetings before they drop it.

Talk Personal Problems

Leading questions from the therapist prompt the patients to talk about personal problems, personal outlook. The others enter into it, a surprisingly wise and understanding group despite their own mental conditions.

"I think most of the therapy is done by the other patients," Col. Wilkin said. "If a patient is abusive and belligerently claims there is nothing wrong with him, the others will tell him where he is wrong and why.

Best Gifts For Men Usable In Leisure Time

Make it a merry Christmas for the man in your life by devoting a little time and study to his favorite leisure-time pursuits, and the equipment he needs to make them more fun.

If he's a sportsman your gift-shopping job is easy, for no hunting, fishing or golfing enthusiast ever has too much gear. The newest improved rifle, the latest type fishing rod and reel or a special golf club he's been coveting will put him in seventh heaven.

If he's a traveling man, or the sedentary, pipe-and-slippers type, you can't go wrong with gifts of handsome leather. Men vibrate to good leather like women do to furs. A matched set of luggage, soft lounging slippers or good boots will put him in a glowing mood. Add a collector's pipe or a box of fine cigars and you can count on keeping him happily home on winter evenings.

If you must give him clothes, make it a gift certificate, so he can choose his own. Most men really do prefer it that way, whether you think so or not.

If you want your scrambled eggs to be really creamy, cook them over hot water.

SMART WOMEN choose sports or leisure footwear for their men. This wife has both; glove leather chukka boot lined in shearling and a soft moccasin lounge slipper.

Hollywood's Santa Shuns All Publicity

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Hollywood, where everything is supposed to be make-believe has a real, live Santa Claus who has brought Christmas cheer to thousands of persons throughout the country.

He has another name and another identity, but to those startled persons who find checks signed "Santa Claus" in their mail boxes each Christmas, he's the genuine article, right down to the last whisker and the last jolly laugh.

For the 10 years during which he has conducted his one-man gift-giving campaign Hollywood's Santa has zealously guarded the secret of his identity. A few years ago, however, a writer tracked him down and found behind the white beard and the rumpled red suit a trim, youngish radio executive with a big salary and a novel idea of how it should be spent.

Mistaken Identity

He got the idea back in 1947 when he was staying at a hotel and by mistake received a telephone call intended for a famous movie actor in another room. The caller was a woman who said her daughter was dying and had made a last wish for a puppy. She had seen one that cost $25. Would he give her the money?

He did, and the child recovered.

"That really started me thinking," he recalled later. "I saw for the first time how much good you could do with a few well-placed dollars.

In the decade since then, Santa has sent checks ranging from $20 to $500 to nearly 3,000 persons, most of them what he calls "pressure cases."

"They're people with specific needs," he says. "When you take care of these needs, you put them back in operating condition."

And so each year the checks go out, usually accompanied by a note specifying what the money is for — a wheelchair for a cripple, a typewriter for an invalid who wants to be a writer, a train ticket to reunite families.

He has friends in all parts of the country helping him find the most deserving cases. And he has set up a corporation to handle the distribution of funds, with "Santa Claus" as the official check signer.

Spreads the Word

Besides doing good with his dollars, he has another major aim —trying to get others to follow his head. With each check goes a letter telling of the joy of giving which the recipient is asked to copy and send to "a few outstanding men with big hearts in your town."

That's an apt description of Hollywood's Santa — an outstanding man with a big heart.

"People might misunderstand if I used my own name," he said once in explaining his reluctance to disclose his identity. "In this town they'd think it was all a publicity stunt."

The Christmas Story In Modern Dress:

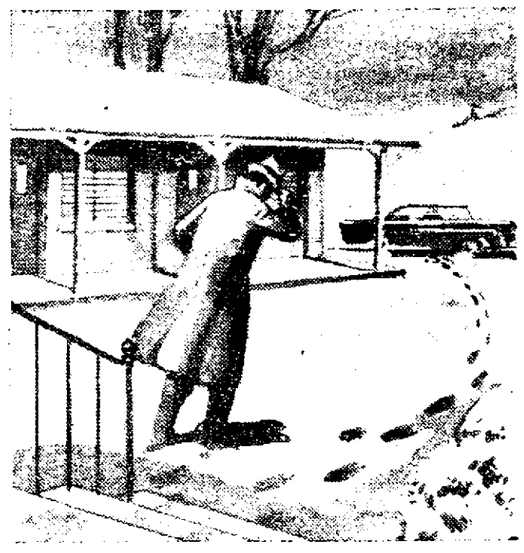
"BEHOLD, AN ANGEL OF THE LORD APPEARED TO HIM. . . ."



"THERE WAS NO PLACE FOR THEM IN THE INN."

"AND THE ANGEL SAID TO THEM, 'BE NOT AFRAID.' . . ."

"When Herod the King heard these things he was troubled and all Jerusalem with him. And when he had gathered all the chief priests and scribes of the people together, he demanded of them where Christ should be born. And they said unto him, in Bethlehem of Judea: for thus it is written of the prophet." —Matthew 2:3-5

The story is ancient, but never old. How Bethlehem became, as Matthew predicted, "not the least among the princes of Judea," because the Christ Child was born there, in a stable, attended only by His parents and a motley gathering of shepherds.

Down through the ages, Bethlehem has lived as a symbol of man's eternal hopes, and Herod has remained one of history's classic villains.

But suppose, for a moment, that the prophets had not chosen Bethlehem. Suppose that the magical star heralding the birth of the Messiah had not appeared in the East for another 2,000 years. What if the ancient sages had not picked the reign of Caesar Augustus for this momentous event, but instead had written here and now into their books of prophecy?

Would a modern Matthew have had a different story to tell? Would today's world have been any more willing to accept the Christ Child and His message of love? Would you be numbered among the shepherds who came to pray or with Herod and his advisors who drove Him out of the land?

Forget, for the time being, the classic story of the Nativity and try to imagine what it would be like if Christ had been born in our own day, if the Angel Gabriel had appeared to a modern Joseph in an electrically equipped carpenter shop.

How Would It Be If It Happened Here?

"WE HAVE SEEN HIS STAR IN THE EAST."

"THE STAR WHICH THEY HAD SEEN . . . WENT BEFORE THEM. . . ."

"AND GOING INTO THE HOUSE THEY SAW THE CHILD WITH MARY, HIS MOTHER."

The night is cold and clear, alive with a million stars, one brighter than all the others. So bright, in fact, that some scientists, bound by their own treatises, refuse to believe what they see in their telescopes.

Through the snowy streets of a nameless city, a man and a woman hurry aimlessly, homeless and helpless. Within her stirs the life that is to become the light of the ages, the hope of the universe, the quintessence of all that is good and holy.

But in the crowded city, steeped in crime and debauchery, diverted by the empty dream of material success, busy at the pleasures that quickly fade, there is no room for these weary wayfarers and the priceless treasure that they bring.

Yet somewhere on the fringes of this fractious civilization, humble men, like the shepherds, are ready and willing to receive the gift from on high. Their number is few, but their zeal is great. Even the forces of despotism and godlessness, abroad on the earth, cannot sway them from their belief in the infinite goodness of the Savior.

They have witnessed the modern miracle of the Nativity and it could be written of them, as Luke wrote of the shepherds, "they returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen."

It didn't happen this way and it never could have. But in the hearts of men Christ is born again each year at Christmas time. Some have anxiously received Him into the domicile of their souls. But many have turned Him out like the innkeeper, "because there was no room at the inn."

As she was being removed in an ambulance, Max headed for the nearest home and asked if he could use the phone. He got cordial cooperation. He called the Associated Press, asked for the picture editor and relayed all the information.

The editor saw the picture possibilities and wanted the film as soon as possible. Max scouted around some more and found someone headed in the direction of the office. The roll of film was entrusted to him along with Max's written notes.

Proceed On Way

The excitement over, we proceeded on our way to our original destination. Then Max told me of another routine news photographer's stunt he had used for speedy focusing. When he first sighted through my camera, he found he was unfamiliar with this specific model and couldn't find the rangefinder focusing window. Instead of fumbling or taking time to ask, he set the footage scale and shot a "guess focus" . . . a 15-foot shot, a 6-foot shot, etc.

A little later, he checked the AP photo desk to make sure they had received and developed the film. They had and one picture had been selected. It appeared on the front page of the Philadelphia Bulletin and was being distributed nationally on the AP Wirephoto network.

Not everybody is cut out to be a news photographer, able to shoot pictures, gather facts and battle deadlines in cohesive coordination under stress of an emergency. I understood better, after this experience, why Max won a Pulitzer Prize in 1951 for his coverage of the Korean War.

Camera News

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

I received a first-hand lesson recently in what to do when a photographer unexpectedly comes across a picture-worthy news event that could appear in your daily newspaper.

A news picture is a perishable commodity whose value decreases rapidly with time, so speed gets top priority. The first thing naturally, is to get the picture even if you have to borrow a camera. In most cases you have to sense and sum up the event in one picture so the choice of camera angle and the instant of shooting is all-important.

Secondly, you must get all pertinent information so that you can identify people and places and know what's happening.

Next you must inform your newspaper or press association, preferably by telephone, about the occurrence and that pictures have been taken. If the editor agrees that the subject matter has possible interest then the final step is to get the pictures to him by messenger or personal delivery.

Smooth Operation

My lesson in how to put this basic chain into smooth operation took place a couple of weekends ago in Philadelphia. I had driven from New York to attend a family gathering. In another car was my younger brother, Max. Suddenly we came across an unusual auto accidents moments after it happened.

One car was on its side and bystanders were lifting the women driver from it as we came up. I had my camera with me but felt a slight reluctance to intrude on the pain of the injured woman as she lay on the grass. This hesitancy undoubtedly assails most amateur photographers when they face an accident or disaster and have to think of it in terms of pictures.

The old pro took over. Max, now supervising editor of Wide World Photos, had not forgotten his experience as an Associated Press news photographer. He took the camera from me, checked the exposure, then intuitively selected his angle. His first shot showed a young lady comforting the victim with wrecked car behind them. He quickly took a couple of other shots then gave me back my camera.

Sought Eye-Witnesses

Max then sought out eye-witnesses and got an account of the accident and the victim's correct name from a policeman, who had arrived in the meantime. The young

New Holiday Dessert Can Be Talk Of Christmas Table

When It Comes Out of the Mold, Get Busy with Brush and Colors

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Here's a new holiday dessert that will be the talk of your table. Luscious to taste and beautiful to behold, it will enchant your family and guests.

We dreamed up this Eggnog Bavarian Cream when we wanted to complement the steamed plum pudding we usually serve at Christmas with a lighter dessert. After we had decided that a dessert made with bottle eggnog and unflavored gelatin would be quick to prepare at this busy time of the year, we were eager to work out an unusual decoration. So we put the eggnog mixture into a copper mold with a raised fruit design. When we turned out the dessert, after it had set in the refrigerator, we brought its design to life this way.

New Art Medium

We applied vegetable food coloring with an artist's paint brush to the raised fruit design the mold had imprinted on the Bavarian Cream. With a tiny bit of water added to the food colorings, it was simple to reproduce the purple of grapes, the red of strawberries and raspberries, the golden yellow shade of a pear streaked with crimson, a rosy-cheeked apple and green leaves. A handsomer sight you've never seen — the beauty of an orchard brought to the table!

You may unmold this Eggnog Bavarian on a plate that is just a little larger than the mold and add no further garnishing. Or you may unmold it on a large flat serving plate — we like to use one of clear glass — and garnish it with real fruit. Clusters of frosted grapes and fresh kumquats with their green leaves make a beautiful border.

BAVARIAN

Ingredients: 2 envelopes unflavored gelatin, ¼ cup sugar, 1 quart bottled non-alcoholic eggnog, ¼ teaspoon nutmeg, 4 teaspoons rum flavoring, 1 cup heavy cream.

Method: Stir gelatin and sugar together thoroughly in the top part of a double boiler. Stir in 1 cup of the cold eggnog. Place over boiling water and stir until gelatin and sugar are dissolved. Remove from heat; add remaining 3 cups eggnog and stir well. Stir in nutmeg and rum flavoring. Chill until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from a spoon. Whip cream and fold in. Turn into a 6-cup mold with a fruit design; chill until firm. Unmold. Makes 10 servings.

To Decorate: Put a few drops of the desired food colorings in small cups; mix with a very small amount of water. Use artist's paint brush to outline and fill in fruit design on Bavarian Cream.

Note: The nutmeg and rum flavoring may be omitted from the Eggnog Bavarian Cream recipe if desired.

FOR EYE-POPPING tastiness, paint the raised fruit design on your molded eggnog Bavarian cream dessert with food coloring.

SECURITY IS TIGHTENED AT MISSILE PLANT

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—The Air Force Friday tightened security another notch at this busy test center where three huge ballistics missiles have been launched this week.

Bird Watch Knoll now is all but off-limits to photographers and newsmen. The spot is four or five miles from the launching sites.

Cameramen photographed from this knoll the 1,500-mile Air Force Thor, which was fired Thursday. They also got pictures of the Air Force Atlas 5,000-mile vehicle and the 1,500-mile Army Jupiter, all of which were launched earlier this week.

It was the eighth test flight of the Douglas built Thor at Canaveral.

The Defense Department in Washington called the launching "successful." It said the Thor "flew its prescribed course and landed in the pre-selected impact area."

The Air Force declined to discuss the security clampdown.

There has been concern among top officers at the test center, however, at the amount of information getting out about the missiles under test here.

WEST POINT, N. Y. (AP) — Army's 150-pound football team enjoyed a banner campaign in its first season of competition. The team won five games and played one tie to win the Eastern intercollegiate 150-pound title. The Cadets scored 210 points and permitted only 41 tallies.

For the outdoor type, here's a sure hit: a featherweight .243 caliber rifle, for deer and small game.

OLD ITALIAN BUILDS STATUE, SPITES NEPHEWS

LA CAVA, Italy (AP)—The bent old man gazed up at the shining marble statue and chuckled.

It was a statue of himself. And 86-year-old Michele DiPrisco figured it gave him the last laugh on his 20 nephews. He paid many, many lire to have it made.

From his seat under the oak tree in front of his house DiPrisco could see the statue plainly. He puffed on his cigar and pondered the ingratitude of his nephews to whom he gave his land and money—only, he says, to be quickly forgotten by them.

DiPrisco says that's why he built the statue.

Many years ago he was a wealthy farmer. But he and his wife had no children, so he gave away most of his property to the sons of his brothers and sisters.

Gave Equal Shares

The old man says he gave each an equal share, and that each became angry because they all wanted more.

DiPrisco kept for himself a few acres on which was located a marble quarry. He and his wife lived comfortably on the rent from the quarry, but DiPrisco wanted to do something to be remembered for in this tiny village 50 miles east of Naples.

La Cava already had a nive bronze statue in its main square. DiPrisco decided it needed another.

He had a sculptor make a life-size statue of himself of marble mined in his quarry. Then he had the statue placed atop a 20-foot marble pyramid on a small piece of ground next to his house. In all it cost about $11,000.

"To give the country civilization,

"Don't let the people wed before they're 25 years old.

"To avoid creating beggars,

"Don't let a stupid woman marry an ignorant man."

DiPrisco educated himself, and acquired a reputation as "the philosopher" from his cronies, mostly poor farmers. He spends most of each day smoking and sitting under the oak tree in his yard.

It is beside the public street so it can be seen by everyone in the village.

"That is my present to posterity," DiPrisco tells passersby.

Around the base of the pyramid and on a wall nearby are chiseled a score of verses written by the old farmer. They give advice to the world, to the Italian government, to fathers and to young couples planning marriage.

Cornish Choir Is Accepting "Honoraries"

GRASS VALLEY, Calif. (AP)—Residents of this historic Sierra gold mining town look forward to each Christmas for two special reasons: Santa Claus and carol-singing by the town's celebrated Cornish Choir.

Founded 80 years ago by miners brought over from Cornwall to work the Mother Lode's deep shaft mines, the all-male choir has been an annual Yuletime feature and is still going strong.

It is assembled about the first of October every year. By December, the 35 to 40 voices have been rehearsed into shape and the group is ready to harmonize its quaint carols on street corners, in churches and over the air.

Sing by Habit

"Cornishmen have always been singing men," says Harold George Sr., a retired music teacher who has been conducting the choir for 40 years.

"Anytime you get a group of Cornishmen together, waiting to go into the mines, they will break out in song."

However, things have changed since those first hardy immigrants from Cornwall on England's southwest coast organized the choir.

Faced with a dwindling supply of native Cornishmen, the choir now accepts "Honorary Cornishmen" of all national backgrounds.

Secondly, the carols are no longer sung in Cornish dialect but in modern English, although the Old World flavor is still preserved.

Threats Employed

Before World War I, there was so much interest the choir was divided into two separate units. Lately, Conductor George has had trouble getting the older men to turn out for the first rehearsals. He once threatened to disband the group, but he confides it was just to pry the laggards from their television sets.

The choir's proudest moment came a few years ago when it did a nationwide radio broadcast from 2,000 feet down a shaft in the nearby Idaho-Maryland mine.

The program had just ended when George was called to a special telephone.

It was a California congressman who had just heard the broadcast and only wanted to say:

"You're coming in fine."

DON'T ATTEMPT TO DECORATE AROUND PAINT

By VIVIAN BROWN
The Associated Press

A big mistake made in home decorating is trying to decorate around a can of paint, says Beatrice West, one of the country's foremost color and design consultants.

"Once you've picked the paint it may be a difficult job to choose the other important furnishings to harmonize with it. One should choose first the items that are going to be permanent, such as the rug.

After that fabrics may be chosen, then the paint. Then, if a mistake is made in the paint selection you can change the walls, whereas if the rug is chosen to harmonize with some odd tint you have put on the walls, you may be stuck with a rug color you do not like."

Put your room plan on paper first, though, she advises. Draw the room to scale, attach swatches of fabric and paint colors to the sketch. Live with the idea for a while before going ahead with the plan.

Consider Blue, Green

"If cool colors are soothing to you and if your room is exposed to much sunshine, consider shades of blue and green. Soft silvery greens are popular now, and these are compatible to blondes and brunettes" says Miss West.

She believes in planning a room around your type. Why not, she says, favor tones from beige to cinnamon if you are the warm type. Cantaloupe is a popular and fashionable hue right now. Beige is a best seller in floor coverings, so you can be right in style with that, also. Combine these with a shade like turquoise from a cool family for chic contrast.

A typical example of how to plan a room around a personality involves a room Miss West planned recently for Diana Layne 14, of Hallendale, Fla.

Aqua And Gold

"Diana is a warm, sparkling [illegible] type with ash-blonde hair, so I chose aqua and gold with white for femininity," says Miss West. "Diana wanted French Provincial furniture, normally too sophisticated for her age, but in aqua and with a deeper blue trim it proved very youthful. The carpet is a deep turquoise shade, and there is a turquoise and white shiki silk mural in an apple tree design by Robert Crowder, behind her bed. The theme is carried out in draperies with an apple blossom print. Citron gold is used for accent in pillows."

When Miss West planned the Layne home, she studied the family before she made her room plans. Then she met with them, showed her plans, color samples and fabric swatches. "Not a single thing was changed in Diana's plan," she says.

She used chintz for Diana's bedspread "because it is young and frivolous" in a girl's room. She put a double skirt around the bed to lend an airy, ballet-skirt touch to the bed. The chintz was used, too, in the closet for garment bags, shelves and to cover coat hangers.

Miss West used mirrors in the lining of the draperies in Diana's room for a dual purpose — to screen out the early morning rays of the sun and keep her room cool.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Exotic dishes from Danish aebkage to Dutch zuurkool, including King Paul of Greece's fish rice and President Eisenhower's beef stew, are among recipes from the 15 North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) nations featured in a new cookbook "The Best of Taste."

Compiled by wives of officers on the staff of NATO's supreme allied commander, Atlantic, Adm. Gerauld Wright, USN, the handsomely illustrated, 256-page, cookbook was launched with the fanfare of a Hollywood premiere at a reception given by the SACLANT staff wives and the American Newspaper Women's Club.

Royalties from the book — already selling like hotcakes — go for international scholarships for students to do research about NATO and allied subjects.

Queen Juliana's Favorite

Besides the king's dish, the book contains a favorite of Queen Juliana of the Netherlands and of Grand Duchess Charlotte of Luxembourg. Vincent Massey, governor general of Canada, contributed "Les Oeufs Chasseur," composed of Madiera sauce, a pheasant, a puree of chestnuts, fresh eggs and truffles. Also from Canada is a dinner menu which provides that everything including dessert can be oven-baked in a 350 degrees temperature for one hour.

From Iceland comes a favorite of President Asgeir Asgeirsson, fish pudding with filling, a recipe for ptarmigans (birds) and a cheese dish made of roquefort, sharp and ramembert cheeses, gelatin, onion, paprika and green coloring. Belgium offers "wild boar chops." Norway "yellow herring salad." There's a "tuna eye canape" from Denmark, "soused herring" from England, "shrimp turnovers" from Portugal, "wedding soup" from Turkey and "okra wood gumbo a la New Orleans," from the United States.

Adm. Wright, whose wife headed the committee producing the book, says in a foreword that NATO wives are working like their husbands "for defense of the seas, for unity of NATO, for preservation of our friendships, for mutual understanding and tolerance of each for all." They believe, he says, that "the appeal to the mind and heart via the palate—a NATO cookbook—will contribute one small iota to the unity, understanding and friendship among the peoples and nations of our great alliance."

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Nine persons were continued in $100 bail Friday after refusing to pay $4 fine and court costs for violation of Pennsylvania's 17794 Blue Law against unnecessary Sunday sales.

All are associated with "Two Guys from Harrison," a discount house in suburban Whitehall Twp. Nineteen others from the store were convicted Wednesday night and also refused to pay fines pending an appeal. All 28 pleaded innocent.

One of the nine convicted on Thursday was George Husbschman, manager of the discount house.

New Holiday Dessert Can Be Talk Of Christmas Table

When It Comes Out of the Mold, Get Busy with Brush and Colors

By CECILY BROWNSTONE

Associated Press Food Editor

Here's a new holiday dessert that will be the talk of your table. Luscious to taste and beautiful to behold, it will enchant your family and guests.

We dreamed up this Eggnog Bavarian Cream when we wanted to complement the steamed plum pudding we usually serve at Christmas with a lighter dessert. After we had decided that a dessert made with bottle eggnog and unflavored gelatin would be quick to prepare at this busy time of the year we were eager to work out an unusual decoration. So we put the eggnog mixture into a copper mold with a raised fruit design. When we turned out the dessert, after it had set in the refrigerator, we brought its design to life this way.

New Art Medium

We applied vegetable food coloring with an artist's paint brush to the raised fruit design the mold had imprinted on the Bavarian Cream. With a tiny bit of water added to the food colorings it was simple to reproduce the purple of grapes, the red of strawberries and raspberries, the golden yellow shade of a pear streaked with crimson, a rosy-cheeked apple and green leaves. A handsomer sight you've never seen — the beauty of an orchard brought to the table!

You may unmold this Eggnog Bavarian on a plate that is just a little larger than the mold and add no further garnishing. Or you may unmold it on a large flat serving plate — we like to use one of clear glass — and garnish it with real fruit. Clusters of frosted grapes and fresh kumquats with their green leaves make a beautiful border.

BAVARIAN

Ingredients: 2 envelopes unflavored gelatin, ¼ cup sugar, 1 quart bottled non-alcoholic eggnog, ¼ teaspoon nutmeg, 4 teaspoons rum flavoring, 1 cup heavy cream.

Method: Stir gelatin and sugar together thoroughly in the top part of a double boiler. Stir in 1 cup of the cold eggnog. Place over boiling water and stir until gelatin and sugar are dissolved. Remove from heat, add remaining 3 cups eggnog and stir well. Stir in nutmeg and rum flavoring. Chill until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from a spoon. Whip cream and fold in. Turn into a 6-cup mold with a fruit design, chill until firm. Unmold. Makes 10 servings.

To Decorate: Put a few drops of the desired food colorings in small cups, mix with a very small amount of water. Use artist's paint brush to outline and fill in fruit design on Bavarian Cream.

Note: The nutmeg and rum flavoring may be omitted from the Eggnog Bavarian Cream recipe if desired.

FOR EYE-POPPING tastiness paint the raised fruit design on your molded eggnog Bavarian cream dessert with food coloring.

SECURITY IS TIGHTENED AT MISSILE PLANT

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—The Air Force Friday tightened security another notch at this busy test center where three huge Atlas missiles have been launched this week.

Bird Watch Knoll now is all but off-limits to photographers and newsmen. The spot is four or five miles from the launching sites.

Cameramen photographed from this knoll the 1,500-mile Air Force Thor, which was fired Thursday. They also got pictures of the Air Force Atlas 5,000-mile vehicle and the 1,500-mile Army Jupiter, all of which were launched earlier this week.

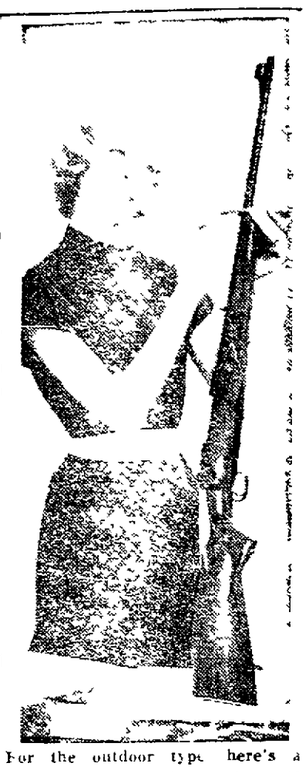
It was the eighth test flight of the Douglas built Thor at Canaveral.

The Defense Department in Washington called the launching successful. It said the Thor "flew its prescribed course and landed in the pre-selected impact area."

The Air Force declined to discuss the security clampdown.

There has been concern among top officers at the test center however, at the amount of information getting out about the missiles under test here.

WEST POINT, N. Y. (AP)—Army's 150-pound football team enjoyed a banner campaign in its first season of competition. The team won five games and played one tie to win the Eastern intercollegiate 150-pound title. The Cadets scored 210 points and permitted only 41 tallies.



For the outdoor type, here's a sure hit, a featherweight .243 caliber rifle, for deer and small game.

Robots Are Xmas Feature In Jap Stores

By RENE-GEORGES INAGAKI

TOKYO (AP) — A midget orchestra which its creator calls the largest robot band ever assembled is packing 'em in on a grand tour of Japan.

As each concert opens the conductor marches in front of his 19-inch high musicians, bows to the audience, turns and starts swinging his baton.

Metallic Musicians

The gold-painted metallic violinists, cellists, trumpeters and drummers, begin "playing" their instruments, moving their arms and heads to the electronic impulses of a complex mechanical brain installed behind the stage. The 17 robots have a three-march repertory.

While they perform, electric bulbs light their eyes.

Toymaker Jiro Aisawa says his band is all booked up for stage appearances throughout the country.

Once a restaurateur, Aisawa decided 31 years ago that there ought to be more interesting occupations.

He turned to the creation of life-like toys.

Now he is one of the brains behind the multi-million dollar Japanese mechanical toy industry.

"In my 31 years as toymaker, I have made 500 robots. I don't call them things, but people," he added.

Aisawa is now busy working on a man-sized fortune-telling robot who will look through a magnifying glass at his juvenile clients' hand lines and make such pronouncements as:

"You should be more obedient to your mother," or, "You ought to study harder."

Aisawa said he also is dreaming about a man-sized violinist who could perform a difficult solo such as a Beethoven violin concerto.

The robot - virtuoso, though preserving the feature and voice of a superman, will be dressed in tail-coat like a concert artist and go on a country-wide, and if possible on a world-wide concert tour.

Aisawa will be his impresario.

Believes Overtime Work Is Essential In Missiles

WHITE SANDS PROVING GROUND, N. M. (AP) — Manpower may be a limiting factor for a projected speedup of the nation's missile program.

A high official at this 40-by-100 mile mountain-ringed rocket and missile range says "we have vacancies now. I'm not sure we can get the people for a crash program."

He spoke, of course, of the highly trained scientific and technical personnel needed for the complex job of missile research development and testing.

The only answer to the shortage appears to be greatly expanded use of overtime involving manpower already on hand.

Overtime here—as in other rocket bases — was slashed in mid-summer. Restored, it was limited to actual operations on the integrated range, used by White Sands, Holloman Air Force Missile Development Center, and the Army at Fort Bliss, Tex. Even restored, the overtime on the integrated range operations has been cut in half.

One more factor may be an important one in any speedup involving this 300 million dollar base deep in the southern New Mexico dessert.

Night Launchings Requested

Military officials here have repeatedly asked permission for night firings. The New Mexico State Highway Commission, which has primary control over U. S. Highway 70-80 which traverses the southern portion of the range, has just as repeatedly refused permission to have the highway closed for night firings. The road must be closed during any firings from White Sands itself.

There are roughly four families of rocket in various stages of development here. They are the surface-to-surface and research vehicles.

Included in the surface-to-air family are the newly-unwrapped Talos, the Nike-Hercules, Nike-Ajax, and the Hawk. Those classified as research vehicles include the Viking Hi, Wasp, Aerobee Hi, Asp, and the Nike-Cajun. The Pogo-Hi is one of the newly developed radar targets, Surface-to-surface missiles include the Redstone, Dart, Honest John, LaCrosse, Little John and the Corporal. The Sergeant, a bigger brother of the Corporal, is still under tests and security wraps.

1,784 Firings Per Year

The full capacity of the integrated range controlled at White Sands is as yet unknown. Three years ago military chiefs were told that the maximum the proving ground could handle was 600 firings per year. In 1956 there was a total of 1,784 missiles launched. This year the figure is expected to reach about 2,000. Experts say that with proper scheduling and proper training, the range can handle many times that number.

With charges and countercharges of bickering between the services over the missile program, unification is an accomplished fact — a reality — here. All four services make use of the integrated range and its vast facilities and instrumentation on an equal basis.

AF SAYS EARTH MEN COULD LIVE ON PLANET MARS

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP)—Earth men could live on the planet Mars, but they would need to stay in space suits all the time, says an Air Force scientist.

But other forms of life might exist on Mars and even flourish, says Dr. Herbertus Strughold of the Department of Space Medicine at Randolph Air Force Base. Dr. Strughold, a former German aviation medicine specialist, has authored a book on Mars.

He has conducted research on his favorite planet at the Air Force laboratory here. He says soil samples tested show that certain microscopic organism can live under conditions like those on Mars.

Air Conditions Similar

The atmospheric conditions on Mars are nearer to those on Earth than on any other planet in this universe, but are hardly appropriate for a summer resort.

Night temperatures run 70 degrees below zero or colder, Dr. Strughold says. During the day, certain parts of the planet warm up to about 70 degrees.

Dr. Strughold says man could stay alive on Mars, but he would have to wear a space suit continually because atmospheric pressure would be about like that found at 50,000 feet above the earth's sea level.

Water, Dr. Strughold believes, apparently is scarce on Mars.

Plant Grow In Sample Soil

In a recent experiment, Dr. Strughold took soil samples from the Painted Desert of Arizona, from the Grand Canyon and from the icy slopes of Mt. McKinley in Alaska. Such soil contains nitrogen loving bacteria, considered most likely to be at home on Mars.

The samples were put in a deep freezer at night and allowed to warm to room temperature during the day.

"After a week or two, certain micro-organisms disappeared completely," Dr. Strughold says. "Others flourished."

The green color on Mars as observed by astronomers may be something other than vegetation as we know it, Dr. Strughold believes.

Life Might Exist

But he says there is a distinct possibility that some form of life does exist on the planet.

"Life has an enormous capacity to adjust," he says.

The research Dr. Strughold is conducting is aimed at the distant day when men may travel to Mars. But only a part of his time is spent on Martian problems. His immediate concern is keeping U. S. airmen alive in the upper stratosphere and returning them to earth safely.

Robots Are Xmas Feature In Jap Stores

By RENE-GEORGES INAGAKI

TOKYO (AP) — A midget orchestra which its creator calls the largest robot band ever assembled is packing 'em in on a grand tour of Japan.

As each concert opens the conductor marches in front of his 19-inch high musicians, bows to the audience, turns and starts swinging his baton.

Metallic Musicians

The gold-painted metallic violinists, cellists, trumpeters and drummers, begin "playing" their instruments, moving their arms and heads to the electronic impulses of a complex mechanical brain installed behind the stage. The 17 robots have a three-march repertory.

While they perform, electric bulbs light their eyes.

Toymaker Jiro Aisawa says his band is all booked up for stage appearances throughout the country.

Once a restaurateur, Aisawa decided 31 years ago that there ought to be more interesting occupations.

He turned to the creation of life-like toys.

Now he is one of the brains behind the multi-million dollar Japanese mechanical toy industry.

"In my 31 years as toymaker, I have made 500 robots. I don't call them things, but people," he added.

Aisawa is now busy working on a man-sized fortune-telling robot who will look through a magnifying glass at his juvenile clients' hand lines and make such pronouncements as:

"You should be more obedient to your mother," or, "You ought to study harder."

Aisawa said he also is dreaming about a man-sized violinist who could perform a difficult solo such as a Beethoven violin concerto.

The robot - virtuoso, though preserving the feature and voice of a superman, will be dressed in tail-coat like a concert artist and go on a country-wide, and if possible on a world-wide concert tour.

Aisawa will be his impresario.

GREENFIELD, Mass. (AP) — If Greenfield mail carriers look downcast, don't feel sorry for them. They asked for it.

Postmaster Clifford J. Akey informed selectmen that carriers had volunteered to report uneven or broken sidewalks while making their rounds.

Haste, Snow, Conviviality Time Of Peril

By NED H. DEARBORN
President, National Safety Council

I have been asked to put together a few rules on how to survive Christmas.

The very suggestion is shocking, isn't it? How to survive Christmas! You'd think Christmas was a time of war, instead of a period devoted to "Peace on Earth, Good Will Toward Men."

Nevertheless, the cold facts are that the Christmas holiday season is one of the most dangerous periods of the year—both on the highway and in the home.

Why?

Well, for one reason because of the rush of the season. People are going full tilt. They are shopping, planning and attending Yuletide parties. They are planning their Christmas holiday trips to Aunt Minnie's, doing a thousand and one things — including that last-minute job of sending out hundreds of Christmas cards which should have gone out weeks before.

Dangerous Season

Then there is the weather—snow, sleet, rain, fog, darkness, slippery roads. A perfect set-up for traffic accidents.

And, let's face it, there is Yuletide conviviality. Too many people drink too much—and then try to drive. Drinking is one of the biggest causes of Christmas holiday traffic accidents.

Well, then, how can we come safely through all these pitfalls without becoming a recluse or a killjoy?

Here are 10 simple rules to help you survive Christmas and make it merry instead of tragic:

ON THE HIGHWAY

1. Start early on your holiday trip, and take it easy.
2. Don't drive if you drink.
3. Be courteous and thoughtful to others. Try smiling at another driver. Watch his amazement—and his response!
4. Don't insist on making the trip if the weather or the roads tell you that you really shouldn't go.
5. Slow down by at least 10 miles from what you would normally regard as a safe speed. This is a concession to the weather, to the convivial season and to heavy traffic.

IN THE HOUSE

1. Keep your Christmas tree well watered—and keep the tree away from sources of heat.
2. Turn out the tree lights when you leave the house—or even when you leave the room for an extended period.
3. Don't overload the electric outlets. You don't have to be an expert to know that a blown fuse means an overload.
4. Inspect your home for icy steps and walks, and other hazards. Even if you can remember to dodge such booby traps, your guests may not.
5. Be careful not to place Christmas decorations and evergreen branches near your fireplace or around candles. Be extra careful of any fire hazards during the Christmas season.

Remember: Any accident to any member of the household can spoil Christmas for the entire family. It's really worth a little trouble to stay safe.

Santa and the STRONG BOY

by LUCRECE HUDGINS BEALE

SYNOPSIS: Richard subdues the Phantom and takes the diamond back to Santa. Santa says he cannot now give Richard courage and wisdom for he has proved that he already has them.

CHAPTER 16
SANTA LAND

"What does it all mean?" asked Richard in confusion. "Why do you say I am already brave and wise? I got the things you asked for but I was afraid all the time."

"It is a wise man who knows when to be afraid," said Santa. "And it a very brave man indeed who goes forward when he would far rather turn and run."

"You mean, then, that I am now a truly proper prince?"

"You are," smiled Santa. "And I shall give you two gifts to help you remember always the proper prince you are."

He took the golden thread Richard had brought him from the Green Ghoul. He wove a ring with it and placed it on Richard's finger.

"Wear this and wisdom will always be yours."

Then he plucked the black diamond from the Phantom's ring and set it in the handle of a silver dagger.

"Carry this and never be afraid again."

Patrick Tweedleknees sat up on the floor. "As for strength," said he, "you're already the strongest creature on earth, I ought to know."

Richard and Tweedleknees played with the toys.

"How do you know?" asked the prince.

Santa laughed and put his arm around Richard's shoulders.

"Tweedleknees was both the Green Ghoul and the Phantom of the Sea," he told the astonished boy. "You see, he can change his shape at will and so he made himself into those awful creatures in order to test you."

"What a prince!" repeated Tweedleknees and collapsed again on the floor.

"Now," said Santa. "Let us go to the workshops for tomorrow is Christmas Eve and there is much work to be done."

"Christmas Eve!" exclaimed Richard. "King Ignatz of Ketchikan swore to conquer my father's kingdom by Christmas Day. I must hurry back to my own land at once!"

"I have thought of that," said Santa. "Word has come to me that there is no joy in Mitzenpoo this Christmas season. King Ignatz is indeed at the gates. The people are in distress and not one child in Mitzenpoo will hang a stocking tomorrow night."

"I shall fly!" cried Richard.

"Wait and fly with me," said Santa. "Now, while I see to the loading of the sleigh you go to the toy shops. For the rest of your life you will be prince and king. Tonight be just a boy."

Richard gladly did as Santa told him and went off with Tweedleknees. What a fairy land of toys he found in the toy shop!

Joyfully he climbed on a red bicycle and with Tweedleknees on the handlebars whizzed round and round the shop. Then he tried out an enormous harmonica. Tweedleknees stomped and sang and Richard played a merry jig.

Then they took a speed sled out into the snow and zoomed down the highest hills, shouting and laughing all the way.

They returned to the shop in time for supper of blueberry pie, molasses cookies and coconut cake.

After that they played cheekers and dominoes and tick-tack-toe. They threw darts and slid own bamboo slides and shot toy arrows at toy targets.

So the hours sped by and suddenly it was Christmas Eve and time to go.

With a sigh Ridhard left the toys. He and Santa climbed into Santa's loaded sleigh.

"Goodbye, prince!" shouted Tweedleknees. "Come again!"

"I will," promised Richard.

But he knew in his heart he never would because forever after he would have to be a proper prince of Mitzenpoo.

(Tomorrow: A Merry Christmas To All)

GIRL WINS ROLE BY ACTING AS A STREET WALKER

BERLIN (AP) — Miss Geri Hamburg, a Chicago-born soprano who came to Berlin on a U. S. government Fulbright study fellowship, has landed a movie part portraying a street walker.

The exotic Miss Hamburg is to appear in Erich Maria Remarque's film story "There's a Time to Love," co-starring John Gavin and Lisa Pulver.

Universal-International is shooting the World War II story in West Berlin.

Miss Hamburg says Director Douglas Sirk picked her from among 53 applicants for the role of the prostitute because she took the trouble to "look the part" when applying.

"I consider it a tribute to my acting that he didn't think I was acting," she said with a smile.

It wasn't until Sirk praised her "authentic" protrayal that Miss Hamburg jolted the director by disclosing that she had been a Fullbright scholar.

Gets Recommendation

On the recommendation of Metropolitan Opera Conductor Wilfred Pelletier, Miss Hamburg came to Berlin three years ago to study voice under Frida Leider. When her fellowship ended, she stayed on to work in films and the theater.

Miss Hamburg is a graduate of New York's Julliard School of Music. She sang under the direction of the late Arturo Toscanini in the school's production of "Othello" and portrayed Lady Tyang in the Broadway production of "The King and I" as understudy to Dorothy Sarnoff.

She first attracted attention in America as the female lead in a hit production of "The Beggar's Opera" at Carnegie Hall.

Miss Hamburg started off young in the entertainment business. As a child she was one of radio's famous Quiz Kids.

Nowadays, on Universal's Berlin lot where Fulbright scholars are rather uncommon, she still is looked upon as something of a Quiz Kid.

BATHROOMS BUILT FOR SMALL COST

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Beauty Editor

Women adore pretty bathrooms, and every woman secretly wishes she could have one like the Romans enjoyed.

An attractive bath-dressing area may be engineered at little cost and with a minimum of effort in a small space. One displayed recently involved fabric and companion wallpaper in a tile pattern in shades of pink, olive and turquoise, and a do-it-yourself dressing table that was suspended from the ceiling.

The shower curtains were made by taking the straight piece of fabric, hemming and attaching it to the shower rod with large, brass drapery clips, so that no grommets were needed in the curtain. A clear shower curtain was used behind the print to give the necessary protection.

Space Saver

The inexpensive dressing table unit is a space saver and easy to make. Select a shelf in the size desired of a light weight plywood or hardboard, cover it with marbelized paper (the kind that goes on at contact) and suspend it from the ceiling with a decorative cord.

Picture cord will do the trick. Or attractive chains to match plumbing fixtures might be more desirable. Fasten the cord to the shelf on each side with small brads. Then suspend the shelf from the ceiling.

One of the new type towel racks that resembles a music stand is ideal for the small bathroom set up because it doesn't take up too much space. Or use one of the towel cabinets that come in a combination of brass and glass, and offers support for the hanging table.

Balanced Unit

One of these on either side of the vanity if it can be obtained in the same width makes a good balanced dressing table unit.

A matching print may be used to cover a seat pad if you like, and companian wallpaper on a small waste basket.

Try chopped celery and cucumber in egg-salad mixtures.

"Now," said Santa "Let us go to the workshops for tomorrow is Christmas Eve and there is much work to be done"

"Christmas Eve!" exclaimed Richard "King Ignatz of Ketchikan swore to conquer my father's kingdom by Christmas Day I must hurry back to my own land at once!"

"I have thought of that," said Santa "Word has come to me that there is no joy in Mitzenpoo this Christmas season King Ignatz is indeed at the gates The people are in distress and not one child in Mitzenpoo will hang a stocking tomorrow night"

"I shall fly!" cried Richard "Wait and fly with me" said Santa "Now, while I see to the loading of the sleigh you go to the toy shops For the rest of your life you will be prince and king Tonight be just a boy"

Richard gladly did as Santa told him and went off with Tweedleknees What a fairy land of toys he found in the toy shop!

Joyfully he climbed on a red bicycle and with Tweedleknees on the handlebars whizzed round and round the shop Then he tried out an enormous harmonica Tweedleknees stomped and sang and Richard played a merry jig

Then they took a speed sled out into the snow and zoomed down the highest hills, shouting and laughing all the way

They returned to the shop in time for supper of blueberry pie, molasses cookies and coconut cake

After that they played checkers and dominoes and tick-tack-toe They threw darts and slid down bamboo slides and shot toy arrows at toy targets

So the hours sped by and suddenly it was Christmas Eve and time to go

With a sigh Richard left the toys He and Santa climbed into Santa's loaded sleigh

"Goodbye, prince!" shouted Tweedleknees "Come again!"

"I will," promised Richard But he knew in his heart he never would because forever after he would have to be a proper prince of Mitzenpoo

(Tomorrow: A Merry Christmas To All)

Richard and Tweedleknees played with the toys.

GIRL WINS ROLE BY ACTING AS A STREET WALKER

BERLIN (AP) — Miss Geri Hamburg, a Chicago-born soprano who came to Berlin on a U S government Fulbright study fellowship, has landed a movie part portraying a street walker.

The exotic Miss Hamburg is to appear in Erich Maria Remarque's film story "There's a Time to Love," co-starring John Gavin and Lisa Pulver

Universal-International is shooting the World War II story in West Berlin

Miss Hamburg says Director Douglas Sirk picked her from among 53 applicants for the role of the prostitute because she took the trouble to "look the part" when applying

"I consider it a tribute to my acting that he didn't think I was acting" she said with a smile

It wasn't until Sirk praised her "authentic" protrayal that Miss Hamburg jolted the director by disclosing that she had been a Fulbright scholar.

Gets Recommendation

On the recommendation of Metropolitan Opera Conductor Wilfred Pelletier, Miss Hamburg came to Berlin three years ago to study voice under Frida Leider. When her fellowship ended, she stayed on to work in films and the theater

Miss Hamburg is a graduate of New York's Juilliard School of Music She sang under the direction of the late Arturo Toscanini in the school's production of "Othello" and portrayed Lady Tyang in the Broadway production of "The King and I" as understudy to Dorothy Sarnoff

She first attracted attention in America as the female lead in a hit production of "The Beggar's Opera" at Carnegie Hall

Miss Hamburg started out young in the entertainment business As a child she was one of radio's famous Quiz Kids

Nowadays on Universal's Berlin lot where Fulbright scholars are rather uncommon, she still is looked upon as something of a Quiz Kid

BATHROOMS BUILT FOR SMALL COST

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Beauty Editor

Women adore pretty bathrooms, and every woman secretly wishes she could have one like the Romans enjoyed

An attractive bath-dressing area may be engineered at little cost and with a minimum of effort in a small space One displayed recently involved fabric and companion wallpaper in a tile pattern in shades of pink, olive and turquoise, and a do-it-yourself dressing table that was suspended from the ceiling

The shower curtains were made by taking the shaggy piece of fabric, hemming and attaching it to the shower rod with large brass drapery clips so that no grommets were needed in the curtain A clear shower curtain was used behind the print to give the necessary protection

Space Saver

The inexpensive dressing table unit is a space saver and easy to make Select a shelf in the size desired of a light weight plywood or hardboard cover it with marouflized paper (the kind that goes on at contact) and suspend it from the ceiling with a decorative cord

Picture cord will do the trick Or attractive chains to match plumbing fixtures might be more desirable Fasten the cord to the shelf on each side with small brads Then suspend the shelf from the ceiling.

One of the new type towel racks that resembles a music stand is ideal for the small bathroom set up because it doesn't take up too much space Or use one of the towel cabinets that come in a combination of brass and glass and offers support for the hanging table

Balanced Unit

One of these on either side of the vanity if it can be obtained in the same width makes a good balanced dressing table unit

A matching print may be used to cover a seat pad if you like, and companion wallpaper on a small waste basket.

Try chopped celery and cucumber in egg-salad mixtures
